President Raps Critics For 'Political Potshots'

BOSTON (AP) — President Ford called criticism of his high-level personnel changes "domestic political potshots" and vowed Friday to maintain a policy of detente and strong national defense.

He said he wanted to put to rest speculation that the dismissal of Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger means a change of direction.

"I want to be absolutely sure that these domestic political potshots are not heard 'round the world," Ford said. "Our allies and our adversaries must not be confused or misled."

The President then attacked congressional cuts in the defense budget, saying that at the rate cuts are being made, by the year 2000, "The United States defense will be reduced to one soldier carrying one rifle—just like the statue at Concord bridge" where the American Revolution began.

Ford told the New England Council that he deplores congressional efforts to cut his defense budget and called on the full Senate to restore at least $2 billion of the $7 billion in defense cuts proposed Thursday by its appropriations committee.

The President said his administration remains committed to both a policy of detente with the Soviet Union and a strong defense, declaring that "to make detente succeed, we must have a strong defense."

"There is not now, there has never been and there will not be as long as I am President, any softness or weakness in my administration on the subject of the national defense of the United States and its vital security interests at home and abroad," Ford said.

Schlesinger had strongly opposed cuts in the defense budget. In a statement Friday Schlesinger said a strong military power is "the underpinning of detente."

In response to a question in Springfield, Ford said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will continue to have "tremendous influence" on foreign policy but that under the reorganization "other voices" will also be heard.

As Ford shook hands with members of a friendly crowd that greeted him at Westover Air Force Base outside of Springfield, a small boy shoved an American flag at the President and it struck him on the forehead.

As Ford exclaimed, "Ooh," and bent down, a Secret Service agent grabbed the flag from the child and threw it down declaring, "Get that thing out of here."

Ford's national security speech came at one of several appearances in Massachusetts. That state has a March 2 presidential primary that comes just one week after the Feb. 24 opener in New Hampshire, and the speech appeared aimed at stilling a conservative outcry against the Schlesinger dismissal.

At the same time, Ford appeared to be trying to demonstrate his continuing commitment to a strong defense policy to the Chinese at a time when there has been speculation that Peking's concern over U.S.-Soviet detente may be jeopardizing his planned trip there later this month.

Before his Boston appearances, which included three receptions expected to raise $100,000 for the state's Republicans, Ford spoke in Springfield, Mass., to a meeting of the New England Society of Newspaper Editors, which had been closed by the White House to all representatives of the press except society members.

The evening speaker to the editors was one of the nine Democrats who hopes to replace Ford in the White House, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who renewed his criti-

Judge Rules Patti Competent For Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge declared Patricia Hearst mentally competent Friday to stand trial on bank robbery charges. The judge said she appeared perfectly able to assist in her own defense.

U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter said his studies of psychiatrists' reports had provided "a psychiatric profile of what is clearly a troubled young woman."

But he said that none of the four experts who examined Miss Hearst had convinced him there was any evidence of "psychosis or any serious mental disease or defect in the defendant. ... "

Carter said in his written decision that Miss Hearst had openly discussed the bank robbery charges with the psychiatrists who examined her.

He quoted one doctor as saying she "demonstrated full understanding of the significance of the bank robbery charges, the legal consequences ... and the possible penalties if she were convicted."

The same psychiatrist, Dr. Seymour Pollack, was quoted as saying the newspaper heiress still has difficulty relating "the emotionally disturbing events' of her 19 months with the Symbionese Liberation Army. But even on this subject, Pollack said she is "not fatally impaired with respect to the issue of mental competency to stand trial."

The judge said he was not ruling out the possibility that Miss Hearst needs psychiatric therapy, but he said the defense already is permitted to provide such aid to her in her jail cell. Her lawyers have repeatedly contended that Miss Hearst should be transferred to a private psychiatric facility.

One of Miss Hearst's attorneys, Albert Johnson, said, "I'm not surprised that he found her competent but I was surprised by his ruling on psychiatric treatment.

"I felt that after the judge had read the reports he could have no other decision but to allow her psychiatric care in a private hospital," Johnson added.

Carter set next Monday as the day for Miss Hearst to enter her plea to the bank robbery charges, saying "a finding of competency to stand trial requires that the proceedings go forward."

Although Carter did not mention the new federal Speedy Trial Act in his nine-page memorandum, it appeared that he was seeking to comply with its provisions. The act requires that a defendant be brought to trial 90 days after arraignment.

As interpreted by the prosecution, this would mean Miss Hearst's trial would begin no later than Dec. 27.

Lamm Will Get Tough On State Expense Rules

By RAY BROUSSARD
Gazette Telegraph
Staff Writer

DENVER (GT) — Gov. Dick Lamm said he "got tough" Friday and began immediately implementing the recommendations of the Denver Grand Jury regarding tightening of state fiscal rules and procedures, as well as ensuring against travel expenses discrepancies such as those which resulted in a probe of two top state officials.

Those officials, Lt. Gov. George Brown, a Democrat, and Sen. Ted Strickland, R-Westminster—the former acting lieutenant governor—ultimately were cleared of all criminal violation implications, and Friday Strickland made sure everyone understood that he had been completely exonerated of all charges.

At a news conference Strickland released a letter from Denver Dist. Atty. Dale Tooley, who headed the investigation of Brown and the former acting lieutenant governor. Making sure that the news media understood that he had "personally paid" to have the Tooley letter duplicated into a number of copies, Strickland said that:

"I called the news conference to show that the conclusions reached by Tooley and the grand jury should get the same kind of airing in the news media that was given when I was first called up for investigation of my travel expenses."

The Tooley letter to Strickland said that "the grand jury's report has exonerated you, and has found no substantial, intentional or significant violations of any rules or laws. However, I think it is appropriate to add my own conclusions, based upon a review of all the evidence."

Continuing, the letter said that "the conduct of your (Strickland's) office as acting lieutenant governor was clearly within the rules and the law. More than that, the evidence was abundantly clear in showing that you could have properly charged expenditures to the state, which you declined to do. When in doubt, your decisions were made to the benefit of the state, rather than to your personal benefit."

Lastly, the letter said that "some people might believe that just because there was an inquiry, there might have been wrongdoing. This letter is intended to help eliminate any such questions, and to that end you may use this letter however you see fit."

Saying that the letter from Tooley was unsolicited, Strickland said that "when the investigation of my travel expenses first went to the grand

House Committee Approves Tax Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee approved on Friday a multibillion-dollar tax cut bill by making permanent some temporary reductions and imposing new ones.

However, the measure did not set a ceiling on federal spending, a provision that President Ford has said is essential to win his signature.

The bill was approved by a 21 to 16 vote.

The biggest benefit to individual taxpayers is a $12.7-billion plan to make permanent the 1975 law's temporary hikes in minimum and maximum standard deductions. The bill also creates a new 2 per cent tax credit on the first $12,000 of annual taxable income. This will give individuals a $2.6-billion tax break in 1976 when compared to 1975.

Both mean that a single taxpayer with an adjusted gross income of $15,000 who paid $2,549 in 1974 taxes and $2,519 in 1975 taxes would pay $2,315 in 1976 taxes. This assumes deductible personal expenses of 17 per cent of income.

For businesses, the bill continues through 1980 a boost in the investment tax credit to 10 per cent, which 1975 law did for 1975 and 1976 and extends through 1977 a corporate tax rate adjustment which cut business taxes in 1975.

The committee also agreed to recommend that the House be allowed to vote on a series of amendments to raise Treasury revenues.

Over-all, for 1976, the bill will gain $750 million for the Treasury.

The legislation makes a series of other major changes in the nation's tax laws.

These include:

—Making tax benefits for baby-sitters or other care of children under age 15 to four million working parents by creating a new tax credit to replace an existing itemized tax deduction currently used by two million taxpayers.

—Hiking taxes on higher-income persons by assorted changes in the so-called minimum tax on the rich, in an effort to end many cases of wealthy Americans finding legal ways of avoiding paying regular taxes.

—Curbing the use of various types of so-called tax shelters in areas ranging from real estate and farming to oil and gas projects.

The House also will have a chance to remove from the bill a controversial provision which reportedly contains a special multimillion-dollar tax refund for Texas businessman H. Ross Perot.

This feature would provide tax refunds from the Treasury for some high-income investors including those who lost in last year's stock market decline.

The Wall Street Journal reported Friday that this feature "represents what may be the most gigantic tax person as Perot, the canny and colorful Texas businessman who lately has suffered some huge business reversals."

Ford Says He Will Enter Three Presidential Primaries

BOSTON (AP) — President Ford said Friday night he definitely plans to enter the first three 1976 presidential primaries. And he vowed to remain in the race until he captures the GOP presidential nomination at the party's Kansas City, Mo., convention next August.

Speaking to a $100-a-person reception to raise funds for the Massachusetts Republican party, Ford delivered what amounted to a campaign speech for himself.

The stop was one of three fund-raising receptions on a trip whose costs were being paid partly by the government and partly by the Republican National Committee, but not by Ford's own campaign committee.

But he made what Deputy Press Secretary William Greener said was the first definite statement that he would indeed enter the Feb. 24 New Hampshire primary, the March 2 Massachusetts primary and the March 9 Florida primary against his conservative challenger Ronald Reagan.

"Your president's going to enter the primary in Massachusetts, he is going to campaign in Massachusetts, and I think he is going to win in Massachusetts," Ford said to cheers from a crowd of several hundred.

"I am going to be in New Hampshire, Florida and we're going to go right down to the wire in the convention in Kansas City and win there, too," he added.

"I've never been in a ballgame I didn't play until the last minute of the last quarter," the President said.

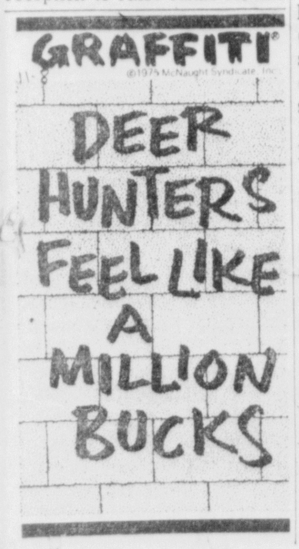

In what appeared to be a comment aimed at the feeling among some politicians that Reagan would be a weaker candidate against the Democrats than he would, Ford said: "We want a Republican candidate who can win.

"We want a Republican candidate who can work with the Congress," said the one time House Republican leader.

The $100 reception in the Boston Museum of Science followed an earlier closed reception at which guests paid $500 apiece or $600 a couple.

Before returning to Washington, Ford attended a third reception in the international departure lounge of Logan International Airport, where the tab was $15 a person.

Before turning to the political part of his day, the President addressed the New England Society of Newspaper Editors in Springfield and delivered a strong defense of his national security policies to a meeting of the New England Council in Boston.

'Squeaky' Evicted As Her Trial Opens

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme was twice banished from the courtroom Friday after unsuccessfully trying to enter a guilty plea and have convicted mass murderer Charles Manson testify at her trial on charges of trying to kill President Ford.

U.S. District Judge Thomas MacBride said he would allow Miss Fromme back in the courtroom Monday if she behaved. But he said he will not allow her to act as her own attorney for the rest of the trial.

With Miss Fromme absent from the courtroom, the prosecution called Secret Service Agent Larry Buendorf who testified about the alleged attempt on Ford's life.

Buendorf showed the jury how he grabbed a loaded .45-caliber pistol from Miss Fromme two feet from Ford last Sept. 5 outside the state Capitol where Ford was shaking hands with bystanders.

As he held her, Buendorf said, "I could hear her talking, yelling, 'It didn't go off, it

N.Y. Default Won't Cause Big Panic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chance of a financial panic seizing the nation if New York City defaults on its obligations is extremely small, Alan Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said Friday.

Greenspan said there were some risks posed by the financial crisis facing the city, but discounted predictions that the economy would be seriously injured by the city's fiscal collapse.

Greenspan testified before the House Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs subcommittee. His analysis was partially supported by F. Gerard Adams, a professor at the Wharton School of Finance.

"It is not probable such a crisis would occur. But it's possible," Adams said.

Haskell Wants Fuel Bill Altered for State Protection

WASHINGTON — Unless the synthetic fuel bill is altered to give Colorado some protection, Sen. FloydH askell, D, will demand that federal loan guarantees be taken out of the bill, he declared this week.

Haskell is a member of the conference committee made up of members of the House and Senate who will begin working on the bill next week.

The synthetic fuel bill has passed both house and the joint conference committee now in working out the differences.

The bill officially is the appropriations bill for the Energy and Development Administration (ERDA).

The Senate version of the bill includes $6 billion for guaranteed loans for development of synthetic fuels. The House did not have such a provision in the bill it passed, and it is up to the members of the joint committee to resolve that difference.

"Colorado Governor Lamm and I have agreed to five basic guarantees the bill must contain before it is acceptable to us. They are reasonable demands and if we can't get them, I will vote against the bill," Haskell said. The guarantees are:

—State concurrence is required for each project with a federally guaranteed loan. But the ERDA administrator can override the state's disapproval if required by the national interest.

—No project should be approved unless the state is assured federal funds — whether through loans, grants or otherwise—will be available to pay costs of direct and indirect impacts from the projects.

—Projects should be only as large as necessary to demonstrate the commercial feasibility of the process involved.

—State and local governments must be actively involved in planning the selection and evaluation, review and monitoring of any project.

—All projects must be subject to all state and local laws.

"I am delighted with the thoughtful and responsible position of Gov. Lamm and the others members of the National Governors' Conference on synthetic fuels development," said Haskell. "Their backing will help me get the change we need in this bill in conference."

Armstrong Criticizes Latest Cabinet Shifts

AURORA—"Four secretaries of defense in less than three years are too many," Rep. William Armstrong said in remarks prepared for delivery at the annual Mess Night of Colorado's Naval officers at Fitzsimons Friday.

"While the latest series of Cabinet shifts may only represent a continuation of the President's efforts to consolidate his control of the administration," Armstrong noted, "the rapid turnover of secretaries of defense undercuts civilian control of the military and does not allow the secretary time to develop policy and assure a continuity of programs. At a time when procurement decisions are highly technical, when a single weapons system may cost a billion dollars over ten years, this game of cabinet-level musical chairs can only increase costs and give more power to high ranking military officers who may spend an entire career in one specialty.

"I don't begrudge the President's right to his "own team" in key positions. Nor do I intend to criticize secretary-designate Rumsfeld. But the latest shifts in DOD personnel again call into question basic national defense issues:

"Are we being deluded about Soviet intentions?"

"Are U.S. defense preparations adequate?"

"The departure of Secretary Schlesinger raises fundamental questions about detente. Like Secretary Schlesinger, I believe that detente can be a useful tool of peace. . .only if the U.S. sticks to its guns. Detente was based on mutual power and respect, and the Soviets have shown respect only for power. . .not morality.

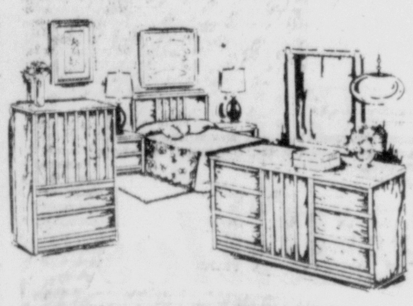

"Trusting the U.S.S.R. is like trusting a grizzly. Since World War II, the Soviets have only kept two of the more than 26 summit agreements and treaties which they have pledged to honor. . .three if we count the SALT I talks. In view of this record, it seems to me we ought to approach the SALT and the whole range of detente issues without any false hopes or naive conceptions about how far the Soviet Union can be trusted.

Timothy Says State Would Benefit From Scholarships

Benefits from funding of scholarships at private colleges would accrue to the state of Colorado, according to the president of Mountain Bell.

Robert K. Timothy said Friday that scholarships funded by the state for students at private colleges here would help provide the state with qualified graduates to further improve the quality of work in both private and public sectors.

He spoke to the annual dinner of the President's Council of Colorado College, meeting at the Broadmoor Hotel.

A bill to create a program of state scholarships for private-college students failed narrowly in the legislature last spring.

The private schools involved are Colorado College, Colorado Women's College, University of Denver, Loretto Heights College and Regis College.

Timothy, from Denver, noted that Colorado law supports student aid for state colleges and universities only, but that 37 states extend their scholarships to both private and public institutions.

"In view of the benefits and savings that accrue to taxpayers through the operating of these private schools, this has been an unfair and inequitable arrangement," he said.

"I hope this inequity will be corrected. It is a way to get more for taxpayers' dollars and will go a long way toward preserving a balanced educational community by bolstering enrollment for private colleges."

Timonthy said that his experience had "solidified my conviction that the educational needs of our state are best served by an educational community made up of the combination of public and private institutions."

Without Colorado Women's College, he said, the state might not have a college exclusively for women. Without Colorado College, he said, there might not be the nationally recognized "block plan" for intensive study which the college has pioneered.

He defended Mountain Bell's practice of supporting private colleges and universities through contributions.

Timothy noted that as a corporate citizen, a company has a responsibility to back worthwhile activities in the city or community of which it is a part.

"We need the product of education. In the final analysis it is qualified people who provide high-quality, low-cost telephone service. We take large sums collected from customers to support, in the form of taxes, public higher education. It is also in the customers' interest that we invest in the preparation of employes and citizens by private colleges and universities.

"I frankly cannot understand the thinking behind the decision of the Colorado Public Utilities Commission to disallow contributions to private colleges and universities as proper expenses recoverable in the price of our service. I accept the responsibility to get the decision changed."

Timothy cited the responsibility of educational institutions to operate "as efficiently and effectively as possible so that the costs that must be recovered are at the optimum level."

He pointed to the collaboration of Colorado College, the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, and the Air Force Academy in such efforts as joint use of libraries and laboratories.

He said that colleges produce a major product, in graduates, and that "these men and women graduates will ultimately fill key positions in business, in government, and in all professional fields.

"They will be the leaders and the decision makers; they will be the doers, the dreamers, the innovators."

Timothy was concerned over surveys which show that young people are suspicious of business.

He quoted surveys which showed that more than 75 percent of young people believe that business should be subject to more government control, and that students asked about the typical profit of large corporations guessed that their profits averaged about 45 percent, even though a more accurate figure would be about 5 percent, according to Timothy.

Observing that colleges "hold a high position of prestige and credibility as information sources," he said that "these institutions can do much to correct misunderstandings and misconceptions which are prevalent today about the role of business in our country and our economy.

"The time spent and energies expended by educators working more closely with one another, and by educators and businessmen growing together can be very productive. The possible benefits are exciting to contemplate. The consequences of failing to do so are frightening."

Bilingual Voting System Got Little Use Last Week

DENVER (AP) — The new federal bilingual voting system got little use in its first test in Tuesday's Colorado elections.

A survey of 11 communities required by the law to furnish bilingual ballots and Spanish-speaking interpreters showed several communities failed to comply with the requirements and those that did had increased election costs.

Of the 1,000 persons voting in Brighton, only five used Spanish language forms, according to clerk's office spokesman Judy Lalan.

One Montrose precinct recorded 20 votes on a voting machine labled in Spanish against 370 votes on the English machine. And officials said only one Spanish ballot was cast in Brush.

Mrs. Lalan said Spanish forms and an interpreter cost Brighton about $200 while Montrose spent an estimated $400 for the extras.

The bilingual requirement was approved this year by Congress as an amendment to the Voting Rights Act. The law requires bilingual ballots, signature cards and printed instructions in counties where more than 5 per cent of the population does not speak English. Tairty-four of Colorado's 63 counties are affected.

Interpreters were on duty in Cortez, Westminster and Brighton but were not called on. Meanwhile, officials in Trinidad and Salida said information on the law reached them too late for Spanish ballots and translaters to be obtained.

Montrose City Clerk Dave Putney says the city saved the cost of a Spanish speaker when a local teacher did the work for free.

The bilingual balloting laws are expected to get a more substantial test in next year's federal elections.

Play Is Called 'Animated Dime Novel'

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP) — Favorite folklore rogues never die, they keep cropping up in plays like "Jesse and the Bandit Queen."

The animated d im e novel which opened over the weekend at off-Broadway's Public Theater, takes an X-style look at Jesse James and the non-lady known as Belle Starr.

Before Author David Freeman and Director Gordon Stewart are finished with this free-form exhibition, their two performers uncovered an assortment of human urges stretching from incest to sado-masochism, from transvestitism to hallucinations.

The writing is cleverly discursive, jumping back and forth in time and space through the post-Civil War decades of mid-America violence. The staging is crisply specific. The only thing missing is any theatric purpose beyond cautiously quaint lubricity. As mythic cult figures, James and Starr are stale from over-attention.

Stewart previously directed a national tour of "Marat-Sade," and hasn't forgotten some of that drama's lurid opportunities for reapplication here. For first act finale there is vicious throatslitting menace with a razor; and for other highlights, nice little horse-and-rider whipups.

Pamela Payton-Wright a n d Kevin O'Connor continue to show themselves to be among the theater's most versatile younger generation as they portray in addition to the title parts sundry vignettes extending to gender turnabout

Richard J. Graziano's setting of sunset diorama and a triangulation of wood-slat paths makes an imaginative p l u s. The Hilary N. Rosenfeld century-ago costumes include a lot of capes, boots and vests which the player pair are in an almost continual state of donning and doffing.

"Jesse and the Bandit Queen" is much ado and small substance.

Portugal Says Military Courts To Be Established

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Special military courts were created Saturday to try political prisoners in Portugal.

The decision by the all-military Council of the Revolution broke the army's word to the nation when this regime was founded 18 months ago that special tribunals would be abolished and state security crimes would be heard in regular criminal courts.

The move was the first to clear the cases of between 1,200 and 1,500 political prisoners, many of whom have been held without charges for 18 months.

At the same time, two officers associated with former President Antonio de Spinola were brought to Lisbon for questioning after their arrest in the city of Braga on Friday.

Maj. Antonio Godinho and Lt. Benjamin de Abreu are named in an official report as partiepants in an abortive uprising b y Spinola's supporters last March 11. Spinola fled the country when the coup failed.

Godinho and Abreu were arrested in a Catholic seminary by a joint force of police and soldiers armed with submachine guns.

The council decreed establishment of three separate military courts to hear state security cases.

One is for officers arrested in connection with the March 11 uprising, another is for the former rightest regime's secret police agents who form the bulk of the political prisoners, and the third is for cases involving illegal possession of military weapons.

A member of the council, Gen. Manuel Charais, said the trials would be conducted in public and that defendants would have the right to private counsel.

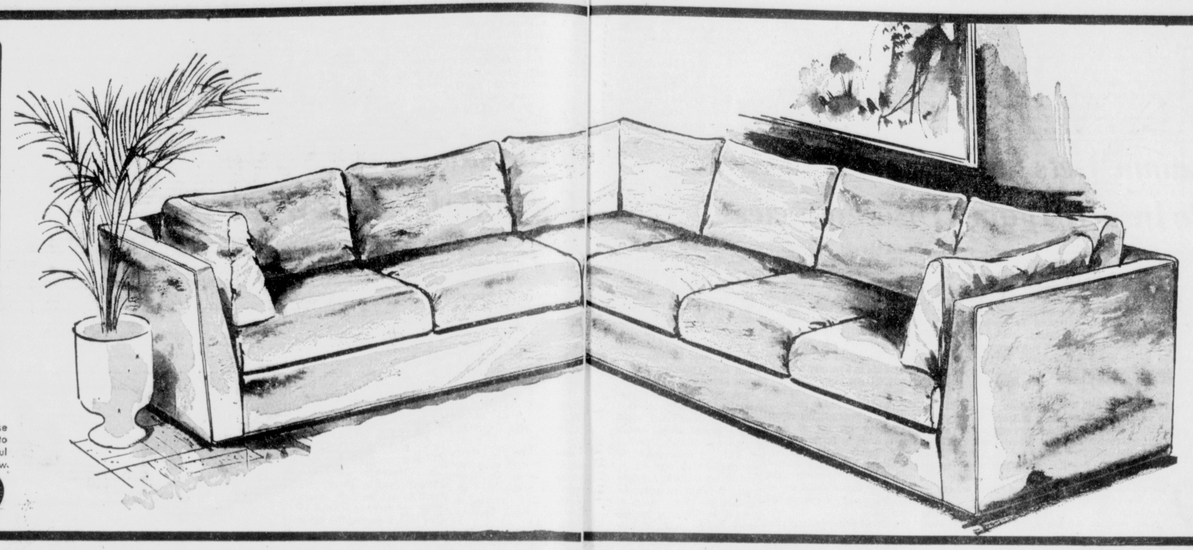

Provision for court martial of arms violations could be the prelude to a long-awaited crackdown on holders of an estimated 20,000 military weapons missing from arms depots. Most of the weapons are believed to be in the hands of private political militias.

Claudio Monteverdi was an Italian composer and music reformer. He became the first great composer of opera and brought the madrigal form to its highest point in Italy.

No Frills Seen By Red China For Ford Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chir has sent word to Presider Ford that his four-day vis next month will be witho frills and will be conducted in businesslike manner, source say.

Ford's four-day stay in Pe king will start Dec. 1. He plan stops in The Philippines and In donesia on the way home.

The straight-laced nature o the Ford trip underscores Chi nese apprehensions that U.S detente with the Soviet Union poses dangers to Chinese security. This Chinese concern is known to have deepened with the ouster of James R. Schlesinger as secretary of defense.

At the same time, U.S. officials say only technical problems have kept a White House advance team from a planned flight to Peking to prepare for Ford's visit.

The team had been scheduled to leave Monday, b u t was called back from the airport when Ford decided to announce a series of personnel changes that included a decision to name George Bush, head of the U.S. liaison office in Peking, as director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Now, officials say, the team will be on its way by early next week when the two governments are likely to announce formally the details of the Ford trip.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, during his visit to Peking this month, found the Chinese apprehensive that the U.S. commitment to detente with the Soviet Union would allow the Russians to relax their defenses against the West and concentrate on tensions with China.

Schlesinger had won favor among the Chinese because he contributed a skeptical note to the detente policy and also warned of Soviet buildups in the Mediterranean.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Tuesday that Ford "is looking forward to his trip."

Liberty Bell In No Danger Of Crumbling

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Liberty Bell is not only cracked but might be America's most flawed treasure

"Scientifically speaking, it's a piece of junk," said metallurgist Mike Modes, who spent an entire night last week making "radiograph" pictures, similar to X-rays, of the nation's symbol of freedom.

It was the first time anyone has ever examined the metallic structure of the Liberty Bell, and it showed that the famous crack is only one of dozens of defects.

The crack — actually it's two cracks — occurred on July 8, 1835, while the bell was tolling the death of Chief Justice John Marshall.

Modes, who works for Universal Technical Testing Laboratory Inc., wanted to see if the bell is too brittle to be carried from Independence Hall across the street in late December to a new display center.

"I would say it is safe to move," Modes said in an interview Wednesday. "But it's a mess.

"There is, of course, the large crack that everyone knows about. It is also f u l l of things called 'shrinkage' and 'porosity.'"

These are soft spots created when the metal cooled after casting. They were common in metals of the 1750s. So the good citizens of Philadelphia were not "taken" when they paid $303 to London's Whitechapel Bell Foundry in 1752.

Last week, Modes hauled his equipment into darkened Independence Hall at 5 p.m., after the tourists were gone, and w o r k e d until nine the n e x t morning

"You can say I was honored to do this," he said. "We have negatives for 95 per cent of the entire volume (metallic c o n tent)."

Modes says the Liberty Bell is in no danger of crumbling.

"It looks like what you'd find in very poor commercial c ing done today," he said.

Mayor Wants Review of Section 141 of City Charter

By W.J. McGLASSON
Gazette Telegraph
Staff Writer

Mayor Larry Ochs said Friday he would ask the Charter Review Commission to make a study of Section 141 of the city charter which has already caused him to resign as director of one bank and has jeopardized the bank director's post held by former mayor Andrew Marshall.

The mayor, responding to newsmen's questions at his monthly news conference said he was concerned that "continued strict interpretation" of the section will virtually eliminate any successful businessman from seeking a seat on council.

Ochs also recalled that the present council has already directed the administration to bring to council's attention, once the urgency of budget matters are out of the way, the existing disclosure ordinance which some council members believe should be amended, too.

The mayor said he was in "full agreement" with his predecessor's position, referring to comments by Marshall Wednesday night that strict interpretation of Section 141 could reach a point of absurdity. Ochs said Marshall's reference to ownership of AT&T stock was most appropriate.

On Wednesday, City Attorney Gordon Hinds issued an opinion saying Marshall's presence on the board of directors of Exchange National Bank was a violation of Section 141 because city money is deposited with the bank.

The opinion also said Mrs. Marshall would have to sell her shares of stock in Affiliated Bankshares, parent company of First National Bank here, because First National also is a depository for city funds.

Marshall, who has announced he'll seek a district court ruling on Hinds' opinion, said a strict, literal interpretation of Section 141 would prohibit anyone who held AT&T stock from serving on the city's unpaid council because the city does business with the telephone company.

The strict interpretation of Section 141 is a recent development which, the mayor agreed when asked by a newsman, probably was spawned by the amount of discussion and publicity that preceded adoption of the city's disclosure ordinance, even though Section 141 is not concerned with any disclosure of assets.

He recalled that at one time, four or five members of council were also serving as directors on local banks and when he named them, there were five—former mayor T. Eugene McCleary, former councilmen William Becker and Karl Andrews, Marshall and himself.

Ochs also told newsmen today that, as a result of the long series of budget meetings which council has been holding, he would "predict" that the mill levy would be set at 11 by council on Tuesday. That is the same mill levy in effect for 1975.

There is some talk among council that even the 11 mills "might be shaved" a fraction or so, the mayor continued, but he believed an 11-mill levy was a safe prediction.

He also predicted that council would tend to stick to the "conservative" estimates of next year's revenues as projected by the administration in its preliminary budget rather than be swept up by the optimism created with recent increases in city sales tax receipts.

The administration, when its budget was prepared, projected 1976 sales tax revenues at $10,625,000.

At Friday's early-morning budget meeting, L.T. Allison, city controller, said if the upward trend of the past five months continues through November and December, the city would end 1975 with about $10.6 million in sales tax receipts rather than the $10.4 million estimated a year ago.

Should sales tax revenues continue to climb, the 1976 projection of $10.6 million would be well below actual receipts but Ochs said he believed council will prefer to stick with the original $10.6 million at this time on the theory it's too early to say if the upward trend will continue.

On other matters discussed at his press conference, Mayor Ochs also:

—Announced he, Councilman Leon Young and H.E. (Bud) Owsley of the planning department would be in Chicago Sunday and Monday presenting Colorado Springs' case before the jury picking the 10 All-America cities of 1976. It was previously announced that Colorado Springs has been picked as one of the 20 finalists in the competition.

—Reported that James Ringe, the city's director of Community Development and a representative of C.K. Boettcher and Co. would go to New York City in about a week to "get a feel of the bond market" and what interest the city can expect to pay when it sells $1 million in revenue bonds for construction of a downtown parking garage. Ochs said he believed Colorado Springs' "track record" in the bonding market would make the garage bonds saleable despite the difficulty being experienced by Denver's proposed parking bond issue and the fiscal problems of New York City.

—Announced that the Century Block 100 mall proposal is still not completed by the involved merchants in the 100 block of North Tejon, and that the subject will not be brought before council until its Nov. 25 meeting.

The subject of Section 141 has become a major concern on council, and elsewhere, since Hinds, at the request of Councilman Charles Brown, ruled the city could no longer do business with Brookhart Building Centers while Brown was on council. Brown is a 15 percent stockholder and vice president of the firm.

Ochs, in discussing the issue Friday, said he could see that having the city continue doing business with Brookhart, except on a competitive bid basis might not be "in the best interests of the city."

But he said "some reason and practicality must be ground into all these decisions" relative to Section 141.

He said the Hinds opinion relative to Mrs. Marshall's owning Affiliated Bankshares stock also touched him because he, too, owned two shares of the same stock. He said he was selling those shares "as soon as I can get time to get them out of the safe deposit box."

Ochs, like Marshall and Brown, said he does not oppose Section 141 but believes an amendment is called for in view of the recent interpretations given by the city attorney.

HAPPY PICKETS — Approximately 600 teachers picketed the District 11 offices Friday, protesting the lack of a contract settlement between the Colorado Springs Teachers' Association and the district. There will be three days of fact-finding Monday. Representatives of the CSTA called Friday's exercise "Informational Picketing."

Lamm 'Gets Tough' on Fiscal Rules To Insure Against Discrepancies

jury the story made the front pages. But when I was exonerated the report in the news media apparently did not warrant the same kind of attention by certain news media."

In general, he said, "with a couple of exceptions—and the news media knows who I am talking about—I think the press handled the thing in a very professional way."

Elsewhere, Strickland said he agreed with the grand jury report regarding changes in state fiscal rules and procedures, and that he, himself, had attempted to promote some of those changes years ago to ensure against either violations or slipshod interpretation of the rules regarding travel expenses.

Lt. Gov. Brown, however, has not disclosed whether he received a similar letter from Tooley regarding his exoneration of charges that he had spent $4,000 in taxpayer monies for his own personal travels.

For his part, Strickland related that he could have attended, legitimately, the national lieutenant governor's conference held in Puerto Rico while he was in office but, "while I would have liked to go I didn't think it was fair to spend the public dollar for such a trip."

Such functions, said Strickland, don't further the "promotion of good government, especially when you realize that the lieutenant governor is nothing more than an appendage, a superfluous one, who is not involved in day-to-day decision making. Actually, I feel the post is an unnecessary one for the state of Colorado. Other states have already gotten rid of the lieutenant governor's post."

Republican Strickland declined to speculate on whether there were any political motivations behind Democrat Lamm calling for the former acting lieutenant governor's expenses to be probed — shortly after Brown had been ordered investigated.

"I personally feel that a person should be given the benefit of the doubt," Strickland said. "But I suppose when the present lieutenant governor was investigated, it was felt that his predecessor — me — should be subjected to the same kind of probe."

Strickland would not speculate as to whether the grand jury probe—even though it exonerated him—would taint any future political aspirations he might have.

"I never make any decisions regarding my future political aspirations this far in advance," he said. "Right now, I really don't have any political aspirations for the future."

There was never, he added, any doubt in his mind that he and his office operations as lieutenant governor would be cleared of all charges.

"I was very optimistic," he said, "because I had operated that office in a manner where it could withstand investigation."

Regarding the grand jury recommendations, Lamm said:

"I have reviewed the report concerning the use of state travel funds by Lt. Gov. Brown and former acting Lt. Gov. Strickland, and have discussed with the state controller the jury's recommendations on changes in state procedures and fiscal rules.

"I am in agreement with the basic thrust of all those recommendations. We have already implemented five of these recommendations and will implement the spirit of the sixth.

"Steps must be taken to avoid any further mistakes or violations of the fiscal rules. I take this matter very seriously."

Lamm said one of the recommendations represented a concept he could accept only in part.

"The grand jury recommends that hte state controller preaudit all travel expenses of state employes and officials," he said. "I propose, instead, to have the controller pre-audit the travel expenses of all state department heads and all elected officials in the executive branch. That constitutes a group of about 50 people."

The travel of all other state employes would be pre-audited within their respective departments, Lamm said.

"For the controller to preaudit 125,000 travel vouchers a year from more than 30,000 state employes would require the hiring of additional personnel and the unnecessary expenditure of state funds. I believe the responsibility for these pre-audits should rest within the departments. The controller would do spot-checking, but the regular review of travel vouchers would take place within the departments."

The report recommends that the present certification on state vouchers be expended to include a phrase such as "...and that this expenditure is for official state business and not for private or personal purposes." Lamm said the state will incorporate a similar phrase in the next printing of state vouchers.

Elsewhere the report recommends that the controller strictly enforce a requirement that each department head promptly submit to the controller a complete fiscal year-end certification of the status of accounts.

"We believe the grand jury's suggestion is a good one," Lamm said, "and we will expand our request to include a formal certification signed by the department head and chief financial officer."

The grand jury recommends that state officials include with their vouchers the nature of the dual purpose and the extent of the trip which is devoted to state business. This is in regard to trips where both state and non-state business is conducted. Lamm said the state would comply.

Lamm said the state controller would immediately appoint a committee to complete a review of the existing rules.

didn't go off,' saying it in disbelief."

Judge MacBride allowed the phrase "in disbelief" to stay on the record despite objection from a court-appointed defense lawyer that Buendorf was trying to read Miss Fromme's mind.

The jury also watched television film and slides of the incident.

Buendorf said the pistol was about waist high and pointing downward when he grabbed it from Miss Fromme's hand. He said she was raising it when stopped.

Miss Fromme, frustrated by a judge's refusal to let Manson testify, was ejected from the courtroom twice before the prosecutor could start his opening statement.

Bike Rider Breaks Leg In Crash

A 7-year-old girl, Elaine Rovlier of 26 Newport Circle, suffered a fractured leg Friday afternoon when the bike she was riding was hit by a car.

According to the state patrol report, Elaine was attempting to cross Lake Avenue at 6th Street when the bike was hit by a pickup truck driven by Alan T. Daigle, 50, of 233 Cunningham Drive.

Elaine was taken to Penrose Hospital for treatment of the broken leg and abrasions to the head. She was thrown 17 feet by the force of the impact.

Band Members to Sell Stationery

Members of the Palmer Terror marching band will be selling stationery throughout the city over the weekend in order to raise money for future band trips.

Members of the band will go door-to-door, and also be available at many of the shopping centers around the city.

cism of Ford's national security personnel changes. Jackson said he has serious reservations about whether he can vote to confirm Donald Rumsfeld as Schlesinger's replacement or George Bush as the new director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Jackson said Ford "wants us to have our key national security institutions run by men whose paramount concerns are their own political futures — and his," adding that neither appointee can "hold a candle" to his predecessor "in terms of judgment, knowledge or intellectual ability."

Jackson said he opposes the way Ford is conducting detente, rather than the concept, declaring that the Ford policy "continues to rest on a series of unequal bargains and unilateral American concessions."

The President noted that the Senate Appropriations Committee only restored $564 million of the $7.6 billion cut by the House on his $97.8 billion defense request despite a plea from Schlesinger that it was vital to restore at least $2.6 billion.

Franco Rushed To Hospital Because of Hemorrhaging

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Gen. Francisco Franco was rushed to a hospital from his palace Friday and underwent surgery to remove part of his stomach after suffering massive hemorrhaging.

The operation on the 82-year-old Spanish leader — down to 80 pounds from his normal 120 — began less than an hour after he was sped to the hospital by army ambulance, a government official said.

Franco was still in surgery 90 minutes after the operation began, the semi-official news agency Cifra said. A former cabinet member, Gonzalo Fernandez de la Mora, told newsmen the operation was expected to take four hours.

Top government officials including Premier Carlos Arias Navarro and Parliament President Alejandro Rodriguez Valcarcel raced to the hospital in the north of the capital. Security officers outside the hospital pushed back spectators.

A government announcement earlier said the longtime Spanish strongman had been transferred from his palace as "a preventative measure" against new internal bleeding.

Doctors said Franco had received new blood transfusions at the palace and that an artifical kidney machine had been turned on again to combat uremic poisoning spreading through his system.

Doctors operated on Franco five days ago in a makeshift army operating room near the palace, where the ruler of Spain for 36 years had lain ill for the past 21 days.

Franco was moved from his Pardo Palace, eight miles north of the Spanish capital, to La Paz Clinic, a government-run hospital.

The Information Ministry said the decision to move Franco was reached after consultation with Franco's 26-man medical team and his family.

Immediately after Franco entered the hospital, his doctors took over the entire first floor, which had been prepared for the possibility of the general's arrival after Monday's operation.

Franco's son-in-law, Dr. Cristobal Martinez-Bordiu, a heart specialist but not officially a member of the general's medical team, is in charge of the floor.

Franco's medical team said besides intestinal hemorrhaging and kidney failure, the general had a temporary drop in his pulse rate but that irregular heart beats were gone and a blood clot in his left leg appeared to have stopped growing. A blood clot in Franco's right leg in July 1974 nearly killed him.

The doctors described the general's "level of consciousness" as normal but it was not clear if the once iron-fisted ruler had been aware of the transfer to the hospital.

Explosions, Fire Gut Beauty Shop

The Louie D' Or Beauty Salon, 3159 W. Colorado Ave., was gutted by a fire apparently caused by two explosions late Friday night, causing an undetermined amount of damage.

The beauty shop, plus a shoe shop, a cleaning establishment, a gift shop and a Safeway Store in the Red Rocks Shopping Center all suffered smoke damage and destruction of windows.

Police Officer Verle McMullen, one of the first officials at the scene, told the Gazette Telegraph that the fire started approximately two minutes after the explosions.

The police department sealed off a two-block area while the fire was being fought. At press time the explosions were "unexplained" according to police officials.

However, a call for assistance over the police radio indicated that a bomb had caused the two explosions.

The investigation is continuing.

Department Recommends Adams Firm

The Department of Public Works is recommending to the city council that it award a contract to Willie J. Adams for construction of the lower Cragmor storm sewer system.

Engineer Dick Ernster said the contract is in the amount of $187,106. The Adams' bid was the lowest of eight received.

He said the contract calls for starting at the existing storm drain at Fourth and El Paso streets, northerly to Nichols Boulevard and then east to Jon Street.

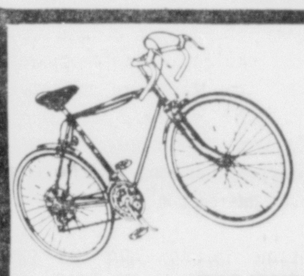

Another segment of the construction will pick up the existing drain in Fourth Street and carry it east to Pennsylvania Street and then south to Third Street.

Ernster said the storm drain involved ranges in size fron. 54 inches to 18 inches in diameter. Catch basins and other miscellaneous construction also are involved in the project.

Ernster said there is $259,833 budgeted for the work. It will be suggested that work continue on a unit basis to make up the difference between the budgeted amount and the $187,106 proposed contract to Adams.

Tiger Icers Open WCHA Play On Frustrating Note

By JOE NAVARRO
Gazette Telegraph
Sports Writer

Colorado College coach Jeff Sauer and Notre Dame coach Charles "Lefty" Smith were less than impressed with their team's performance Friday night at the Broadmoor World Arena.

The Fighting Irish came away with a 9-7 Western Collegiate Hockey Association victory over eighth-ranked Colorado College, ruining CC's season debut. Notre Dame is 1-2 in league play.

"We weren't ready to play hockey," said Sauer. "Not talking about officiating or anything else, we just didn't play.

"I was very disappointed in the leadership of our captains."

Sauer's comment was due to the ejection of Jim Kronschnabel, plus his two misconduct penalties, and one misconduct on Jim Warner in a heated third period.

"I hope we learned something," said Sauer. "If we didn't learn a lesson, we're in trouble Saturday."

The two meet again at 8 p.m. today.

Smith said, "I thought we had a good goalie and that CC also had a good goalie. I also thought we had good lines and good defense, but when there's 16 goals scored....."

Colorado College erased a Notre Dame 2-0 first period edge to take a 3-2 lead at the end of the initial period.

Winger Alex Prius gave Notre Dame a 1-0 lead at 4:48 following a shaky CC start.

Pirus scored on a power play after CC's Warner went into the penalty box for interference. Pirus' shot sent the puck past CC goalie Eddie Mio's right side, hit the cross bar and made it just inside the red line for the score.

The Fighting Irish came back at 7:18 to take a 2-0 lead on an unassisted goal from center Don Fairholm. His shot came from about 10 feet out in front of Mio, sending the puck past his left side pads.

Apparently Warner, who had recorded two penalties, wanted to make amends and came back at 8:27 to give CC its first goal of the season.

Warner received the puck from center Kronschnabel who was at the back right side of the Irish goal. Warner, close to Irish goalie Len Moher, quickly flipped the puck past Moher.

Freshman center Dave Delich tied the score at 2-2 at 12:57. Delich scored after freshman wing Rick Pracht passed to Delich. He, in turn, hit the puck slowly, slipping it past Moher.

The Tigers' go-ahead goal came from defenseman Jim Mitchell at 17:38. Mitchell slapped the puck from just a few feet inside the Irish blue line. The puck glanced off Notre Dame's Pat Novitzki's skate and found its way home.

Colorado College put the pressure on Moher in the early going in the second period before the Irish tied the score at 3-3.

Winger Clark Hamilton decked Mio at 8:08 to tie the score, but the Tigers' Greg Smith retaliated seconds later, at 8:36, on an unassisted goal to put CC back in front at 4-3.

With 8:18 remaining, Mio was hit in the head by a shot by Pirus. Mio was taken out of the game and after a short break (10 minutes is allowed in the WCHA when a goalie is injured and if he is not able to continue, another goalie must enter the game), he returned to action.

Notre Dame's Ray Johnson tied the score at 4-4 at 16:02 after finding the puck in front of the CC net and stuffed it past Mio. The Irish weren't done yet.

After a fight behind the Irish net which sent CC's Mike Hiefield and Pracht into the penalty box along with Notre Dames' Pirus, the Irish went ahead 5-4. The goal was made by Walsh whose shot went between Mio's legs.

CC tempers began to flare with just over five minutes gone in the third period, but it was aimed more at the referees than the Irish.

Referee Red Wilkie made some questionable calls which didn't set right with the Tigers. The result was the fall of the first line.

The series of events began when Jim Kronschnabel hotly contested a tripping call on Curt Christofferson. Kronschnabel received a 10-minute misconduct at 4:28. At 5:25 Warner was called for charging and again the Tigers disputed the penalty—especially Kronschnabel who received another misconduct and ejected from the game.

The Tigers' woes continued and at 7:26 Terry Fairholm sent the puck past Mio for a 6-4 lead on a shorthanded goal.

At 8:18 the Irish' Pirus

Fliers Reign SCL

By LARRY FERGUSON
Gazette Telegraph
Sports Writer

Nothing fancy, nothing tricky, nothing out of the ordinary - just plain ol' fundamental football at its best, featuring sound blocking, consistent running and hard tackling.

That was Mitchell's winning strategy Friday night as the Marauders exerted their offensive power to overwhelm Widefield 37-12 and capture the South Central League championship at C.A. Foster Field.

The Fliers went to work early, scoring seven points on their second possession, and then jumped to a 14-0 advantage in the second period. Widefield got six of the points back before intermission, but the Marauders put together a decisive series of plays in the third quarter to take charge of the game.

Taking the second half kickoff, Mitchell launched the longest and most time consuming march of the night, driving 69 yards in six minutes to go ahead 21-6. At that point, Widefield elected to abandon its ground game and tried the air lanes.

An interception by Mitchell's Cameron Winchester at midfield gave the ball to Mitchell once more, and that was all the Marauders needed. Another Mitchell touchdown went on the scoreboard shortly thereafter and the contest was out of reach for Widefield.

Mitchell's Al Brakefield and Ed Jones, alternating at fullback, spearheaded the Marauder's ground attack through the middle of the Gladiator defensive line. With guards Bog Wing and Terry Airen clearing the way, Brakefield ripped off 77 yards and Jones collected 50.

With the inside running game working so well, Mitchell found the outside routes were open also, and tailback Jerry Scott raced for an additional 88 yards and two touchdowns.

Widefield's explosive offense was effective at times, but during most of the contest the Glads' scoring unit was watching from the sidelines as the Marauders played ball control. In the third period, for instance, Widefield ran only four plays to Mitchell's 26.

Gladiator fullback Ken Fraser, who notched 82 yards on 12 carries, gave the home crowd something to cheer about late in the third period when he broke away for a 30-yard touchdown run But for the most part, Mitchell managed to keep a tight lid on the Widefield offensive powderkeg.

A 16-yard punt return by Mark O'Connell gave Mitchell good field possession on its first scoring drive in the opening period. With Jones and Scott alternating carries, the Marauders moved from Widefield's 44 to the nine where quarterback Tom Hinkle connected with Mark O'Connell on a sideline pass which put Mitchell at the one.

Scott followed guard Bob Wing and tackle Bob Winn into the end zone for the score and Hinkle's PAT kick made it 7-0.

Early in the second period, the Marauders took a 14-0 lead when Jones shook off four tacklers to score from six yards out.

Widefield responded with its best drive of the night, starting at their own 46 and marching to the Mitchell two in 13 plays. It was Howard Ridgeway and Fraser who kept the drive alive with consistent, short bursts through the line, and Ridgeway capped the march by bolting over the right guard spot.

Then came Mitchell's third period scoring drive culminated when Scott plunged into the end zone from two yards out. The Marauders made 28-6 with 2:09 remaining in the third quarter on Hinkle's two-yard keeper, following Winchester's key interception.

Fraser's 30-yard scoring jaunt came minutes later as the Glads narrowed the margin to 28-12, but Mitchell came back with another time-consuming march and scored again when Hinkle split the uprights with a 32-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

The remainder of the game saw a series of exchanges as the two teams' defensive units took charge. In the closing minutes, the Marauders mounted another scoring drive by taking possession in Widefield territory after the Glads gambled and failed on a fourth down situation.

With only five seconds remaining in the game, reserve quarterback Mark Landess scored Mitchell's final touchdown from the one yard line.

Next week, Mitchell continues its quest for the state AAA championship by taking on the winner of Northern League Rocky Mountain and Longmont meet today to decide that conference title.

Pirate Girls Go To State In Volleyball

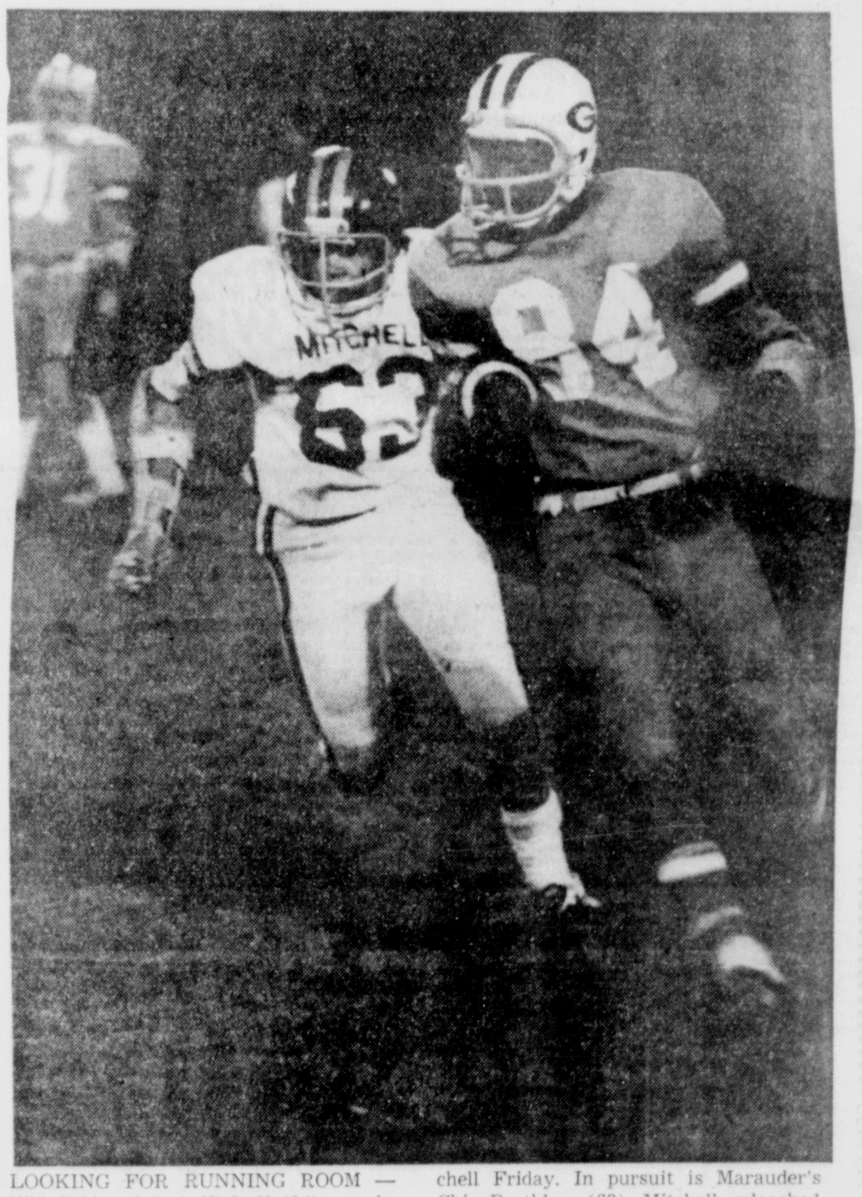

St. Mary's advanced to the state AA girls' volleyball tournament Friday, defeating Denver Christian 15-6, 12-15, 15-8 in the District II championship series.

The Pirates, 9-3 overall, will open state championship play next Friday at Highland High School.

Salida Playoff at 1

SALIDA — Today's AA state preliminary football game between Sheridan and Salida will start at 1 p.m. at the Spartans' field. The game originally was scheduled for 1:30.

The winner advances to next week's quarterfinals.

LOOKING FOR RUNNING ROOM — Widefield end Jack Wykoff (84) searches for running room after taking a pass from quarterback Rusty Moore in second period action of the South Central League championship game against Mitchell Friday. In pursuit is Marauder's Chip Barthlow (63). Mitchell unleashed its powerful running game to take a 37-12 victory.

Offensive Front Buries Glads

Line Play Boosts Mitchell

By JACK MAGRUDER

The most important piece of turn on the football field is not the end zone.

It is that thin three-yard by 30-yard strip of ground known as the line of scrimmage.

Control that territory — no man's land, as it is called — and the game is yours.

Friday at Foster Stadium, Mitchell turned no-man's land into strictly Marauder turf in the second half to pull away from the stubborn Widefield Gladiators and win the South Central League grid championship going away 37-12.

Jim Hartman's beefy offensive line, opening holes seemingly at will, paved the way for 102 Marauder rushing yards in the third period alone as the Frontier Division champs turned a tenuous 14-6 halftime lead into an insurmountable 28-12 bulge.

Tailback Jerry Scott and fullbacks Ed Jones and Al Brakefield were the major beneficiaries of the Mitchell line's domination, combining for 98 of those yards.

Jones blasted two yards off right tackle to culminate a 14-play, 6:08 drive with the second half kickoff to put the Marauders up 21-6 before Hinkle capped a 7-play, 2:41 march with a two-yard sneak.

After Widefield's Ken Fraser dashed 30 yards from scrimmage for the Glads' second score of the night, Mitchell began yet another march which eventually led to Hinkle's 32-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Mitchell reeled off 26 plays in the third stanza to the Glads' four.

"Sure, I'm pleased with the performance of our offensive line," stated a calm Hartman following the victory. "But their performance tonight was nothing new — they've been doing it all year.

"We're a ball control team and we wanted to keep it that way tonight. You have to execute to win, and we did."

Bob Winn, Bob Wiig, Doug Smith, Terry Aires, Terry Shaw and Mark O'Connell — from tackle to tight end —comprise the Mitchell "trench gang."

"I told the kids at half time we had to score every time we had the ball in the second half," stated Hartman. "We were only ahead by eight at the time, and against them that's not a whole lot."

"We couldn't control them and we were never able to get the ball to score," said Glad coach John Meese succinctly.

"Our defense is small — our tackles are only 150 pounds apiece — and it doesn't surprise me that they came right at us. We tried to camp outside and stop them but we just couldn't."

"They've got a big, strong offensive line. They're all at least 200 pounds — I don't care what their program says."

Mitchell's defensive unit, which held the Glads to only 169 yards in total offense, also drew praise from Hartman.

"That defensive crew did a super job," lauded the coach. "Widefield had that one breakaway (Fraser's 30-yard scamper off left tackle), but that other touchdown came on a long drive.

"And that's what we wanted to do — keep them from breaking the long gainer against us."

Instead of its usual 5-2 defense, Mitchell opened the game in a 6-2, a more run-oriented set-up.

"We wanted to play that defense against them because of their strong running game. But the only problem is that we've only got three deep backs in that defense.

"They started throwing the ball, so we went back into our 5-2."

Chuch Frankmore, Gary Mitchell and Dick Elliott are the men mainly responsible for the Mitchell defensive game plan.

"They have a hell of a football team," acknowledged Meese. "We've come back in the second half all year long, but it's tough to come back against a team like we played tonight."

Due to the victory over the SCL's Frontier Division titlists, the Marauders move into the state AAA quarterfinal grid playoffs against an as yet undetermined team from the Northern League.

Mitchell will travel to either Fort Collins or Longmont Nov. 15 to play the winner of the Rocky Mountain-Longmont playoff game today at 1:30 p.m. in Fort Collins.

CC Gridders Face Coyotes

By JOE NAVARRO
Gazette Telegraph
Sports Writer

The Colorado College Tigers close out their 1975 football season when they meet Kansas Wesleyan of the Kansas Collegiate Athletic Conference (KCAC) today at 1 p.m. at Washburn Field.

For the third consecutive season the Tigers have hopes of getting a chance to play an additional game by getting an NCAA Division III bowl bid. This year the playoffs include eight teams instead of the four in the past two years.

But the Tigers first concern is getting past the Wesleyan Coyotes who are 3-4 in KCAC play and 3-5 overall. Colorado College is 6-1-1.

Last week the Coyotes defeated Bethany College, which had lost earlier to CC, and lost by two points to undefeated St. Mary of the Plains.

Wesleyan runs out of a Pro-I formation and are a quick team which the Tigers will have to watch closely.

The Tigers defeated Washington University in St. Louis 34-14 last week. This week the main concern is getting up for Wesleyan.

"It would be a natural thing for a group to have a letdown after a game like last week's," said head coach Jerry Carle. "This becomes a challenge for our coaching staff this week, in putting the players in the right frame of mind. It would be a terrible thing if we lost a game like this, one that we could conceivably win, and should win.

"We have had weekends when we were down as witnessed by our opener against Nebraska Wesleynn (CC lost 15-10.)We're going to have to be concerned with this natural letdown. I hope that Parents Weekend and Homecoming will give us the plus needed to get the job done."

The Tigers have continued to improve their statistics in all categories. In last week's game the Tigers had their best passing of the year with a total of 315 yards from two passers.

Mark Buchanan, an all America hopeful, pushed his rushing total to 641 yards and his passing to 722 for a total offense of 1363 yards. He also leads in total points with 62 including an 80 yard touchdown reception from backup quarterback Dave Hall.

Kicker Ted Swan, another All-America hopeful, hit on two field goals to bring his mark to 12 of 17 for the year and 59 total points.

Wesleyan is a much improved team this season and is giving Carle reason for concern.

"They are a young team and have enjoyed a measure of success this season that escaped them last year," said Carle. "Wesleyan has played several tough teams. Wesleyan led St. Mary of the Plains, which I believe will win the conference, and were beaten in a close game. They defeated Bethany 21-7 last week.

"I guess the big problem with Wesleyan is defense. They look to be much more explosive than in the past, but the defense hasn't been as strong.

"Against the KCAC, our string is running out. Wesleyan's whole season could be made successful by beating Colorado College, something a KCAC team has never accomplished. That is an added incentive."

The Coyotes are in an enviable position of trying to beat the Tigers.

"I'd like to be in that position," said Carle. "I think they have a good opportunity to put a successful cap on their season."

Wesleyan will not only have to contend with CC's offense, which has been highly explosive lately, but with the defense which has been strong all year.

The game will be broadcast on KRCC-FM (91.5).

Panthers Get Finale Over Doherty 40-0

The game was only for 11th place, but Harrison's Panthers played as if it was for the South Central League championship Friday afternoon, ending Doherty's initial season of football with a 40-0 thumping.

Harrison finished the year at 4-6 andt he Spartans wound up with an 0-10 slate.

Behind the one-two punch of Dennis White and Jay Borgen, the Panthers tacked 20 points on the scoreboard in each half of the season finale. White finished the afternoon with 121 yards on nine tries while Borgen added another 101 in just seven trips.

Lorenzo Coteland started the scoring for Harrison with a 14-yard TD burst in the first period and Brad Rankin slipped over for the two-point conversion.

Rankin hit paydirt from 11 yards out and Borgen scored from 18 yards away in the second stanza, but both PAT attempts were blocked by the Spartans.

White scored twice in the third period to put the game out of reach, once from 16 yards and the final time from 20 yards away.

Robert Wonnett ended the scoring parade with a tally from 17 yards in the final period.

Harrison's defense held Doherty to just 60 yards total offense while piling up 476 yards and completing seven of 10 passes.

The Spartans' only serious drive came late in the second half, but Rankin picked off a Doherty pass to end the threat. Rankin also hit on six of nine passes for 132 yards.

However, the big pass of the day went from Coteland to White, on a halfback option maneuver covering 50 yards and set up Wonnett's TD.

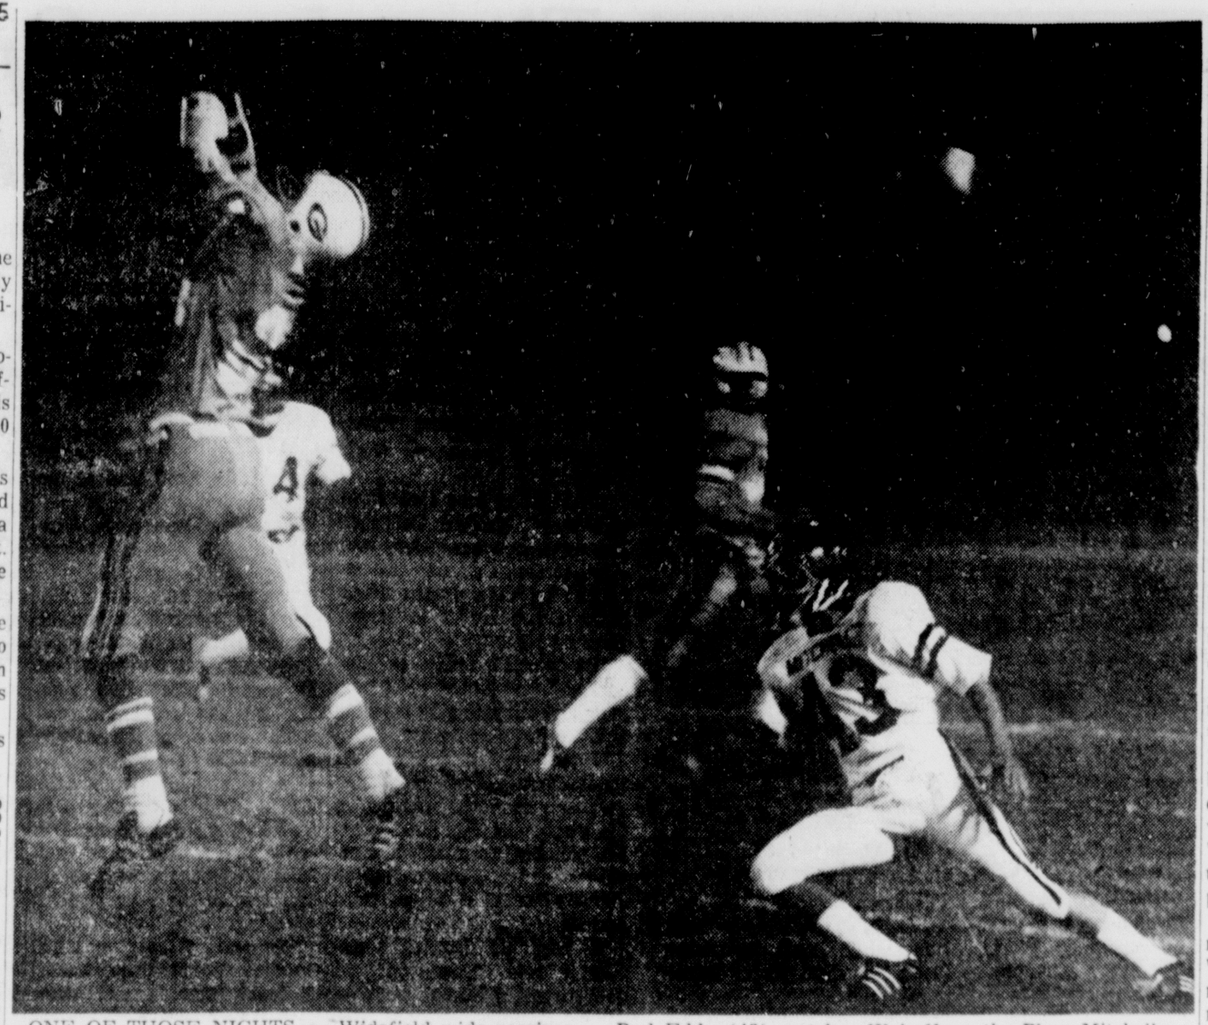

Two other Harrison scores were called back by penalties.

Proud Colts Bump Wasson's T-Birds In Final Contest

By RAY ABEYTA

Pueblo South, with nothing more than pride on the line, scored 13 points in the second quarter to slip past Wasson 13-6 in a lackluster football game Friday night at Berry Stadium to take third place in the South Central League.

The T-Birds, whose offense was punchless in the first half, almost pulled the game out with 16 seconds left in the game. With the Colts holding a 13-7 lead with 3:14 left in the game, Wasson drove from the South 45 to Colts' five-yard line before disaster struck them.

Wasson had a first down at the South five-yard line with no timeouts left. Quarterback Tony Heslop, just trying to throw the ball out of bounds to stop the clock, hit Von Ring in the head with the ball. An alert Bruce White of South scooped the ball up before it hit the ground to preserve the Colts' victory.

"It's unbelievable. It's like a nightmare," Wasson coach Dick Westbay said. "The ball was meant to be thrown away. We meant to throw the ball out of bounds. As it turned out we should have run two running plays in a row."

Neither team produced much offense. However, South, with its razzle-dazzle plays, kept the crowd excited. The Colts, who last week scored on a 47-yard "flea flicker" play against Coronado, were up to their old tricks again, scoring on a 73-yard pass play in the second quarter.

Quarterback Dave Shaddy started the play, tossing the ball to end Mitch Stutters. Stutters then pulled up and flipped the ball downfield to Tom Dosen, who was behind the Wasson secondary, for the score.

The Colts came back moments later, recovering a Wasson fumble at the T-Birds' 13-yard line to score with 2:45 left in the half. Halfback Greg Even scored on a five-yard run.

Wasson, which had only one first down in the first half, came out in the second half to actually outplay the Colts. But the T-Birds saw three scoring opportunities inside the South 10-yard line fall short in the second half.

In the third period, the T-Birds got good field position at the Colts' 27-yard, following a 19-yard return by Jeff Study on a South punt. But on fourth and goal at the South six, Heslop was stopped at the three-yard line.

Wasson again blew a golden scoring opportunity in the fourth period, recovering a fumble at the Colts' 30-yard line. Junior halfback Toby Terhune carried seven straight times to take the ball to the 10-yard line. Terhune was finally stopped on his eighth carry for no gain on a fourth and one to end the T-Bird threat.

The T-Birds finally ended their frustrations the next time they received the ball, going 443 yards in five plays, with Terhune scoring from 16 yards out. Terhune, with the injured Calvin Johnson on the sidelines, proved to be the only consistent runner for Wasson, rushing for 102 yards on 18 carries.

Lamar Captures Southern Title With 31-21 Victory Over Canon City

By ROB WILSON

CANON CITY (GT) — Unranked but highly-touted Lamar exploded for three second-quarter touchdowns to snap a 7-7 deadlock and defeat Canon City 31-21 for the Southern League championship Friday night.

The Savages, heading to the state playoffs for the first time since 1970, had trouble unleashing their powerful ground attack in the opening period, but blew the game open in the second period.

It was the first of four costly Canon City turnovers that turned the momentum of the game. Leading 7-0 and owning field position at the Tigers' 30-yard line, Steve Gilliland fumbled after being ransacked on a jarring tackle, and a short return by Lamar's Randy Lowe gave the Savages possession at the Canon City 36.

In just one play from scrimmage, bruising fullback Tony Hubbard rambled 36 yards for the Savages' initial touchdown and Terry Bowers' kick tied the game at 7-7.

It was at that point that the Tiger defense apparently folded. Unable to stop Hubbard, who rushed for 163 yards and scored three touchdowns, the Tigers fell into a second-period lull that they simply could not come out of.

A 35-yard field goal by Bower with 8:30 left in the second period vaulted Lamar into a 10-7 lead before Hubbard scored two more touchdowns on short four and one-yard runs, boosting the Savages into a 24-7 lead.

Still unsatisfied, Lamar dealt Canon a severe mental blow with less than a minute to play in the first period. Although Hubbard's TD came with only 1:37 remaining, Lamar held Canon City on three plays and then called time out with 39 seconds left in the half, forcing the Tigers to punt.

A low pass from center combined with a fierce rush resulted in a blocked punt, which the Savages converted into a 19-yard touchdown pass from Rod Peterson to tailback Arnie Riyher.

"Our flatness in the first half just killed us," said Canon City Lee Hitchcock. "They capitalized on our mistakes and that was what beat us."

Besides the early fumble, two pass interceptions set up each Lamar drive in the second quarter.

"We gave ourselves a heckuva deficit to make up," admitted Hitchcock later. "But they have a good football team."

Canon City redeemed itse'f in the second half, scoring two touchdowns on a 38-yard scamper by Gilliland and a five-yard run by Gangel in the third and fourth quarters.

The Tigers' first TD in the first quarter came on a 33-yard pass play from Gangel to Larry Javernick.

Lamar punted only three times and suffered only three penalties. The Savages also lost two fumbles, but neither were critical to the game's outcome.

"We just let down in the second half," said Lamar Coach Bob Davis. The Savages had gained 302 yards rushing, but did not score in the second half.

Lamar will host Cherry Creek in one of four quarter-final playoffs next Saturday. The second-ranked Bruins defeated Fairview 13-7 to gain the Centennial League's berth.

Dog Racing Winds Down

The countdown on Colorado's 1975 greyhound racing activity winds down to three Saturday ngiht as Rocky Mountain Kennel Club nears the end of a 63-night season which closes with additional programs on Monday (Derby Night) and Tuesday next week.

Mutuel handle for the current meeting is expected to soar over the $19 million mark Saturday and track officials predict betting may hit $20 million when the curtain falls Tuesday.

The previous high wagering season at RMKC was in 1974 when the total handle was $16,443,003.

Post time for the first of 12 races Saturday is 8 p.m.

The feature event Saturday is the Grade A tenth race over the 1710-foot Peak Course.

Heavyweight Bout

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Ninth-ranked heavyweight Chuck Wepner of Bayonne, N.J., is scheduled to fight Irish Jimmy Evans of Pittsburgh, Pa., in a 10-round bout here on Nov. 13.

Central Edges Rival Eagles

PUEBLO — Central's Wildcats, coming back with two touchdowns in the final few minutes of regulation play, clipped Pueblo East 23-22 via a one-point penetration award in overtime Friday night.

One of the touchdowns came with only two minutes left to play when Bob Torrez picked up a blocked punt by the Eagles and ran in for the score from 22 yards out.

Indians Defeat Maroons

Cheyenne Mountain gained a three-way tie for second place in the Southern League with a hard-fought 12-8 decision over Alamosa, while La Junta was clipping Fountain 35-28 and Pueblo County tripped Trinidad 20-6 in other league contests.

In the Cheyenne Mountain-Alamosa game, Frank Baumann scored both Indian touchdowns on a five yard plunge in the first period and a 22-yard run in the final stanza, with just over two minutes left to play. Hal Mortensen scored the Alamosa TD on a five-yard run in the first quarter of play.

Fountain, down by a 28-6 score in the final quarter, put on a strong rally with two TD's by Tony Cornelius and an 18-yard pass play from Dorsey to Gwinn in the last 12 minutes. But the Trojans couldn't hold off La Junta's last touchdown with about five minutes to play.

Pueblo County received three touchdowns from Brian Rusler to clip Trinidad. Rustler scored on runs of one, eight and three yards while Ron Cirone scored from seven yards out for Trinidad's late touchdown.

waited for the puck from Jack Brownschidle in front of the CC net. Brownschidle quickly flipped the puck past MIO's left shoulder for the 7-4 lead.

From there on Notre Dame took advantage of a lackluster CC team. Johnson made it 8-4 at 11:45 with Hamilton coming in with another goal at 12:21 for an 8-4 lead.

Mike Haedrich gave CC its fifth goal at 12:33 after deking Moher, while Dean Magee made it 9-6 on a powerplay goal at 16:20 on a shot from 30 feet straight out in front of the Irish goal.

Magee came back at 19:48 for his second goal to finish the night's scoring.

In other WCHA games, Minnesota defeated Minnesota—Duluth 5-4 in overtime, Michigan beat North Dakota 11-1, Michigan State slipped past Wisconsin 5-4 and Denver downed Michigan Tech 6-3.

Falcons Invade New Orleans

By GORDON CRANDELL
Gazette Telegraph
Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (GT)—Two struggling football teams, Air Force and Tulane meet at 6:30 p.m. (MST) today in the Louisiana Superdome hoping to salvage something out of the current season.

Tulane, a team with a 4-4 record, has been on a roller coaster season. The Green Wave won its first two games, lost two then hit a high pitch for two more victories. In the last two weekends the Wave has suffered a 23-0 loss to Georgia Tech and a 23-10 setback to Kentucky.

However, the victories have been over touted foes Clemson, Mississippi, Boston College and West Virginia. Other losses were to Syracuse and Vanderbilt.

Air Force is somewhat like Tulane. The Falcons, although 1-6-1, have had some high points in a rather dismal season. A tie with UCLA, a 31-30 loss to Notre Dame and last week's 33-3 victory over Army have helped the Falcons gain some respect.

However, losses to Arkansas, Navy, Brigham Young, and Colorado State have been embarrassing. Poor performances against Navy, BYU and CSU have kept the Falcons from what might have been a respectable season.

Air Force Coach Ben Martin has the highest respect for Tulane.

"They are a team that has developed a balanced attack since losing their quarterback before the season began," said Martin. "His loss forced them into using a number of young players, which could account for their up and down season.

"They depend on passing to move them in key situations. Turnovers have hurt them in recent games, but we can't expect them to do this against us."

Last Saturday against Kentucky the Tulane offense scored its first touchdown in eight quarters gaining 790 yards in two games.

Against the Wildcats quarterback Buddy Gilbert threw for 265 yards, but three pass interceptions and three fumbles hindered the Wave offense.

Tulane has been intercepted 13 times in eight games and has lost the ball 15 times via fumbles.

Gilbert will quarterback the Green Wave with Don Lemon, the squad's leading rusher with 362 yards, starting at fullback.

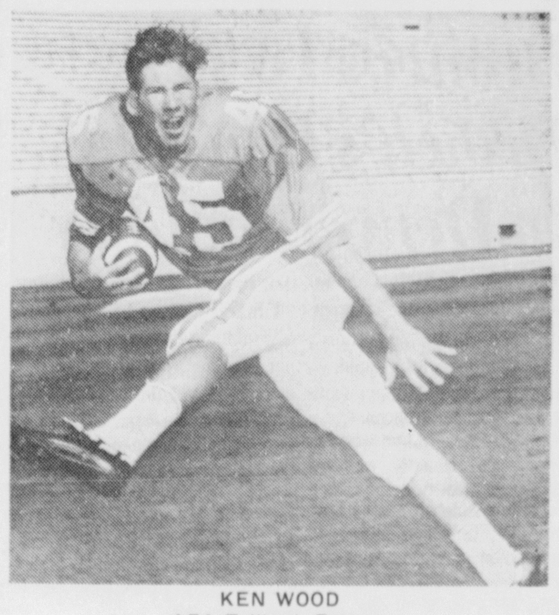

Air Force will counter with senior Mike Worden at quarterback. Mark Bushell will be at fullback with Dave Reiner at tailback.

Junior tailback Ken Wood, who has missed three games with a knee injury, will return and should bolster the Falcons running attack. Wood is Air Force's leading rusher with 279 yards in 76 carriers. Reiner has 266 and Bushell 60 yards.

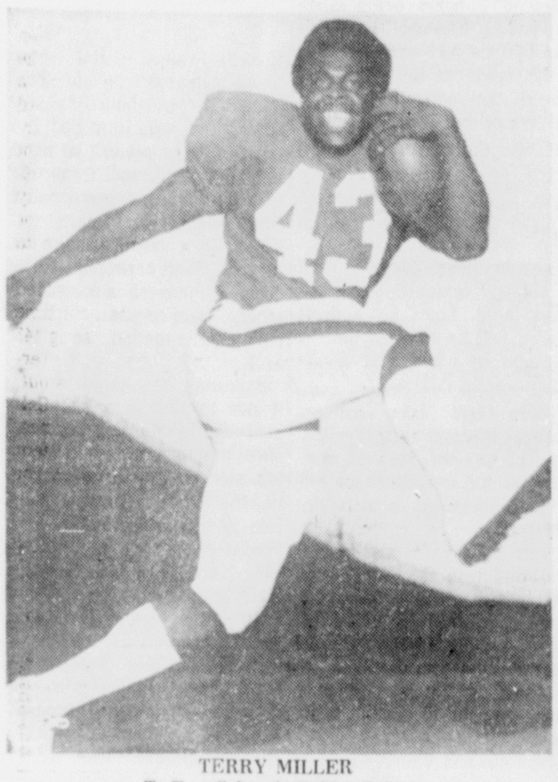

Tulane's defense is led by linebackers Mark Oliver, Jim Gueno and end Bryan Alexander. They lead the Green Wave in tackles with Gueno first with 107.

Air Force's Dave Lawson jumped into sixth place this week in the NCAA field goal department. Lawson has kicked 12 of 21 attempts. Penn State's Chris Bahr is the leader with 18 of 29 field goal attempts. Bahr and Lawson have two regular season games remaining.

Air Force returns home for games with California and Wyoming. Tulane has encounters with North Carolina and LSU in the Superdome.

Miller Back, Brings Cowboys Along

By CHRIS JENKINS
Gazette Telegraph
Sports Writer

BOULDER (GT)—It took two years, but Terry Miller is going to play football again in the state of Colorado. Only now he's in enemy territory.

When Miller graduated from Mitchell High School in 1974, he was one of the most highly-sought prep athletes in the nation. And nobody wanted his talents more than the University of Colorado.

But Miller had other plans, namely Oklahoma State University Wearing the Cowboy Orange, he'll be coming home today as the CU Golden Buffaloes host OSU at Folsom Field in an extremely crucial Big Eight football test. Kickoff is 1:30 p.m.

"This is an awfully important game for us, said CU Coach Bill Mallory. "Oklahoma State is big, physical and has talented players all over."

Mallory didn't go into detail, maybe feeling it a bit premature to speak in terms of bigger things—like a bowl bid for instance.

But the fact is, CU and Oklahoma State would stand a very good chance of landing in a major bowl game with a victory today. CU's only losses were to No. 2 ranked Oklahoma and No. 3 ranked Nebraska and the schedule eases up considerably after the Oklahoma State game.

At 5-3, the Cowboys have also maintained hopes for a bowl berth. A loss today would almost certainly eliminate them from contention. So they'll be counting heavily on a big game from their No 1 weapon, Terry Miller.

It won't be hard to recognize Miller—he's the one with the flashy speed, flowing moves and touchdown written all over his face.

Miller has done just as well in college as he did at Mitchell, where he set an assortment of state rushing records.

His freshman season at OSU was hampered by an injury and the fact that he was placed at the unfamiliar fullback spot. But he's blossomed since Cowboy Coach Jim Stanley installed the "I" formation and moved Miller to tailback.

He already has 730 yards and eight touchdowns. Some of his better games have come against national powers Nebraska, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

It's certain the CU defense will keep a trained eye on Miller, but not so much as to let somebody else slip by unnoticed. Miller is not the only Oklahoma State threat.

The Cowboy offense also boasts a fine fullback in Robert Turner, who isn't far behind Miller with 671 yards. Miller and Turner have carried the ball 119 times. What's most impressive about Turner is the fact that he hasn't been stopped behind the line of scrimmage this season

At quarterback is Scott Burk, another Colorado product making his first homecoming. Burk starred at Cherry Creek the same year Miller made a name for himself at Mitchell.

Stanley's chief concern has to be his defense. After all, it was CU's massive line that blew out his defensive wall so badly last year in Stillwater (the Buffs hammered the Fiesta Bowl-bound Cowboys 37-20).

The fact that only four of his defensive starters are back doesn't do much for Stanley's nerves either. On the other hand, CU returned all but one of those offensive linemen. However, tackle Mark Koncar—considered the Buff's best blocker—has been sidelined with a broken hand.

Oklahoma State still has to contend with the likes of center Pete Brock, a 6-5, 261-pound All-America candidate the pro scouts are drooling over. It's through holes left by Brock over the middle that Buff fullback Terry Kunz does most of his damage.

Kunz ripped Iowa State last Saturday, bulling for 187 yards and three touchdowns in a 28-27 CU victory at Ames. Despite sitting out a couple of games with an injury, the Wheat Ridge grad has 655 yards on the season.

Kunz' status for today's clash is somewhat in doubt, though. His old foot injury is acting up again and Mallory won't know until game time whether Kunz will be ready to go full speed.

The injuries to Kunz and Koncar are significant of the situation in Boulder, where at least three other starters are out of commission. In addition to Kunz and Koncar, linebacker Bart Roth and apache backs Tom Tesone and Randy Westendorf won't play.

"I'm just glad to be playing this one at home," said Mallory, whose squad has been on the road four of the last five Saturdays. "I'll be happy having 60 jerseys this week. We're banged up, and it's hurt our specialty teams."

Rams Can Attain Winning Record Against Miners

EL PASO, Tex.—The Colorado State University football program has been seeking, in vain, a winning record since the last time the Rams cleared the .500 mark—1966.

CSU may finally get it tonight.

The Rams are 5-3 and a victory over Texas-El Paso would clinch a winning record for CSU. Considering, UTEP is 1-7 (0-4) in Western Athletic Conference play) and touted as one of the worst major college teams in the country, the Rams should accomplish their mission. Game time is 7:30 p.m. MST).

The Miners have not beaten CSU since 1970. In last year's contest, the Rams overcame a 17-14 deficit in the second-half to trounce UTEP 56-24.

But all that is meaningless to CSU Coach Sark Arslanian, who feels any WAC opponent is to be respected as a threat.

"I hope our players don't take the Miners lightly," said Arslanian. "We've scored a lot of points (132) in the last two games between the two schools, and I know Gil Bartosh (UTEP coach) will have his players ready."

Despite the miserable UTEP record, Bartosh is not without talent. Sophomore tailback Robert Elliott has rushed for 747 yards, including three 100-yard games. Bobby McKinley is a versatile quarterback.

"We had trouble containing Tennessee quarterback Randy Wallace last week," said Arslanian, and McKinley offers us the same type of problems. He's an excellent running quarterback along with being a good passer."

Arslanian's reference to Tennessee was regarding CSU's 28-7 loss at Knoxville, a game which he feels the Rams could have won.

"I was very disappointed that we didn't beat Tennessee," Arslanian said. "We had our chances, but we couldn't make the big play like Tennessee did. The Vols have a good team and at least we proved we could play with them."

UTEP is a far cry from Tennessee. The Miner ranks have been depleted by injuries, but even more detrimental is their inability to punch the ball over the goal line.

Although Elliott and McKinley keep the UTEP offense rolling between 10-yard lines, the Miners have not scored a touchdown in their last 10 quarters. Against New Mexico last week, UTEP marched off 352 yards total offense but scored only three points.

"So far, UTEP has had more troubles than they've had successes," said Arslanian. "But I look at a coach as great as Gil Bartosh, who has brought some excellent talent to El Paso, and I can't make myself believe that they're not dangerous."

The Rams have been rolling along well behind the explosive passing combination of Mark Driscoll-to-Danny O'Rourke and a well-balanced ground game. But the real star of the show is CSU's defensive unit.

Even with games against such powers as Texas, Tennessee and Arizona State, the Rams defense's statistics rank as the second best in the WAC. Only Arizona State's defensive 11 have given up less yardage.

Brown To Start For Redskins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Larry Brown, who has not started the last three games, probably will be the No. 1 fullback for Washington Sunday when the Redskins meet the New York Giants at Shea Stadium in a National Football League contest.

Although Redskins Coach George Allen would make no final determination on Brown's status, he did report Friday that Brown had been running in the first-string backfield all week because Moses Denson was sidelined with a bruised shoulder.

Brown, who had fluid drained from his battered right knee earlier in the week, ran very well in Thursday's closed practice at Redskins Park, according to Allen, but as far as a final decision, "There's no way I can tell this early."

Brown said after practice, "I know I've been working at fullback all week and that Moses is hurt, if that's any indication."

Brown last started against the St. Louis Cardinals three games ago—and that was at tailback. Since then, he has played sparingly.

He did not carry the ball in a loss to Houston. He gained only 21 yards and caught one pass for a touchdown against Cleveland in a winning effort.

College Football Roundup

Unbeatens Put Marks on Line

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ohio State, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Texas A&M, Arizona State and San Diego State will be out to keep their unbeaten college football streaks intact Saturday while Southern California hopes to get a new one started.

With the official bowl game invitation date one week away, numerous other teams—those whose conferences don't get automatic bids—also will be out to impress the respective bowl committees.

Southern Cal, which dropped from fourth place to ninth in The Associated Press ratings as a result of last week's 28-14 loss to California, has a must-win engagement with Stanford, one of two nose-to-nose match-ups of teams involved in the five-way Pacific-8 Rose Bowl scramble . . . and don't forget more than one team from the Pac-8 and Big Ten Conferences can go to a bowl game this season.

The other key Pac-8 game sends Washington against 18th-ranked California at Berkeley. Cal has a 4-1 mark to 3-1 for Southern Cal, Stanford, Washington and UCLA, which visits Oregon.

"The Trojans are still alive in '75," said lame-duck Southern Cal Coach John McKay, who announced his resignation last week to join the National Football League's new Tampa Bay Buccaneers. The Trojans promptly saw their 12-game winning streak, 18-game unbeaten string and record 28-game Pac-8 unbeaten skein go down the drain.

"We still have the best record on the Pacific Coast — overall 7-1 — and we simply lost a game to a team that played very well," McKay said. "Now we face what has become one of the strongest Stanford teams in the past 10 years. We've proven we have trouble defending the pass, and Stanford throws well, so draw your own conclusions.

"We are not moving the ball consistently on offense and our defense—which had been pretty good all year—was as poor against California as any defense of mine I can remember. They blocked us and we stayed blocked. And when we had guys around the ball carrier, we couldn't tackle him. We're going to bring tackling back into our game plan."

In the Big Ten, top-ranked Ohio State visits Illinois while the Buckeyes' arch rivals, sixth-ranked Michigan, entertains Purdue. Oklahoma, the nation's No. 2 team, entertains Kansas while Big Eight co-leader Nebraska, ranked third and rolling toward a Nov. 22 showdown against the Sooners, visits Kansas State.

In the Southwest Conference, fourth-ranked Texas A&M and No. 7 Texas play at home, the Aggies against Southern Methodist and the Longhorns against defending champion Baylor.

Eighth-ranked Penn State, an independent, entertains North Carolina State while No. 10 Arizona State tries to maintain or increase its 1½-game Western Athletic Conference bulge against Wyoming under the lights in Tempe, Ariz.

Second Ten games find Georgia vs. No. 11 Florida at Jacksonville, Georgia Tech at No. 12 Notre Dame, No. 15 Arizona at No. 13 San Diego State at night, Oklahoma State at No. 14 Colorado, No. 16 Maryland at Cincinnati, No. 17 Miami of Ohio at Western Michigan—a victory gives Miami a record-tying third straight Mid-American crown—No. 19 Missouri at Iowa State.

Ohio State's Woody Hayes wasn't happy with the Buckeyes' 24-14 triumph over Indiana last week.

"We are fortunate to still be unbeaten," he said. "Indiana simply did a better job of preparing than we did. But you learn from your mistakes and we went back to practice this week with the knowledge that we still have a long way to go this season."

Oklahoma, steadily getting healthier, engages in a war of Wishbones with Kansas, coached by ex-Alabama aide Bud Moore.

"I hope our football team won't be looking past Kansas . . . and Missouri . . . to the Nebraska game," said Coach Barry Switzer.

Like Switzer, Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne is "concerned that our players stay sharp and don't look ahead. I think Kansas State has a better team than Indiana, and Indiana came awfully close to beating supposedly the No. 1 team in the country, Ohio State."

Texas A&M, with the nation's top defense against the rush, meets an SMU team featuring Wayne Morris, who became the school's all-time leading groundgainer with a 202-yard effort against Texas a week ago. The Aggies might remember that a loss to the Mustangs kept them out of the SWC throne room last season.

"Our players will be very much aware that SMU has a darn fine football team," said Coach Emory Bellard. Then he summed up what many coaches are feeling:

"We are 7-0, but our whole season is ahead of us."

Chargers, Browns Rolled On While Others Roll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While the fans' attention focuses on the top of the heap, where more than a half-dozen teams are knit into tight divisional scrambles the Cleveland Browns and San Diego Chargers just keep rolling along—and getting rolled on.

The season already is half over for the National Football League—but for the once-proud Browns and Chargers, it still hasn't begun. They are winless and, to show those 0-7 records aren't a fluke, they're also just about last in virtually every team statistic.

For example, San Diego is last in American Football Conference offense, just behind Cleveland. And they're 12th in defense, again one spot back of the Browns. Only the ineptitude of the New York Jets' defense intrudes upon the futility of these two teams.

The Browns, who have scored barely 10 points a game and have allowed nearly 20 per, visit Detroit Sunday in one of the few "easy" games on a brutal schedule. The Chargers, who have been outscored 161-61 in seven games, are home against New England.

In Sunday's other games, it's Atlanta at Minnesota, Houston at Pittsburgh, Cincinnati at Denver, the New York Jets at Miami, Baltimore at Buffalo, Washington at the New York Giants, St. Louis at Philadelphia, San Francisco at Los Angeles, New Orleans at Oakland and Green Bay at Chicago. On Monday night it's Kansas City at Dallas.

"The NFL office makes out the schedules and we have nothing to say about them," said Art Modell, owner of the Browns. "We just have to go out and play whoever they tell us to." And Forrest Gregg, suffering through his inaugural season as their head coach, added: "What difference does it make? They're all tough nowadays. There's no such thing as a patsy anymore."

Gregg, who was part of Green Bay's championship tradition of the 1960s, says Cleveland's plight is "tough to take and harder to understand . . . I never expect to lose any football game. I didn't when I was a player and I don't now as a coach . . .

"Perhaps the only thing that will come out of losing like this is that our young players will get a chance to find out what they can do. We don't expect to lose all our games this season."

Like Gregg, Tommy Prothro is going through a season of disillusionment in his second year as coach of the Chargers. "I've made every effort I know," he said. "I don't know any other pitch to make . . . Maybe we'll simplify some things. Maybe we'll walk through more things on the field."

Tight end Pat Curran and wide receiver Gary Garrison, a pair of veterans, seem to know what's wrong—but they don't really know why.

"Tell me, are they beating us or are we beating ourselves?" Curran asked rhetorically. "We keep beating ourselves. Nobody else is beating us." And Garrison added: "We seem to be snakebitten or something. I don't think anybody can put their finger on what's happening."

The Vikings, rolling toward their seventh National Football Conference Central title in eight years, hold a three-game divisional lead over Detroit going into Sunday's game against Atlanta. The Falcons again may have Kim McQuilken and Pat Sullivan sharing the quarterback duties. Both were ineffective as Steve Bartkowski's replacements last Sunday against New Orleans.

There's a crucial collision in Pittsburgh between the Steelers and Oilers, who share two-thirds of first place in the American Conference Central. The other third belongs to Cincinnati, which will be trying to find its running game against injury-plagued Denver.

Miami owns first place in the AFC East and New York is sagging in the division. But the Jets will be out to avenge a 43-0 shellacking at the hands of the Dolphins a few weeks ago and to prove that they deserve the faith Coach Charlie Winner showed in them a week ago in that missed fourth-and-one situation against Buffalo. The Bills, who pulled out a 24-23 victory over the Jets on a 64-yard Joe Ferguson to O.J. Simpson pass play are 5-2 and can at least stay within a game of the Dolphins by beating Baltimore.

Like the Jets, the Giants are seeking revenge. They were pasted 49-13 in Washington early in the season. And Philadelphia will be going against St. Louis with the idea of erasing the memories of the 42-3 humiliation it suffered last Monday night against Los Angeles.

Los Angeles and Oakland appear to be en route to divisional titles. The Rams hope to show more than they did the first time against San Francisco, when they had to rally for a 23-14 victory, their 10th in a row against the 49ers.

The Saints gave Ernie Hefferle a victory in his debut as head coach last Sunday—but now they face the Raiders, who rolled over Denver 42-17 a week ago. The Bears were on the short end of a 46-13 clobbering by Miami—but such memories generally are forgotten when Chicago faces Green Bay. The two teams are meeting for the 112th time.

Marauder Girls Beat Cortez

CORTEZ — Behind the stellar play of Christie Pierson, the Mitchell girls' volleyball team made a long trip worthwhile in beating Cortez 15-3, 15-13 in the district tournament Friday.

The Marauders earned a spot in next weekend's state tourney at Highland High School with the victory.

Broncos To Test Brown's Bengals In Denver Sunday

DENVER (AP) — Paul Brown's Cincinnati Bengals bring a 6-1 record and impressive credentials into Sunday's National Football League game with the Denver Broncos.

The Bengals have beaten Oakland and Houston and are tied for first place in the American Conference's Central Division. Their lone loss came last week when a late rally fell short and Pittsburgh escaped with a 30-24 decision.

Quarterback Ken Anderson is one of the top passers in the league, hitting on 56 per cent of his throws for 1,564 yards and 12 touchdowns.

The Cincinnati defense is ranked No. 1 in the NFL against the pass, yielding an average of just 105 yards per game. Bengal defenders have picked off 16 enemy passes, two of which were returned for touchdowns.

All of which should make the Bengal coach content when his team meets a Denver team that has struggled to compile a 3-4 mark. Denver hasn't beaten a winning team, and it hasn't put together four good quarters of football yet this season.

Is Brown serious, then, when he calls Denver a "tough" football team?

"The Broncos have had some bad luck but they can exploid at any time," says Brown. Perhaps by explode Brown meant self-destruct, which is closer to the truth.

Denver Coach John Ralston, a proponent of positive thinking who seems always to find sunshine amid the gloom, suggested that some of his players "threw in the towel" after letting a 17-7 third-quarter lead vanish in bowing to Oakland 42 17 last week.

Plagued by key injuries, turnovers and over-all shoddy execution, the Broncos have so far failed to fulfill the high expectations of them this year. Denver's chances of gaining a playoff berth are mostly imaginary now.

Even loyal Bronco fans turned against the players last week, emitting a mock cheer when the Denver offense took the field shortly after another Oakland TD.

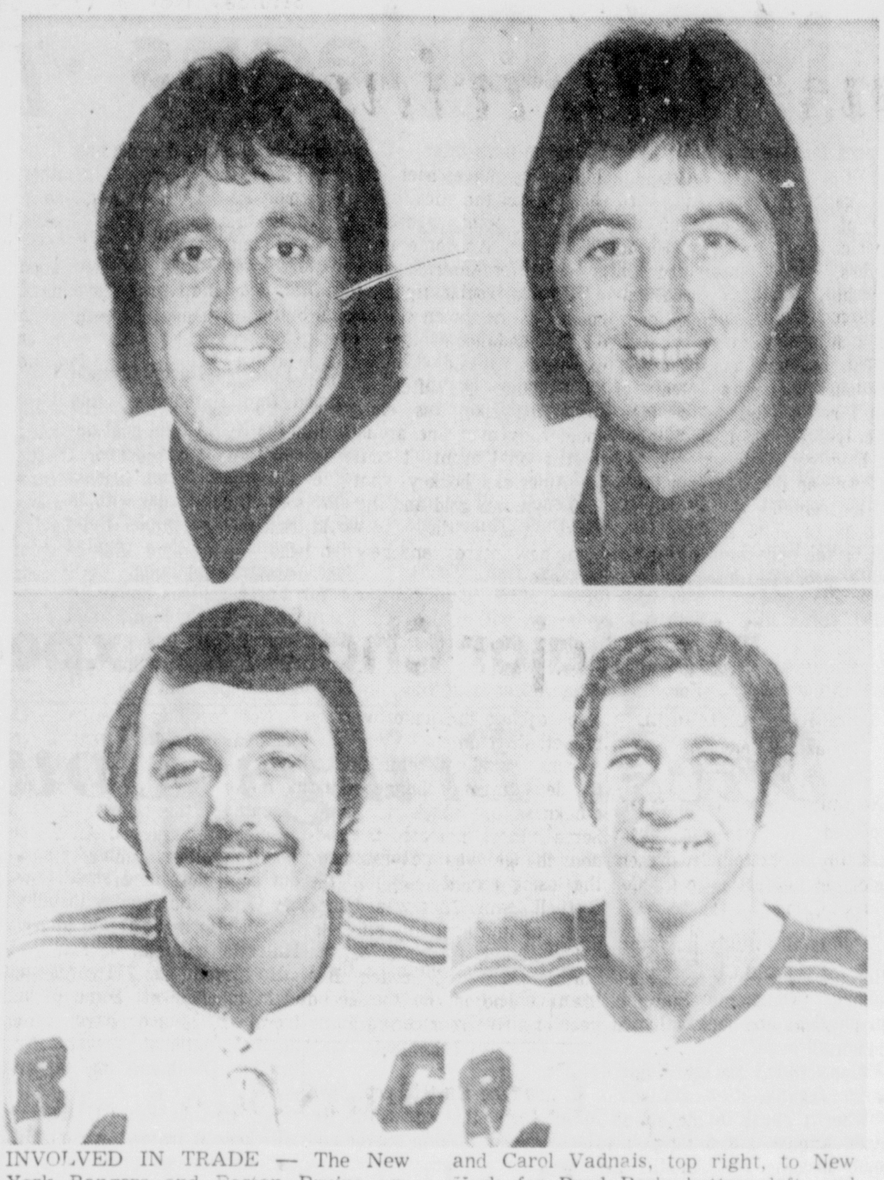

"Our fans will not take a loss like the one to Oakland lightly anymore," says Ralston. "They will not even take playing poorly and winning anymore. They expect excellence, and we're not giving it to them."

Despite the pessimism, beating Cincinnati remains a top priority. "We have got to beat a good team to get started again," Ralston says. "Cincinnati is an excellent team."

Ironically, Denver seems to be suffering through some of the same injury problems that wrecked the Bengals last year, resulting in a disappointing 7-7 record for the Cincinnati team.

Running back Otis Armstrong, defensive end Barney Chavous and cornerback Calvin Jones are three starters who have been shelved by injuries in recent games, and none is expected to return Sunday. Defensive tackle Paul Smith has been limited with a hamstring pull.

Bruins, Rangers Swing Major Deal

NEW YORK (AP) — Two hockey clubs anxious to shake things up did just that Friday when the Boston Bruins sent Phil Esposito, the game's most explosive scorer, to the New York Rangers in a five-player deal that brought defenseman Brad Park and center Jean Ratelle to the Bruins.

Accompanying Esposito, a five-time National Hockey League scoring champion, to New York was defenseman Carol Vadnais. Joe Zanussi, a minor league defenseman with the Rangers' Providence farm team, moved to Boston, completing the swap — one of the biggest in NHL history.

The magnitude of the deal, which involved three of the highest salaried players in hockey, was felt immediately throughout the NHL. Telephone switchboards at New York's Madison Square Garden, Boston Garden and NHL headquarters in Montreal were swamped with calls as news of the trade spread.

"This should prove that there are no untouchables, on either club," said Rangers General Manager Emile Francis.

Both the Rangers and Bruins were eliminated in the first round of last season's playoffs, and when both teams got off to stumbling starts this season, it was apparent that changes were due.

Park and Esposito, both working on contracts reportedly worth in excess of $200,000 per year, were the key men in the trade.

"In Esposito, we are getting the most explosive scorer in modern hockey history," said Francis. "Phil's record speaks for itself."

In the past seven seasons, Esposito won five scoring championships and finished second twice. He was the first player to score more than 100 points in a single season when he led the NHL with 126 points in 1968-69. He has gone over the 100-point mark six times including five in a row, and established the NHL's single-season goal scoring mark with 76 in 1970-71.

"Esposito has demonstrated over the years the leadership and ability we want on our hockey club," said Francis. "He has stamina and durability and he was an integral part of two Stanley Cup championship teams in Boston."

To get Esposito, described by Bruins General manager Harry Sinden as the greatest center in the history of hockey, Francis had to surrender Park, the Rangers' captain, and Ratelle, the second highest scorer in New York club history.

"In Park and Ratelle, we are receiving two people who have been stars in this league," said Sinden. "We feel we're improving the team."

Sinden and Francis said that negotiations had been going on for the last 10 days. That would correspond with the start of a flurry of Rangers deals made by Francis, who confirmed Friday that he had carried out a threat made to the team and placed the entire roster on waivers at that time.

It was the fourth deal completed by the Rangers since then. The spree began when Francis swapped goalie Gilles Villemure to Chicago for defenseman Doug Jarrett. Then he shipped center Derek Sanderson to St. Louis for a draft choice, and he followed that by the sale on waivers of goalie Ed Giacomin to Detroit.

There had been rumors among Rangers players that Francis was not finished dealing but the magnitude of Friday's blockbuster was totally unexpected.

"I'm shocked," said Park, who was with the Rangers in Oakland when the deal was announced. "I had no inkling at all of such a trade and from what I understand, neither did Esposito or Ratelle. It really shook me up. I haven't quite recovered yet."

Esposito and Vadnais were in Vancouver with the Bruins and left immediately to join the Rangers for Friday night's game against the California Seals in Oakland.

"Phil was angry and surprised," said Sinden, who informed the star center of the deal by phone. "He wanted to know why. It was an emotional situation. I told him he deserved answers to his questions, but I don't have all the answers. It was in the best interests of the club."

Asked whether he and Ratelle would report to Vancouver in time for the Bruins' Saturday night game there, Park said, "Sure, we're going to go. What else am I going to do . . . go to work in a mine?"

Both Sinden and Francis agreed that making the deal was one of the most difficult decisions they have had to make as hockey executives.

"From my standpoint, it was the most difficult decision I've ever had to make in all my year here," said Sinden. "Phil and Carol have contributed a tremendous amount to the hockey scene in Boston and New England. We considered very strongly Phil's popularity among the fans, but it was still in the best interests of the club."

"It's not an easy task," agreed Francis. "But sometimes you have to do these things. I've had both Brad and Jean for a long time and I've watched them mature as hockey players and men. I can only wish for them many productive years in Boston."

"This is a very unusual trade in that hockey people seldom deal top players among each other," said Sinden. "It's an emotional situation for all of us."

Esposito, 33, came to the Bruins in 1967 in a six-player deal with Chicago and developed into one of the league's top scorers almost immediately. His 533 career goals place him in a fourth-place tie with Frank Mahovlich on the all-time NHL goal scoring list. He trails only Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull and Maurice Richard in that category.

Park, 27, and Ratelle, 35, both have played in the Rangers' organization throughout their professional hockey careers. Ratelle, who totaled 336 goals, came to the Rangers for the first time in 1960 and became a regular the following season. Park, drafted from Toronto in 1968, joined the Rangers that season. He was named captain of the club before the 1973-74 season and is the highest scoring defenseman in New York history.

In Boston, Park joins another high scoring defenseman, Bobby Orr. "The two of them on the same team will be an exciting thing," said Sinden. "They have been the two best defensemen in hockey for a long time."

Several NFL Clubs Want Memphis' Willie Spencer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Running back Willie Spencer wants to play football, play with a winner and play for pay—in that order, his agent said Friday.

Spencer, who outgained Larry Czonka and Jim Klick while with the Memphis Southmen of the defunct World Football League earlier this year, already has heard from about a dozen National Football League teams, agent John Wooten said.

"Like a rookie, he's most concerned with getting a chance to play," Wooten said. "He's looking for a club that needs his help."

Spencer's second concern is to play with a "top championship club," leaving money third, Wooten said.

"He just wants to play. He's going to get the money eventually anyway, after they (the clubs) see him play. We know how to write good contracts," said Wooten, a former NFL offensive lineman.

Wooten said he didn't want to discuss the money Spencer would demand but wouldn't deny a published report the figure was $350,000 over three years, some of it in deferred payments.

He said he wanted to guarantee a "solid future" for Spencer, who dropped out of Massillon, Ohio, high school in 1972 to play for the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League.

Spencer could not be reached at his home in Massillon.

The NFL teams that have expressed interest in the 21-year-old running back include Atlanta, Dallas, Green Bay, Houston, Minnesota, New England, the New York Jets and Washington, Wooten said.

Wooten said the first item of business for Spencer was the technical matter of being declared a free agent. That would make him available to be signed by any NFL team now that Commissioner Pete Rozelle has cleared the way.

He said he expected the legal issue to be decided early next week.

He said Spencer does not have a personal services contract with Southmen owner John Bassett.

Spirits May Move To Cincy

ST LOUIS (AP)—Harry Weltman, general manager of the Spirits of St. Louis, confirmed Friday that his American Basketball Association team was evaluating a move to Cincinnati.

Referring to the team's dismal attendance in the young season, Weltman said, "The city of Cincinnati has expressed interest in our club. Because of our low attendance we owe it to ourselves to evaluate all possibilities and, therefore, we will listen to what the people in Cincinnati have to say."

Weltman emphasized he hoped to keep the team in St. Louis and added, "We are doing everything possible toward that end."

But after losing a reported $1.5 million last season, it was believed Weltman and other Spirits' owners were approaching the end of their financial limits.

Reports of a possible move to Cincinnati were disgruntling to Spirits' officials, however. This was to have been the turnaround year for the 2-year-old franchise, a remnant of the old Carolina Cougars.

After floundering most of last season, the young team jelled near the end of the season, then shocked the New York Nets by upending the defending ABA champions in the East Division playoffs. The Spirits lost to ABA champion Kentucky in the East finals.

Forward Marvin Barnes won the ABA's Rookie of the Year Award. Former Nets assistant Rod Thorn became the new head coach, and guard Don Chaney was acquired from the Boston Celtics to add experience to the youthful squad.

NHL Referees Given Order To Deal With Violent Acts

TORONTO (AP) — National Hockey League referees were under special instructions Friday to increase enforcement of two rules dealing with deliberate injury or attempt to injure.

Scotty Morrison, the NHLs' referee-in-chief, issued the orders to his officials after Detroit's Dan Maloney was charged with assault following an incident involving Toronto's Brian Glennie Wednesday night.

"We felt when we left our referees' training camp in the summer we had a good level of officiating," said Morrison, "but obviously we'll have to review the situation."

Rule 44 calls for a match penalty to be imposed on any player who deliberately attempts to injure an opponent and calls for the incident to be reported to the president of the league. Rule 49 calls for a match penalty to a player who deliberately injures an opponent.

Meanwhile, other hockey observers questioned the assault charge against Maloney, who knocked Glennie to the ice from behind, then continued fighting with the Leafs' defenseman.

"The whole hockey violence thing has been blown out of proportion," said Punch Imlach, general manager of the Buffalo Sabres. "The law is the law and hockey business is hockey business," he said. "Everyone has their definition of violence in hockey. Mine is two guys standing there hitting each other over the head with their sticks."

Maloney and Glennie didn't do that. The Detroit forward went after Glennie when the Leafs defender hit Red Wings forward Bryan Hextall. He continued the attack and received a five-minute penalty for his action. Toronto scored three goals during the five-minute power play and went on to beat Detroit 7-3.

Glennie was taken to the hospital for observation and was released Thursday.

Detroit team officials Bruce Norris, president, and John Fiegler Jr., vice president and general counsel, issued a ststement Friday saying the club would co-operate "in all respects" with civil authorities in Ontario.

The statement added that the club considered charges against Maloney as charges "leveled against the Detroit Hockey Club."

The officials said the club "has instituted an intensive and extensive investigation into the curious question of why, after 50 years of play in the city of Toronto, the Detroit Hockey Club . . . has been singled out to be charged with an alleged offense that apparently arises out of conduct and on-ice activity that is not different than that which has taken plcae in hockey games in Maple Leaf Gardens thousands of times in the past."

Last January, a Minneapolis district attorney filed assault charges against Dave Forbes of the Boston Bruins after an incident involving Henry Boucha, then with the Minnesota North Stars. The Forbes case went to trial but ended in a hung jury.

Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players Association, said there are four laws in hockey.

"There's a law in the United States, one in Canada, one in Minnesota and now one in Ontario," he said.

"The whole thing has been blown out of proportion."

Arthur Ashe Upset In Stockholm Open

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Adriano Panatta of Italy upset defending champion Arthur Ashe of the United States 6-3, 6-2 Friday to gain the semifinals of the $100,000 Stockholm Open Tennis Tournament.

Also reaching the semifinals were Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg, two of the game's top attractions.

Second-seeded Connors, of Belleville, Ill., took just one hour to whip up-and-coming South African Bernie Mitton in 6-3, 6-1, before the sixth straight sellout crowd of nearly 4,000.

Fourth-seeded Borg, Sweden's 19-year old star, survived a late challenge from Ilie Nastase and crushed the fifth-seeded Romanian 6-4, 6-4.

The 25-year-old Italian No. 1 player, who had lost all five previous matches against Ashe, will face Onny Parun of New Zealand in Saturday's semifinals.

Parun rallied to beat hard-hitting Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn. 3-6, 7-6, 7-6.

Mitton, a 20-year-old from Pretoria and the only unseeded player to reach the quarter-finals, broke Connors for a 2-1 lead in the first set.

But Connors broke back in the next game, tying the score. The American left-hander then scored two more breaks in the seventh and ninth games and won the first set.

Connors, volleying almost to perfection throughout the match, completely steamrolled Mitton in the second set. He took the first game to love with service, broke again for 3-0 after some dazzling volleys, then made another break for 5-0 in the sixth game — the only time Mitton came to deuce in the set.

"I was pretty loose tonight. I think I played better than yesterday against (Tom) Okker. I was more relaxed," said Connors.

"Mitton is a talented player. I'm sure you will see more of him in the future," added Connors.

Williamson Driving for 'Team U.S.A.'

MURRAY WILLIAMSON
A Team U.S.A. in the Making?

By JOE NAVARRO
Gazette Telegraph
Sports Writer

The initial ground work for a proposed "Team U.S.A." hockey team is underway with the hopes of participation in 1976 international competition.

One of the forces behind the team is Murray Williamson, who is in Colorado Springs this weekend for the Colorado College - Notre Dame series.

Williamson has coached five national teams and two Olympic teams.

"After the 1972 Olympic games I was involved in organizing a development league for professional hockey," said Williamson. "That position was phased out and now I am involved with this venture, 'Team U.S.A.'"

The concept originated seven weeks ago at a preseason training camp. The majority of the players brought up the idea of a team styled after Team Canada.

"The players said that if there is going to be a Team Canada, with Canada's top pros playing against Russia, Czechoslovakia and other teams in a tournament, we want to be a part of it," said Williamson.

"I gave the boys my word that if the majority of the American-born pros, the 60-odd players, were interested in something like this we would investigate the possibility of forming such an association.

"The reaction has been tremendous. We've had plenty of people rallying behind the idea. Seventy-five percent of the players have come aboard. We feel that we can do American hockey a tremendous amount of good if we unite and start exploring the opportunities for the young pros — the ones who think they have been on the short end of the stick."

At this point, according to Williamson, it's something that is needed for American hockey.

"There's trouble right now in hockey — the violence, the lack of attendance, the over-expansion," said Williamson. "The game is suffering and something like this endeavor could rally everyone around an international event. It could do for American hockey what the 1960 Olympics gold and the 1972 silver medals did. It would bring new interest and new fans to hockey."

International hockey in other countries is an exceptionally good brand of hockey. Russia and Canada have played twice and have shown just how good the two teams are. The United States team has had to go with players who are left over or who were too young for the pros.

"To throw them into that caliber of competition is not doing justice to the sport or to the boys themselves," said Williamson. "We feel there are many tremendous hockey players who, when united on a national team, could really give our country good representation."

Williamson and his associates have been anticipating a rivalry with the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association.

"We want to think that we can cross lines and co-operate with the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States, the WHA and NHL owners, the players association," he said.

"We feel we can unite all those factions. We can tell the players' associations we are not interested in grinding any axes. We have no connections to any league or association. We just want to give these players a chance to compete in the tremendous international spectacles."

The association has been incorporated after lengthy groundwork. The next steps are to gain acceptance in the 1976 tournament in Canada and participate in a tournament which would have the best of the world teams.

"The United States has been overlooked and underestimated," said Williamson. "We want do do something for the players and the sport itself — now."

No Major Changes Expected Under Clune

Gazette Telegraph
Sports Writer

No major policy changes are expected in the Air Force Academy athletic department under new athletic director Col. John C. Clune.

Clune succeeds Col. Frank Merritt, who is retiring. His appointment was announced Tuesday by Lt. Gen. James R. Allen, superintendent of the academy.

Clune said the change in command caught him by surprise.

"When I came to the academy in August, I didn't figure I would become the athletic director," said Clune. "I knew Col. Merritt was nearing retirement, but as for me taking his position, I had no idea it would be me. Nor, did anyone express their intentions to me at that time."

Clune has served under Merritt as an assistant since August, handling the intercollegiate portion of the athletic department.

A Naval Academy graduate, Clune served as an air officer from 1965-1968 at the Air Force Academy. During that time he also coached the junior varsity basketball team.

Clune would not comment on the departmental change or the quickness in which it came. Some rumors indicated the sudden change was generated by the losing record (1-6-1) of the football team. That was denied by Clune and academy officials.

The change will not affect the status of football coach Ben Martin, who is in the second year of a five year contract.

"No coaching changes are planned in either football or basketball," said Clune. "Also, no major policy changes are anticipated at this time."

Clune was asked if Air Force would eliminate some of the nation's top teams from its schedule in the future.

"We plan no cutback in football or basketball scheduling," said Clune. "Our football schedules are complete through 1983 from what I understand. Final contracts have to be completed before announcing our future schedules."

Army and Navy, which found it difficult to compete with national football powers, have dropped Eastern powerhouses Penn State, Syracuse and West Virginia from their schedules.

"We will maintain our regular policy of playing nationally recognized schools throughout the country," said Clune. "We are a national school and our approach is to play a national schedule."

Clune also was questioned about the possibility of Air Force and Colorado College renewing their rivalry in hockey. The series was not renewed this year.

"We will make every effort to play Colorado College in hockey next year," said Clune. "I haven't been here for hockey, but I understand a good rivalry was being established. I hope we can renew the series next season. I think games with Colorado College would add a great deal to the hockey interest of fans in the Pikes Peak Region as well as both schools."

In recent years Air Force has lost athletes to Army and Navy because they could not meet Air Force academic requirements. Clune saw no change in Air Force policy.

"We are always evaluating our entrance requirements," said Clune. "We are always looking for reasons why we can't attract leading athletes and why we are losing them. This isn't my decision, as you know, but it rests with the administration. No changes are anticipated at this time."

Tarkenton Rarely Lauded, But Close to Record Books

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Francis Asbury Tarkenton has silently endured some subtle snubs during his 15-year career, but he's overhauling many of his critics as he approaches most National Football League's career passing records.

"He's just a tremendous football player," said Green Bay Coach Bart Starr after Tarkenton riddled the Packers for 24 completions in 30 tries for 285 yards and three touchdowns last Sunday in the Vikings' seventh straight victory without a loss.

Despite the 35-year-old Tarkenton's accomplishments, he has never been selected All-Pro. And, for that matter, he was not a consensus high school All-State pick or All-American at the University of Georgia.

"I really think I've gotten enough recognition during my career though," Tarkenton said Wednesday night. "I haven't given any special significance to not being All-American or All-Pro."

Tarkenton is within 10 touchdown passes of Johnny Unitas' NFL career standard of 290 and he's only 49 completions behind the legendary Golden Arm from Baltimore, who spent 18 years in the game.

"I've always thought of Unitas as the greatest quarterback who ever played," said Tarkenton, who has never missed a game in his pro career because of injury. "It's a tremendous thrill to be approaching his records."

Tarkenton's phenomenal durability, ironically, may be a major reason he's never been given All-Pro recognition.

"I think he's generally taken for granted because he's there every game and noboby thinks too much about it" said a Vikings official. "A Ken Stabler, for example, pops up with one great year and he's All-Pro."

The expansion Vikings took Tarkenton, after Tommy Mason and Rip Hawkins, on the third round of the 1961 draft. He quickly became labeled as a scrambler because he spent many afternoons running for his life in those early, building years at Minnesota.

"Sure, Francis was a wild man then," said center Mick Tingelhoff, who still snaps to his longtime teammate and friend. "You'd never know what Francis was going to do with the ball."

In 1966, Tarkenton was traded to New York, where he spent five successful seasons but couldn't get the Giants into the playoffs.

"It's much more satisfying to break records when you're on a winning football team," said Tarkenton, who has already passed for 1,496 yards and 14 touchdowns while connecting on 63 per cent of his passes in 1975.

"Records are meaningful to all players I think," said Tarkenton. "And a quarterback is in a position where there are some individual guidelines on his play in throwing the football."

Vikings Coach Bud Grant says Tarkenton will be known as the game's greatest quarterback when he retires.

Grammas Says No Miracles, But Promises Improvement

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Alex Grammas, promising no miracles but pledging vast improvement in the floundering Milwaukee Brewers, accepted a three-year contract as manager of the American League team Friday.

"In my years in baseball, no one has been better recommended by a broader spectrum of people, by every organization and everybody who knows him. It's just quite remarkable," Brewers President Bud Selig said in introducing the long-time coach of the world champion Cincinnati Reds to a news conference.

Grammas, 48, succeeds Del Crandall, fired on the last day of a 1975 season which saw the Brewers plunge from percentage points of first place on July 4 to a fifth-place finish, 28 games off the pace, in the AL East.

"I personally feel hiring Alex could be the single most important thing in the short history of the Brewers," said General Manager Jim Baumer. "We have a lot of young players and he's very good with young players. I know he's the guy who could pull it all together for us."

"I'm very optimistic," said Grammas, who has been with National League organizations throughout his 27-year baseball career.

"I know no miracles can be performed, but I know this ball club can be improved tremendously," he said. "I'm completely new to this ball club and the players. I don't know them and they don't know me. That might help them get a fresh start. Hopefully, any problems that might have been here might not surface."

Grammas, who spent 10 years as an infielder with St. Louis, Cincinnati and the Chicago Cubs, coached for the Pittsburgh Pirates from 1965 through 1969 and has been third base coach and top lieutenant for Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson since 1970.

"Anyone who goes into this game, if he has any ambition at all, wants to be a big league manager," Grammas said. "I've spent 10 years with two great ball clubs, and I think I've learned an awful lot about what it takes to make a ball club."

"No one can completely copy another man because you've got to be yourself, but certainly the six years I've had with Sparky Anderson have got to be an advantage," he said. "If you can emulate him in any respect, it's got to be a plus."

"You've got to start with confidence in your ballplayers and show we believe in them," he said. "I think our ballplayers will be proud to be Milwaukee Brewers."

Crandall's downfall was precipitated by injuries, dissension, charges that he was not a tough enough disciplinarian and problems with second baseman Pedro Garcia and outfielder Sixto Lezcano.

Grammas, a graduate of Mississippi State University, said a manager must be a communicator, leader and organizer more than a drill sergeant.

"I like things organized, thought out," he said. "I like to know where I'm going at all times, or else I get very upset. Sparky used to get upset with me because I'm that way. He would ad lib all the time, but I'm not that way. I like to think a situation out ahead of time."

"Latin ballplayers, black ballplayers, it makes no difference," he said. "They're all ballplayers. Anybody in a Milwaukee Brewer uniform is another ballplayer."

Grammas, the only candidate the Brewers had flown here for interviews, hired former major league pitcher and Montreal Expos' coach Cal McLish as pitching coach almost immediately after accepting terms.

"The baseball world is a very small world, and word travels very fast when a man does his work very well," Grammas said. "Cal does a tremendous job, and getting him is a tremendous start in the right direction."

HUNTING and FISHING

GOOD HUNTING CONDITIONS in the southern part of the state have apparently offset muddy conditions in the northwestern regions and enabled Colorado deer hunters to get off to a fast start this year.

According to the recently completed three-day summary of the deer season, 3,311 deer have been checked through Division of Wildlife check stations at Idaho Springs, Penrose and Towaoc. That figure represents an 8.3 percent increase over the 3,056 animals checked during the same period last year.

Most of the animals checked thus far have been taken by resident hunters, according to Perry Olson, Division of Wildlife big game supervisor. During the first three days of the season, 79.6 percent of the deer checked were harvested by Colorado residents, Olson said. During the first three days of the 1974 season, 79.1 percent of the animals checked were taken by Colorado residents.

A total of 11 black bears have been checked during the first three days compared with just two checked during the same period last year. Forty-two bears were checked during the elk season bringing the total to 53 thus far. During a similar period in 1974, only 28 bears were checked. The black bear season runs concurrently with that for deer and elk, and most of the bears harvested are taken by hunters pursuing other quarry.

The Division's three check stations sample the harvest by sex and age of the animals taken in the state's more important deer management units. Compiled at the third, fifth and ninth day of the seasons, that data is used as a kind of barometer for the season itself. The actual number of hunters and of animals taken will be collected through a random survey of sportsmen at the end of the hunting season.

IF THERE ARE GOING to be any late deer or elk hunting seasons in Colorado this year, they will be set by the Colorado Wildlife Commission at its November meeting in Denver and not before.

The reason for that, according to Perry Olson, Division of Wildlife big game supervisor, is that no one will know whether or not there will be a need for such seasons until then.

"Our wildlife management objectives are designed to be met during the regular hunting seasons," Olson explained. "If for some reason the harvest doesn't meet those objectives, we may ask the Commission to set some late seasons. But obviously we'll need to evaluate the regular season before thinking about any late seasons."

According to Olson, three, five and nine day summaries of the deer and elk hunting seasons are compiled by the Division staff from check station reports. While the main purpose of such summaries is to gather information on the sex and age structure of the harvest, the summaries also provide data which will also be used to determine if post-seasons are necessary.

The Wildlife Commission will consider such data at their next meeting beginning at 1:30 p.m. on Nov. 20. That meeting will be held at the Division's Denver Headquarters, 6060 Broadway.

THE DIVISION OF WILDLIFE is offering subscribers to Colorado Outdoors, the Division's official bimonthly magazine, the 1976 Colorado Wildlife Calendar featuring paintings of six of the state's rare species of birds.

According to editor Charles Hjelte, three and-or five-year subscriptions will bring readers the free calendar which is highlighted by reproductions of Denver wildlife artist Don Malick's paintings of the peregrine falcon, the trumpeter swan, long-billed curlew, spotted owl, whooping crane and bald eagle.

The calendar with the prints will be offered with new, renewed or extended subscriptions.

"Good prints of wildlife art are very hard to come by, and we think Malick's work is among the best," Colorado Outdoors editor Charles Hjelte said. "Subscribers will not only get the beautiful wildlife calendar but also will get the most expert information on hunting, fishing and all kinds of outdoor recreation in Colorado."

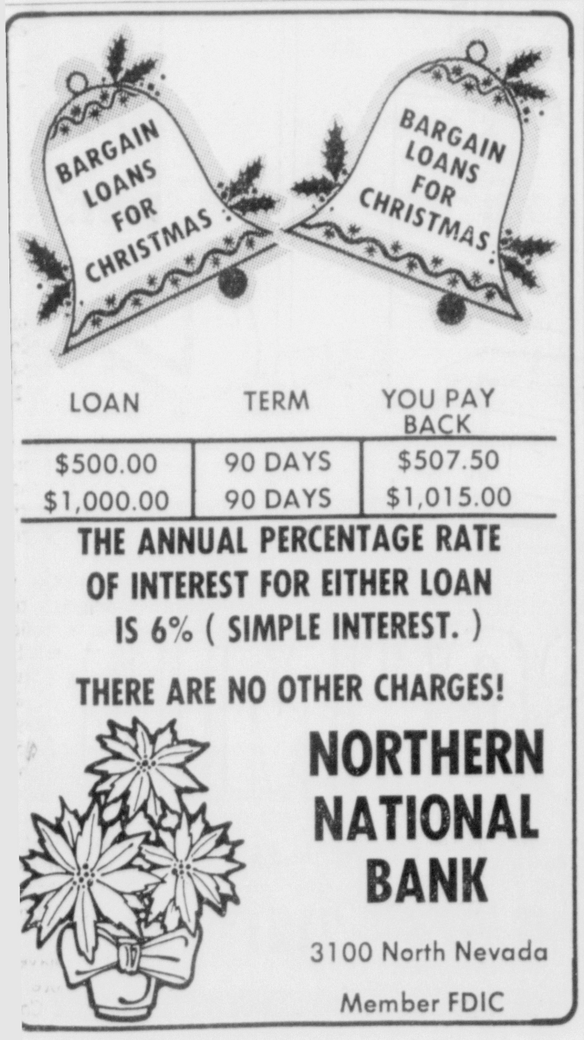

The three-year subscription rate is $5. The five-year rate is $7 and includes the 30 issues of Colorado Outdoors, the 1976 Wildlife Calendar and A Look Back, the 64-page book on the history of game management in Colorado and the Division of Wildlife. Colorado Outdoors is published six times each year by the Colorado Division of Wildlife.

Those wishing to take advantage of the new subscription offer should mail check or money order along with the address to which they want the magazine delivered to Colorado Outdoors, 6060 Broadway, Denver, Colo. 80216.

Red Sox Manager Arrested On Drunk Driving Charges

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — Boston Red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson was arrested Friday on a drunken driving charge after his car was observed weaving at 30 miles per hour down a freeway, authorities reported.

Johnson, 48, failed a field sobriety test after a California Highway Patrol officer stopped him early Friday on Interstate 80 near his Pinole home, a spokesman said.

Spain Sends Troops To Halt Marchers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spain warned of minefield horrors and moved troop reinforcements to the Spanish Sahara on Friday, but there were signs that Morocco was trying to pull out more than 100,000 civilian "conquest marchers" from the disputed desert through renewed negotiation.

A Madrid government source confirmed military reports that two infantry battalions numbering 1,500 men left Las Palmas in the Spanish Canary Islands at midday, headed for the desert capital of El Aaiun, 100 miles away.

The infantrymen — together with 13,000 other troops — were put on alert after hordes of Moroccan civilians began crossing into the phosphate-rich territory Thursday in a peaceful march to reassert what they consider Moroccan sovereignty.

The Moroccans made no advance Friday, which gave rise to reports that a Spanish-Moroccan compromise had been reached on how far the marchers could go. This was denied, however, by Spanish and Moroccan sources at the United Nations.

The marchers remained throughout the day camped 2½ miles from the Spanish army's "dissuasion line" of barbed wire and armored cars barring their way further into the Spanish Sahara. The Spanish army claimed it had planted 20,000 mines behind the barbed wire and warned any advancing Moroccan would be shot or blown up.

Well-informed Spanish sources reported that one or more top-level envoys from Moroccan King Hassan II would arrive in Madrid for talks with government leaders, possibly Saturday morning. The sources said the request for the meetings had come from Morocco not Spain.

Morocco's ambassador to Spain met in Madrid with Premier Carlos Arias Navarro for more more than an hour Friday afternoon at the ambassador's urgent request.

A Spanish government official said he did not know if the talks concerned the envoys' arrival but said: "Our position always has been that we will not talk as long as the marchers are there," about 5½ miles inside the mineral-rich Spanish Sahara. "Of course," he added, "it would be hard not to see them if they came."

The commander of Spain's 15,000 Saharan troops warned, meanwhile, he would order his men to fire on any advancing Moroccan.

In New York, Morocco dropped word at the United Nations that it was prepared to mobilize its royal army if Spanish troops used force against its civilian horde.

The threat did not appear to move the Spanish government.

"We will not fire first," a government source in Madrid said. "But we will not let a single man across those minefields. They only way they could get across would be a Chinese solution — to let the first thousands be blown up until there are no more mines."

The 105,000-square-mile Spanish Sahara and its estimated 80,000 population is claimed by Morocco, Mauritania Algeria and Spain. Spain says it is ready to end 91 years of colonial rule and proposes a self-determination referendum next spring. Algeria backs the referendum, but Morocco and Muritania want the territory now.

Dog Sought in Village Seven

A 4-year-old boy is undergoing painful rabies shots because a dog which bit him Monday has not been located.

The child was in the front yard of his home, 4588 Crimson Circle North in Village Seven when a dog of mixed ancestry, gray with black spots, bit him.

Anyone knowing anything about the dog is asked to call the police department, the Humane Society or the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Gaines, 574-0016.

If the dog can be located and tested to be found free of rabies, the child will not have to complete the innoculation series.

TURISTA WHILE TRAVELING

A reader from Port Jefferson, N.Y., writes: "Two years ago, I accompanied my husband on a business trip to Mexico. Within a few days, I developed turista, even though I could not have been more careful about what I ate or drank.

"The watery diarrhea came on suddenly and I must have had 15 episodes the first day. Cramps, nausea, weakness, vomiting, chills and fever really incapacitated me, but gradually, after a few days I improved. I know that my experience is not unusual, and that many people have their vacations ruined by this diarrhea and sickness.

"Why is turista such a common problem? My husband is planning another trip to Mexico, and I would love to go, but it would be pointless if I am going to spend most of the time sick in my hotel room. Is there a way to avoid turista south of the border?"

One third to a half of the three million Americans who travel to Mexico every year are afflicted with this illness. (I've seen no figures on how many Mexicans develop diarrhea when they visit the United States, but it would be a mistake to think that turista is limited to Mexico. Tourists in Europe and other foreign lands also develop it.)

The cause is usually attributed to unpurified water or fruits and vegetables that have been washed in such water. However, many people who, like yourself, faithfully drink only bottled water, avoid ice cubes in drinks and shun all fresh foods, still fall victim to turista. Obviously, there must be more than one cause of the illness. I agree with those who contend that overexertion, too much sun, climate change and spicy foods also play a role in this disorder. Bacterial toxins produced by microbes such as E. coli, salmonella, giardia lamblia and shigella also have been implicated.

Unfortunately, until we do know what causes turista, we cannot recommend a foolproof prevention. However, I usually advise persons planning trips abroad, especially to places such as Mexico and other Latin and South American countries, to follow a prudent diet and sight-seeing schedule, to get plenty of rest, and to go prepared with a good antidarrheal medication (Polymagna or Lomotil).

BELL'S PALSY AND THE MIND

Mrs. S. Y. from Glen Ellyn, Ill.; write: "My son has had two attacks of Bell's palsy—one when he was five years old, and the other at 23. I've been told that his ailment affects the mind, but I find this hard to believe because my son is bright and normal in every way. Does Bell's palsy have no adverse effect upon the mind?"

No, it does not. Only one nerve is involved in this disorder, and that is the facial nerve which is outside the skull and has no effect upon the brain.

TROUBLESOME VEINS

Miss L. L. from Monterey, Calif., writes: "I am recovering from a very plainful attack of phlebitis. My doctor says this was caused by my varicose veins, and that I should have them surgically removed to avoid a recurrence. How soon do you think I should have this operation?"

You should wait until all signs of the infection from the phlebitis are gone. I assume that your doctor has tested the circulation in your legs and has concluded that more conservative mehtods of control, such as exercise and wearing support stockings, will not control the varicosities.

Dr. Van Dellen has written a comprehensive guide on Circulation. For a copy of this booklet, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to "Van Dellen-Circulation," c-o the Gazette Telegraph P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to NEWSPAPERBOOKS.

Increases Shown

City Aviation Director Frank W. Ladwig reported Friday that both passenger enplanements and aircraft operations showed increases last month at the Municipal Airport.

He said 21,363 passengers enplanned last month, representing an increase of four percent over October, 1974.

Aircraft operations totaled 15,370 in October. That was a nine percent increase over a year ago. General showed the greatest increase of operations over the military and commercial affairs.

Illiteracy Figures

It is often alleged that something so important, so essential to the smooth running of a well-ordered society as education, can only be left to the government to perform. Accordingly, billions and billions of tax dollars have been spent, school teachers have clamored for and received countless privileges, and America's progeny, via compulsory school attendance and tax funded classrooms, have been forced to keep their minds in suspended animation for the duration of their adolescence — and adolescence sustained as long as possible.

You would think that, with all that effort and mobilization of instruction, most Americans would be able to do calculus forwards and backwards as well as motor through all the pages of Gibbon and Shakespeare like a fanatical Evelyn Woods.

The U.S. Office of Education, itself designed to orchestrate the whole educationist soiree, has released a study finding that 23 million American adults are functionally illiterate. That means they cannot so much as read even a help-wanted ad. And 39 million cannot handle basic computations such as figuring unit prices of various-sized boxes of breakfast cereal.

So much for the dream that government could force everybody to be "educated" and could do it best.

Guernica De-Mythologized

By JEFFREY HART

It has taken more than 38 years for the final verdict to come in on the bombing of the town of Guernica during the Spanish Civil War. But two of the world's leading authorities on the history of that war have now quietly conceded that Guernica, the symbol that shook the world, was a fraudulent myth.

Philip Knightley recently published a book entitled "The First Casualty," the point of which is that in war the first casualty is truth. In it he traces the genesis of the Guernica story, the evidence pro and con, and concludes with the "state of the question"—i.e., is the story true?

I myself have not exactly been a bystander on the Guernica issue. Several years ago I published an article entitled "The Great Guernica Fraud," in which I examined the evidence then available on the subject. I concluded that the Guernica story was almost certainly a fabrication, and that it had been brilliantly manipulated by the international Left as part of its psywar campaign over Spain.

My article became the subject of acrimonious international controversy. I was delighted, indeed, to be assailed by the official press in places like Prague and Budapest. In due course, the U.S. magazine "World," successor to Norman Cousins' "Saturday Review," published a superficial article reassuring its right-thinking readers that they could rest easy, that, yes, the Guernica myth was true after all.

HOW IT GOES

The Guernica myth, enshrined in song, story, and Picasso mural, holds that on April 26-27, 1937, German planes terror-bombed the defenseless Basque town of Guernica, which had no military importance, as a deliberate exercise in psychological warfare. This view gained international acceptance. Indeed, it still conditions feeling as regards the Civil War in Spain.

Knightley carefully traces the story to correspondents covering the war, but not on the scene in Guernica at the time of the attack. The most influential account was that of George Steer of the London Times, which was reprinted internationally. Here is some of George Steer's 1937 prose, and I excerpt from his account the sentences that went into key features of the myth:

"Guernica, the most ancient town of the Basques and the centre of their cultural tradition, was completely destroyed yesterday by insurgent air raiders... The fighters, meanwhile, plunged low from above the center of the town to machine gun those of the civilian population who had taken refuge in the fields... the raid on Guernica is unparalleled in military history. Guernica was not a military objective... The object of the bombardment was seemingly the demoralisation of the civil population and the destruction of the cradle of the Basque race."

Almost 40 years and mountains of evidence later, what is the state of the Guernica question? Philip Knightley asked Hugh Thomas, the British historian, and Herbert Southworth, formerly Regents Professor of History at the University of California, and a specialist on Guernica.

Interestingly enough, Thomas has changed his mind since his 1959 book on the war. Then he had written that "it is difficult not to conclude that the Germans deliberately bombed the town in an attempt to destroy it, observe in a clinical way the effects of such a devastating attack," etc. But as the scholarly controversy has gone on, Thomas has altered his view. He replied to Knightley's inquiry that "I continue to believe that the town was bombed by the Germans," though "probably not as a shock attack on a specially prized city, but as one on a town where the Republican-Basque forces could regroup."

Herbert Southworth agrees that the bombing was a military and not a terrorist attack. "It was a highly successful military operation which had the advantage of the right wind and the right time to spread the flames. Why was it done? This is more speculative. There is nothing to show that the Germans wanted to test civilian morale. German documents tend to show that it was a tactical operation."

AUTHOR'S CONCLUSION

Here is Philip Knightly's conclusion: "So Steer's original accusations, the birth of the legend of Guernica — that the town was not a military objective and that the purpose of the bombing was the demoralisation of the civil population — now stand contradicted... On all the evidence available, Guernica was bombed for tactical military reasons... If Steer had not been there to write about it, Guernica would have passed unnoticed, just another incident in a brutal civil war." Of course Steer's version achieved enormous resonance through the megaphone of the international Left.

It will be interesting to see whether these scholarly conclusions sink in, so to speak, and become absorbed by intelligent opinion — defined, in this case, as those who can identify Guernica at all. Quite possibly the myth is more potent and enduring than the truth. It had its uses in 1937 and it still has its uses. Nor was it the first time, or the last, that we have been had by a clever psywar operation.

These Days

The Bolsheviks Began It

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

The late Garet Garrett predicted that our century would be one of "revolution within the form," meaning that the left would take over by stealing all the fair words that naive people count on to maintain republican institutions. We would be done in by semanticists skilled in the black art of turning vocabularies inside out.

The Bolsheviks began it when they said the land belonged to the peasants. It turned out, of course, that the land belonged to the state. The Weimar Republic in Germany was constitutionally murdered by Nazis who pursued a strict legality.

In America, Huey Long said we'd get fascism and call it progressivism. We haven't succumbed as yet, but it could be that we are on our way.

Meanwhile, the useful idiots among us who presume in the press to set our Latin American policy continue with their campaign to make a martyr of Chile's late Salvador Allende. They are still taking Chile's supposedly democratic Marxists at face value.

Allende's widow tours the country proclaiming the purity of her dead husband's devotion to the Chilean constitution of 1925, which made free political speech an absolute. Article Three of that Constitution reads: "It is not considered a commission of crime or abuse to hold or spread any political idea."

PLANNED SWITCH

Allende, with the rest of the Chilean Marxists, counted on this Article Three to protect them while they were accomplishing their "revolution within the form." But they meant to jettison the whole business about free speech and pluralistic democracy once they had the police, the army and the courts under their control.

The former Chilean Supreme Court President Enrique Urrutia, who protested Allende's course to no avail while the Communist "revolution within the form" was going its merry way in his country, has been serving as an exasperated one-man truth squad in his effort to counter Senora Allende's tour of the U.S. To an Inter-American Conference on Freedom and Security in Washington, D.C., Urrutia brought the results of investigations carried out by several doctoral candidates at the Law School of the Catholic University in Santiago.

FALSE REGISTRATION

In the election which gave Allende a third of the vote (which was enough to give the Communists de facto control), there were, in Urrutia's words, "hundreds of thousands of false registrations in the voters' registries, which did not correspond to living people." The registrations were "in keeping with forged identity papers issued by public offices infiltrated by Soviet Communists, producing thus a result that did not represent the true opinion of the Chilean people."

Allende, in short, got his power by voting faked I.D. cards. This is something the New York Times's Anthony Lewis might explain.

Allende swore he would conform to the constitution, but, once in power, he acted on his own in matters that were of "a legislative character." Urrutia says "the Chamber of Deputies stated it so in its historic resolution passed August 22, 1973... in which it declared the Marxist government as illegitimate." Urrutia's own judiciary was, he says, "left powerless to enforce its rulings; more than 8,000 opinions were not enforced because they affected the freedom of the interests of persons or the ideologies connected with the government they had replaced. In brief, the government was not supporting the law with the law enforcement corps."

The Chilean Communists were on the verge of consolidating their "revolution within the form" when the people, in Urrutia's words, "felt intuitively the approaching danger" and acted. After the overthrow of the Allende regime, it was discovered, as Urrutia puts it in an outraged sentence, that "all along the country the Marxist militants had enough arms for the day set for the final confrontation, something no democrat ever dreamed of."

"Revolution within the form" does not make counter-revolution a lovely thing. But it certainly does explain it. We don't have to have either in the U.S., but we'll surely have the first if our liberals don't recognize when they are being verbally hornswoggled.

Nation's Press

We Remember, Too Well

(Wall Street Journal)

Senator Proxmire thinks President Ford might still reverse himself and help bail out New York; after all, other Presidents have made dramatic about-faces.

"President Nixon turned around on a dime on the subject of price controls," Senator Proxmire remembers. We remember that too. It was on a pleasant Sunday, August 15, 1971. It was one of the worst mistakes a U.S. President has ever made. And it, too, was brought about partly by the nagging of Democrat Congressmen.

The eventual economic repercussions were thunderous. The combination of price controls and currency inflation sent consumer demand soaring. It wasn't very long before some producers were being squeezed between rising world prices for basic commodities—which the U.S. could not control—and fixed prices on their manufactures. Shortages developed as more and more producers found it unprofitable to meet the unprecedented demand.

When the lid finally blew off, as was inevitable from the start, the U.S. had raging price rises, an oil producers' cartel and a badly dislocated economy as the fruit of its follies. There is a strong parallel with New York's troubles. To an important degree they too can be attributed to the combination of inflation and controls—in this case the city's rent controls. The resulting destruction of returns on property has seriously eroded the city's tax base.

Senator Proxmire would have the President bail out New York with no promise that fundamental mistakes would be corrected. He would invite creation of another great inflation machine. We remember that Nixon about-face well and we hope President Ford remembers it too.

Panamanian History

A knowledge of historical facts enables free men to discern the winds of the age in which they live and to chart their course accordingly. Here are the important historical facts about Panama and the Panama Canal. Knowledge of them will help the intelligent citizen to form an opinion about whether our country should maintain sovereignty over the Panama Canal.

1821 — Central America revolted against foreign rule by Spain. Panama joined with Colombia, which had already declared independence. For the next 82 years Panama tried unsuccessfully to sever its connection with Columbia. Panama was thus still ruled by a foreign country.

1881 — A private French company headed by the successful builder of the Suez Canal, Ferdinand de Lesseps, purchased a concession from Colombia to build a canal in Panama. Disease and financial problems caused the company to go bankrupt.

1889 — A second French company tried and failed. It got permission from Columbia to transfer its concession and property, which were purchased by the United States for $40 million.

1903 — The U.S. Congress approved the Hay-Herran Treaty which would have given Colombia $40 million for the Canal. Because the President of Colombia had not been legally elected, he convened the Colombian Congress to approve the treaty. The Colombian Congress, which had not met for five years, declined the treaty, hoping to secure a larger sum.

11-3-1903 — Tempers flared in Panama when Colombia rejected the treaty. Panama, which had been trying without success for over 80 years to free itself from Columbia, declared its independence. Financial backers of the new Panama Canal Company (J.P. Morgan) provided financial assistance to Panama.

11-6-1903 — President Theodore Roosevelt, as head of State, formally recognized Panama as an independent country. Two American warships were standing by to protect American interests and to discourage Colombian troops from attacking Panama.

11-18-1903 — The newly created Republic of Panama granted perpetual sovereignty of the 10-mile wide Canal Zone to the United States.

2-26-1904 — The Panama treaty was ratified by the U.S. Senate. In exchange for an initial payment of $10 million and an annuity of $250,000 (an annuity which was to begin 9 years later), plus our country's guarantee of Panama's independence, the United States received perpetual sovereignty over the Canal Zone "to the entire exclusion of the exercise by the Republic of Panama of any such sovereign rights, power or authority."

8-15-1914 — The Panama Canal officially opened to traffic. Construction costs totalled $375 million. (This was 52 times the cost of Alaska, which has 1,100 times as much land.)

1922 — Colombia accepted $25 million from the United States as payment for its loss of Panama. In exchange, Colombia recognized Panama as an independent Country. The U.S. then withdrew guarantee of Panamanian independence and increased the yearly annuity being paid to Panama to $430,000.

1-25-1955 — The annuity payment to Panama was increased to $1,93 million, and the U.S gave Panama $28 million of real estate and buildings that were no longer needed by the Canal Zone Administration.

3-3-1973 — The U.S. vetoed a United Nations Security Council resolution which called on the United States to negotiate a new treaty to "guarantee full respect for Panama's effective sovereignty over all its territory." Instead of frankly stating that the United States have the sovereign right of ownership over the Canal Zone, U.S. representatives weakened the U. S. position by stating the U. S. wanted to negotiate with Panama "without outside pressure." The U.N. Security Council resolution was strongly backed by the Communists.

This is the historical record of relations between the United States and Panama. Weigh the record and form your own opinion as to whether our country has rightful sovereignty over the Panama Canal Zone, or whether we are intelopers, as Communist propaganda attempts to picture us.

Do the people of a country have a right to declare themselves free and independent of another country as Panama did in 1903? Did it have the right to give perpetual control over part of its territory to the country who protected it against a more powerful country who wanted to keep it under subjection, and which was going to use military force to do so? In short, do these United States occupy the Canal Zone as rightful owners, or do we not? You decide.

THE GREAT FALLACY

"The great fallacy of all eras: 'Power can be delegated and then controlled by the people'." So said Mr M.D. Whitney on the front page, October 27.

Now that statement may be related to Winston Churchill's "Democracy is the next worst form of government in the world; the only thing any worse is everything else." Both Messers Whitney and Churchill are largely correct in the view of many, but both may have erred somehow, too. Mr. Churchill's favor of democracy neglects to note that it has historically led to dictatorship by the short route, that representative republics seem to approximate freedom most closely thus far... while they survive before being turned into democracies. So much for Mr. C. for now.

Surely Mr. Whitney is right: Once power is delegated to those who seek it, the people who delegated it are out of luck if they hope to control or influence its use by the deputy—we see it again and again. But what is the alternative? We need one, but what?

The founding fathers seem to have hoped to shackle the power grabbers, while still making it possible for the populace to deputize certain specialists to do that which the individuals of the public could not well do for themselves; i.e., wage war, and a very few other things allowed to government by the Constitution. They made a nice try, but it hasn't worked too well in the face of long term aggressive power grabbers. You'll note in passing how closely present federal activities match what the Constitution allows.

But how could it be otherwise? Farmer Jones didn't like to grade the county road in front of his place, was willing to chip in a little toward having a specialist do it for him, and his neighbors felt the same. Reasonable, and effective for them . . . but look at today's road and bridge fund and its supporting taxes. Wouldn't you rather grade the road a little than be thus held up? Even if it is less efficient that way? The Smiths weren't very hot teachers, agreed with the Browns to hire, (mutually) a good teacher for their kids. Results were beneficial all 'round . . . until the descendant of that arrangement saddles a town of 2,000 with a $2 million bill for just one school building in which to indoctrinate kids, perforce, with corruption. Would you rather teach your own kids? Even if you had to study hard to do it properly?

Of course, Jones, Smith and Brown did something voluntarily and controlled it. The descendant systems are neither voluntary nor controlled, and that difference is what makes one good, the other terrible. Probably that is what Mr. Whitney was talking about, in abbreviated epigram. But despite the effective old arrangement, despite the good of voluntarism, somehow the business became a matter of forcing people to do the will of some petty despot. How did the change happen?

How can we return to voluntarism — how can we make it work even if we recover it? Editor Grove told me not to defend my place against vandals and burglars; said that voluntarism would do it for me. When I asked how, he cited the TV bank teller, which does indeed stop bank holdups, but helps my burglar proofing not at all. This sort of bat guano discredits the value of voluntarism, insures it will be discounted and discarded as "horse-and-buggy," and we do without. I stopped the burgling with a large aggressive dog and a positive attitude that makes few friends. It is a poor (but effective) solution.

Well, how can we maintain control ourselves, without grading our own road, teaching our own kids (not a bad idea of itself) and without having to defend ourselves ineffectively against enemy thugs and enemy nations? How can we have the help of appropriate specialists, without giving them control over us?

Perhaps Man has not yet found out how, and his latest, perhaps finest experiment goes to the dust bin with the dying United States of Socialist Rulers. Who else would like to hear more about it, from wise men like Mr. Whitney, and others with ideas? This is not an invitation to Groveian pontification; that lost its usefulness when he told me not to defend by force (rely on voluntarism), but admitted he would effectively stop violence directed against him and his.

May we have some thinking discussion of Mr. Whitney's premise?

F.C. WARE
Woodland Park, Colo.

Editor's note: Mr. Ware's letter, above, in which he makes free use of our space to criticize our editorial philosophy, referred to as "Groveian pontification," reminds us of another episode in the life of an editorial writer several years ago.

In that instance another contributor, a member of the distaff side, wrote a series of blistering letters calculated to nail our hide to the fence; attacks which we consistently published and patiently tried to answer. Finally, exasperated, the lady penned a concluding diatribe, replete with spleen and venom, which she demanded that we publish, while ordering us to refrain from saying anything in our own defense. That letter, too, was duly published and answered.

Although not quite as explicit as that dear lady, Mr. Ware affects the same brand of illogic; he wants to make use of our space to beat us over the head, so to speak, while informing us, in advance, that he is not interested in any editorial response we might undertake in our own behalf. Apparently, according to his way of reasoning, "Waresque pontification" is A-OK, but "Groveian pontification" is unacceptable.

But to answer his charges more directly.

Never have we, either editorially or individually, told Mr. Ware, or anyone else, not to defend his place against vandals. Even if we believed that one's property should not be defended, we would not so presume, and we defy Mr. Ware to show us where we did.

What we may have said in the first instance, although we do not recall addressing our remarks to him, is that each use of force in human relations, by its very nature, adds to the level of violence in the world and that there are often other, non-force, methods of protecting property which, in use, do not add to that level of violence.

The television bank teller innovation cited, which Mr. Ware admits works, is one such method. Better locks, stronger doors and gates, higher fences, electronically activated alarms and floodlights, etc., are others; none of which provide perfect protection (there is no such thing), but all of which add to the desired protection to some degree, and being inanimate objects, are incapable of generating force themselves.

Apparently, Mr. Ware jumped to the conclusion that we were suggesting that he install a television bank teller system to guard his own property. While he is perfectly free to do so, in his case that would probably be inappropriate. A bank, with much of value to protect, might deem such a system practical; while others, with less to safeguard, might be satisfied with less expensive methods.

What we might have said, in the second instance, and, again, we do not recall addressing our remarks to Mr. Ware, is that we might resort to the use of force, but if we did, we believe we would have hastened to add that, even so, the use of force in human relations, however justified, adds to the incidence of violence in human society. The study of natural law teaches us that for every action there is a reaction.

The world being what it is, there will be instances when the individual believes he is justified in using counter force. But, if we really want a more peaceful world, as most of us presumably do, it behooves us to begin looking for ways in which force-provoking situations can be avoided. As when the concept of "defensive driving" is employed, it is amazing how often violence - generating confrontations can be detoured.

By all means, let's have some thinking discussion of Mr. Whitney's premise by Mr. Ware, or anyone else who cares to make the effort.

In the meantime, however, may we suggest that Mr. Ware read that Whitney epigram again and then give thoughtful consideration to the contents of his own letter today. If, as the epigram states, and as Mr. Ware accepts, it is a fallacy to believe that power can be delegated and then controlled by the people, then how can Mr. Ware justify his persistence in searching for a method by which power can be both delegated and retained? That, may we further suggest, adds up to a contradiction in terms.

Agency Expands To Meet Minorities' Needs

By NANCY HECHT
Gazette Telegraph
Staff Writer

Catholic Community Services of Colorado Springs is not only for Catholics.

Although it is funded by the Archdiocese of Denver, its objectives cross denominational lines. "Religion is absolutely not a factor," explained Jerry F. Knauf, board director of the local organization.

The organization's objectives, furthermore, are continually expanding to meet more of the community's needs. Last week, responding in part to the need for more space, Catholic Community Services moved from its former location at 14 W. Costilla St., to its new home at 29 W. Kiowa St.

Among the organization's newer services is a budget counseling service directed by Mrs. Jean DeHerrera, a certified budget counselor and Federal Housing Authority (FHA) housing counselor.

The service, unlike similar budget counseling services available in the community, is free to those who need it.

At present, Mrs. DeHerrera said she works with some 70 individuals and families, but notes that the case load can be increased in the next month when another budget counselor will be trained into a full-time position.

Available financial services include a debt liquidation program whereby Mrs. DeHerrera, in close co-operation with her clients, will negotiate with creditors to bring debt obligations in line with an individual's ability to pay.

Mrs. DeHerrera often works with the local arm of FHA, which will contact her when a debtor is near default. She also works with mortgage companies in cases of delinquent mortgage payments.

Tenants, too, may avail themselves of the service.

Mrs. DeHerrera added that the organization provides more than counseling for immediate financial problems, but emphasizes follow-up counseling to help prevent future financial crises.

Plans for saving and education on buying techniques and the effective use of credit are explored through these counseling sessions, Mrs. DeHerrera said.

Another of the newer services is geared towards the resettlement of Vietnamese refugees. Operating through the United States Catholic Conference, the resettlement program has already aided in resettlement of 170 local Vietnamese refugees.

Catholic Community Services acts initially as a liason between the three resettlement camps provided for the Vietnamese and area sponsors. The organization is actively involved in sponsor recruitment.

Once the Vietnamese refugees arrive here, the organization will provide any services it can to aid in the cultural assimilation of the refugees.

Two bilingual Vietnamese staff workers provide the much-needed language training for the refugees.

Knauf said the organization tries to help the refugees find whatever they may need—from food, clothing and shelter, to homes and jobs.

"Our goal is to help them become as self-sufficient as possible," Knauf said.

Outreach, to Mexican-Americans, low-income people and the elderly, is the third major service offered by the organization.

Under the direction of Sister Clarita Trujillo, the outreach program serves as a liaison between needy persons and the various local service agencies. Sister Clarita explained that she tries to maintain open and continuous communications with the various community agencies, as well as the local colleges. She serves on the advisory committee of the Pikes Peak Family Counseling and Mental Health Center.

"I relay to the agencies the needs of the community as expressed to me," she said.

She also tries to approach and maintain continuous contact with certain community groups, particularly Mexican-Americans. According to Knauf, the generalized goal of the outreach program is "to help Mexican-Americans achieve social justice."

One method for working towards this goal is through voter registration drives, which are conducted by the organization, Knauf said.

A staff worker will canvas door-to-door in Mexican-American neighborhoods, Knauf said, adding, "We find an amazing number of people who don't know they're not registered."

Although these newer programs are the most active at present, the organization is still involved in adoption services, which was its primary function when it first opened in 1968 and until the number of children available for adoption declined in the 70s.

A formalized arrangement with a private adoption agency in Pueblo recently was established to facilitate adoption arrangements for El Paso County residents. Since February, Catholic Community Services has placed seven babies through the Pueblo agency, according to the Rev. Don Dunn, director of the Denver Archdiocese. He said 39 other families currently are using the organization's adoption service.

Knauf said he hopes to expand the adoption service by contracting for part of the adoption work load from El Paso County Department of Social Services. According to Knauf, the county has discussed with him the possible necessity of cutting its adoption program.

"We're interested in adoption and court-ordered custody evaluations because we have the ability and experience," Knauf said.

Immanuel Lutheran Observes 75th

In the continuing observance of its 75th anniversary, Immanuel Lutheran Church is planning two special observances Sunday.

The Rev. Henry Fingerlin, pastor of Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church in Littleton, will be the guest speaker at the 8:30 and 11 a.m. services. He served as Immanuel's assistant pastor from 1958 until 1963.

At 2 p.m. the congregation will hold its annual meeting, to adopt the 1976 budget, elect officers, and to select a new head pastor. The Rev. Walter A. Enge, pastor since 1942, will retire in 1976.

The Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran congregation U.A.C., of Colorado Springs, was organized Nov. 18, 1900.

On Easter Sunday, 1901, Otto Luessenhop was installed pastor with a salary of $25 per month, and in 1902, a constitution was adopted and signed.

The first church building was dedicated in 1903 and the school was begun in 1951. The present church was dedicated in 1949 at Pikes Peak Avenue and Institute Street. The congregation which now includes five churches, has over 1600 baptized members and 1200 communicant members.

Amish Seek Converts Too

HARTLAND, Maine (AP) — Three years ago, when Roland Church set out in a horsedrawn covered wagon with his wife and two small children, he thought he would never finish his mission.

Recent converts to the Amish faith, the Churches traveled through 48 states preaching the gospel, seeking followers to a way of life which espouses simplicity and sobriety as the only way to heaven.

After three years on the road, the Churches won only a small following. They were joined by David Byler, his wife, Katie, and their 12 children — all Amish by birth. A third man joined them, but dropped out after a few months.

"There're not many people who are ready to live a life for Christ," said Connie Church, a 28-year-old native of Caribou, Me.

Last June, the two families founded a settlement here on land loaned to them by Lewis Elliot, an old friend of Church. They live several miles outside of town, on top of a hill, at the end of a two-mile-long dirt road.

The men, dressed in floor-length light blue robes, and the women, in long light blue or dark brown smocks, their heads covered by black scarves, have become familiar sights to residents of Hartland.

"I think they were a novelty to start with. Of course, with a small town everyone talks," said Daryl L. Humphrey, Elliot's son-in-law.

"I find them to be honest, God-fearing people," said Napoleon Plourde, the group's nearest neighbor. "I would rather have them for neighbors than a lot of people in this world."

Until a few weeks ago, the two families lived in the wagons which carried them across the country. The Churches have since moved into a log cabin they built during the summer, and the Bylars have fixed up a vacant house which Elliot hopes they will protect from vandalism.

The men and boys have worked clearing the fields, cutting wood for winter, while the women have cared for the garden and put up food.

Before he got religion, Church said he was known as a poacher and bootlegger who would wander into Hartland wearing a coonskin cap, with a pistol and hunting knife strapped to his side.

He said he first became interested in the Bible while serving time in the South Windham correctional center for safecracking. While there, he took correspondence courses in religion and later attended the Zion Bible Institute in Wast Providence, R.I., where he met his wife.

Later he became an assistant pastor at the Full Gospel Church in Hartland. But when he converted to the Amish faith and "learned more about the scriptures, they booted me out," he said.

The Amish, a strict Mennonite sect, share a literal fundamentalist interpretation of the scriptures. The Churches' conversation is frequently punctuated with quotes from the Bible.

Hoping that his settlement will become a growing Amish community, Church is planning a trip on foot through Canada and Alaska in search of converts.

In 1874, South Carolina traders alone shipped 160,000 deerskins to England.

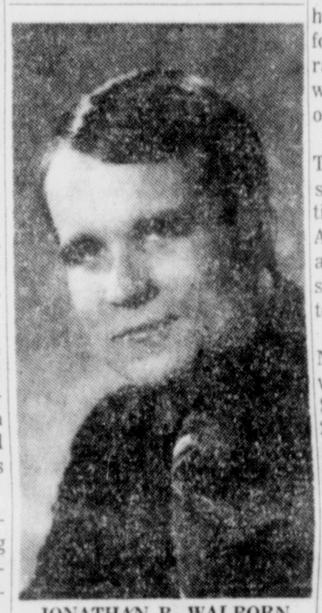

Dioramas Show Catholic Deeds In Community

Dioramas illustrating the contribution of the Catholic community in the Colorado Springs area from 1795 to 1975 are currently on display at Penrose Public Library, 20 N. Cascade Ave.

Eighteen models, constructed and designed by the junior high school age children of Divine Redeemer School, show the educational and spiritual contribution to the area.

Also included are models of two hospitals, the clothing program and St. Vincent de Paul, feeding programs, youth and senior citizens programs, and the Vietnamese program of parishes adopting Vietnamese families to aid in their resettlement.

The display will be in the lobby of the library through November.

JONATHAN B. WALBORN

Walborn Joins Temple Baptist Church Staff

The Rev. Jonathan B. Walborn has joined the ministerial staff of Temple Baptist Church, 1311 Columbine Road.

Walborn's major responsibility will be in Christian education. He received a master's of theology degree in Bible from Dallas Theological Seminary, Tex., in 1970.

Walborn comes to Colorado Springs with his wife, Janice, and three daughters, from Fort Collins, where he was campus minister of First Baptist Church.

Baha'i Teachers To Present Public Lectures

In conjunction with World Faith Week, an annual event of the Orthodox Baha'i Faith in honor of the birthday of their founder, Baha'u'llah, the Colorado Springs Baha'i community will present two special lectures open to the public.

At 6 p.m. Tuesday, Baha'i Teacher Steve Hansen will speak on "Progressive Revelation and the Promise of the Ages," at the Penrose Library auditorium. He also will show slides of the World Baha'i Center in Haifa, Israel.

Ms. Gayle Foss of Santa Fe, N.M., also a Baha'i teacher, will present a lecture at 7 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 15 in room 249 of Dwire Hall at the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs.

Admission to both lectures is free.

Local Church To Hold Adult Classes

New, 12-week adult classes will be held at First United Methodist Church under the direction of the Rev. Gilbert Zyzniewski, minister of education.

Two courses will be held from 9:40 to 10:40 a.m. Sundays. Kenneth Felts of the Colorado Division of Rehabilitation will present one course on an "Overview of Social Concerns," and Zyzniewski will offer a class on "The Meaning of the Church" during the same hours.

From 5:30 to 7 p.m. Sundays, the Rev. Philip Green will offer a class on "Death and Dying." During the same hours, the Rev. Douglas McKee will teach a class on the "Theology and Practice of Worship."

For the duration of the 12-week courses, a church school class will be held for children from kindergarten through sixth grade at the same hour as the classes.

For reservations, call 471-3522.

Colorado Southern Baptists Meet

Calvary Baptist Church will host the 1975 annual meeting of the Colorado Baptist General Convention here Tuesday through Thursday.

The convention begins at 7 p.m. Tuesday and continues through 8:40 p.m. It resumes at 9 a.m. Wednesday, running until 9:50 p.m. Activities begin at 9 a.m. Thursday and concludes with a message by Dr. Albert McClellan of the Nashville, Tenn., executive committee, at 11:35 a.m.

Several out-of-state personalities will be present for the convention. Dr. Barry Garret, associate director of information services with the Baptist Joint Committee in Washington, D.C., will speak at 2:45 p.m. Wednesday on current bills in Congress. B. J. Chenault, a vice president of the Southern Baptist Convention (SBC) Annuity Board in Dallas, Tex., will speak at 9:50 a.m. Thursday on retirement plans.

Joe Underwood of Richmond, Va., will speak at 11:10 a.m. Thursday on world missions. James W. Clark of Nashville will speak at 9:45 a.m. Wednesday on the Sunday School Board. Charles E. Hancock, Atlanta, Ga., will speak at 10:55 a.m. Wednesday on the Home Mission Board report.

The meeting will also include many visiting choirs and there will be other visiting speakers.

This meeting will observe the organization's 20th anniversary. The Convention was organized at First Southern Baptist Church in Colorado Springs in 1955. D. C. Bryant, former pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, served as the Convention's first president.

Several satellite events are also scheduled around the annual Woman's Missionary Union (WMU) meeting here Monday and Tuesday. The plans were announced by Mrs. Charles Farr, state president, and Miss Sydney Partis, state director.

The "Acteen-o-rama" will be held at Skyway Baptist Church from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday. Age-level conferences for WMU leaders will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Monday at Calvary Baptist Church.

A birthday celebration for the Cooperative Program will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Tuesday in the fellowship hall of Calvary Baptist Church. Exhibits, music and refreshments will be part of the come-and-go affair. A luncheon for pastors' wives will be given by the Colorado WMU at noon Tuesday at Skyway Baptist Church.

The WMU meeting itself will include missionary information, and a presentation of work plans. Featured speakers include Jack Day, missionary in Brazil; Beverly Sutton and Joe Underwood, consultant in Evangelism for the Foreign Mission Board.

For more information on the convention call Calvary Baptist Church at 632-4442.

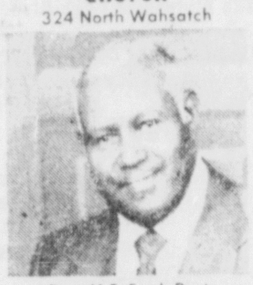

INTERIM PASTOR — Dr. Donald Karl Dale will serve as interim pastor for the next several weeks at Vista Grande Church of God, 4870 Flintridge Drive. Dale is engaged in individual counseling and family and child guidance in conjunction with a number of local churches and holds a number of advanced degrees.

APPOINTMENT MADE — Sister Ann Madelein Willard, a member of the Order of the Sisters of Loretto, was appointed by Monsignor William H. Jones, vicar for education of the Archdiocese of Denver, to the position of director of education for the southern area. Sister Ann has served as director of public relations at St. Mary's Academy for the past three and a half years. She is a graduate of Webster College, St. Louis, Mo., and Notre Dame University, where she received a master's degree in communication arts.

ELS Forms New Lutheran Church Here

The Evangelical Lutheran Synod (ELS) is sponsoring a new mission church in Colorado Springs.

The Rev. Paul G. Petersen, formerly of Waterloo, Iowa, is the pastor. He and his family will reside at 1112 Chambers Drive.

Services are temporarily being held at Gateway United Presbyterian Church, 731 Castle Road, until a permanent church is obtained. The worship service begins at 8 a.m.

The ELS is a conservative synod with its headquarters in Mankato, Minn., where its owns and operates Bethany Lutheran College and Bethany Lutheran Seminary. Mainly a midwest-based synod, it has congregations throughout the United States and supports foreign missions in Central and South America. Formerly known as the Norwegian Lutheran Synod, it is the first ELS church in Colorado.

Reasons for Decreased Mass Attendance Told

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religious Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot of people who used to go to church regularly now are sleeping through Sunday mornings, particularly among Roman Catholics, and a recently completed study indicates some unexpected reasons for it.

The final analysis of the data, which finds a 21 per cent decline in Catholic Mass attendance in the last decade, says the biggest reason for it is the continuation of the Church's prohibition of contraception.

The report, based on information gathered by the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago, blames the maintenance of that ban for 48 per cent of the drop in Catholic church participation.

Another 26 per cent of the drop was blamed on the Church's refusal to allow divorce and remarriage, while another 26 per cent was attributed to changing attitudes "toward the Pope as head of the Church."

The study involved "full probability samples," says William C. McCready, a research team member who wrote the final report, and is more accurate than methods used by most polling organizations.

He says it also was designed to elicit information to get at underlying reasons why so many have quit attending Mass and behind what he terms the "upfront reasons" that don't reveal the roots of their motivation.

While the expected surface reasons turned up — such as loss of interest or lack of desire or ability to get to church — the report found that other causes lay behind the surface explanations — the birth control, divorce and papacy issues.

"These are not things that people answer in response to questions about why they aren't going to Mass," McCready says, but responses about their attitudes on the Church's position on the other matters brought out that they are the underlying cause.

A preliminary report which came out earlier this year had cited only surface reasons, but the final report presented recently at the annual meeting of the Federation of Diocesan Luturgical Commissions in Boston focused on the basic factors.

Both the preliminary and final reports of the 1974 study, made by a research team headed by the Rev. Andrew Greeley, found that changes in the liturgy, the Church's worship forms, had not caused the reduced attendance as some critics have claimed.

The findings are "without a doubt the best data available on Catholics in this country," McCready says, and the issues of birth controls, divorce and the papacy "definitely" were behind the drop in Mass attendance.

That fall-off has been particularly steep among Catholics in the last decade, although attendance among Protestants has remained relatively stable in that period, dropping only 1 per cent, from 38 per cent in 1963 to 37 per cent in 1973.

Jewish attendance was up in the decade, from 17 to 19 per cent.

But among Catholics, 71 per cent typically were in church on Sunday in 1963, but the latest Gallup poll found this down to 55 per cent in 1973. The Chicago study found this fell another 5 per cent, to 50 per cent, in 1974.

In the face of the decline, various efforts are being made to stem it. Six Ohio bishops, led by Cincinnati's Archbishop Joseph L. Benardin, recently issued a special appeal for regular Mass attendance.

Discussing the meaning and value of worship, as well as Church rules requiring Mass attendance, the appeal says:

"Like a friendship which grows and deepens through signs, our friendship with God grows and deepens through signs: the words and actions of the Mass."

Krishna Followers Want To Be Noticed

Hare Krishna!

The words are a greeting from a young woman in a flowing white sari, sitting in a pick-up truck outside a Hare Krishna temple.

Inside, an odor of incense fills the air as a young man in jeans and a light-colored shirt kneels and touches his head to the bare, tiled floor.

"Hare Krishna, Hare Krishna, Hare Krishna. . ."

The words are also a mantra, required to be chanted by devotees of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness 1,728 times a day.

But the unusual clothing and shaven heads of some members are not requirements of the religion, said a temple official, Mathuranath das, 25.

They are worn much of the time by those living in the temple because "it's a practical type of dress for the type of life we lead," he said.

"Also people notice us," added Mathuranath, in white dhoti with pouch to match, along with strings of beads on a clay-daubed neck and a thin topknot of hair. "We want tobe noticeable because we are trying to remind people of Krishna."

Part of the reason for the Krishna attire is to mark those who are teaching, those to whom the public may turn with questions about Krishna, much as a policeman wears an identifying uniform, Mathuranath explained.

However, those in the group have discovered that many people "are taken aback by the way we dress," he said.

So they sometimes wear ordinary clothing to make it easier to approach people, he said—for example, when they are distributing literature and seeking donations.

"It's not a trick or anything," Mathuranath said, "but a way of getting to know people easier so they can find out we're really nice people."

Is the wearing of street clothes a change of image for the Krishnas? Not really, says the temple official, only a sudden awareness by the public of something that has gone on since the Orient-based religion was brought to this country 10 years ago by His Divine Grace A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada.

Krishna members are vegetarians and do not use alcohol, drugs or tobacco.

Except for married couples and families, men and women live in separate quarters. Sexual relations are considered wrong except for procreation.

Temple residents arise at 3:30 a.m. to begin their devotions at 4 in the colorful temple room, before the Vyasasana or throne-like seat containing a picture of Swami Prabhupada draped in ropes of pink and white carnations.

The morning and evening hours are devoted to chanting the Hare Krishna and studying the sacred Sanskrit scriptures of the Vedas, Mathuranath said.

During the day everyone has a job to do, either cleaning and cooking at the temple, distributing Krishna literature or working in the movement's incense business, Spiritual Sky Enterprises.

As the sound of a tape-recorded Hare Krishna chant drifted from a nearby room, Mathuranath said those who have found Krishna—another word for God, he said—are happy because they satisfy their desires by serving him.

Just What Doe s Kosher Mean?

NEW YORK (CNS) — The labels on some food items in the supermarket bear the imprint "kosher" or "pareve."

Just what do those terms mean?

To the Jew who observes the dietary laws prescribed for centuries as part of his religion, such markings mean that it is all right for him to use the products, under certain conditions.

To the non - Jewish customer there is no special significance to items marked kosher or pareve although he may have wondered on occasion what the terms meant.

Because many Jews, particularly younger ones just setting up housekeeping, may not be fully aware of the fine points involved in keepng kosher, the Jewish Publication Society of America has issued a do-it-yourself kit for Jews.

Called "The Jewish Catalog," the volume is described as "a guide or manual to the range of contemporary Jewish Life." it was compiled and edited by Richard Siegel and Michael and Sharon Strassfeld, young Jews who obviously gained a great deal of spiritual insight as well as enjoyment in putting the book together.

They explained that they had tried to show as many approaches to Judaism as they could in their catalog, which they designed to help people accommodate to the fast pace of changes in society and the environment.

"The orientation is to move away from the prefabricated, spoon-fed, nearsighted Judaism into the stream of possibilities for personal responsibility and physical participation," they wrote. "This entails a returning on the control of the Jewish environment to the hands of the individual."

With this for an introduction, the catalogers moved on to various aspects of Jewish life, including the practice on keeping kosher, which is a must in Orthodox h o m e s and is being pursued increasingly in Conservative and Reform Jewish families.

First several kosher terms were defined. Kashrut pertains to laws relating to kosher food, while kosher itself mean "fit" or "proper" and refers to food that is permissible under dietary laws. It also refers to the required practice of serving meat and milk dishes at separate meals.

Treif, another term, applies to any food that is not permitted under dietary laws or any utensil that may have become "unfit" for use. For example, different dishes and utensils are used for everyday milk and meat dishes. Two additional sets are used only during the observance of Passover when special foods are served. If the "wrong" implements have been used or milk and meat have been mixed, the utensils become treif and must be kashered.

Kashering is an involved process in which the treif item must be scalded or scorched before it can be used again. Moreover, the process of soaking and salting meat to remove the blood is called kashering.

The authors of the catalog went into some detail in their research on kashering, going so far as to recommend that to kasher an oven it must be cleaned with a kosher cleaner and then gone over with a portable propane blowtorch.

If the stove is fueled with gas, it is necessary to insure against any leaks, and it is advisable to use a welder's mask and gloves for "stoves have been known to blow up in people's faces."

An alternate means of kashering an oven is to clean it thoroughly and then heat to its highest degree for half an hour.

Pots, pans and other utensils may be boiled in water, with care being taken to use separate containers or sinks for kashering meat and milk dishes and other items.

As for pareve, any food bearing that label is considered to be neutral — neither milk nor meat. Fruits and vegetables are included in this category, and they may be served with either milk or meat dishes, which are called milchik and fleishik.

Among kosher foods are any fish with both fins and scales, which excludes shellfish, eels, catfish and frogs.

While fish is regarded as pareve — neutral — it must not be cooked with meat, though it can be served or prepared with milk and milk dishes.

Most domestic fowl are kosher, while wild birds and birds of prey are treif. Among the forbidden winged creatures are swans, vultures, storks, owls, eagles, and ostriches.

EVANGELICAL COVENANT CHURCH — Church youth will host the Singing Youth Group from Canon City at the vesper hour 6:30 p.m. Sunday at the church, 2913 San Luis Drive.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH — A luncheon will be served 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. today, in conjunction with the church bazaar, East St. Vrain and Tejon Streets.

OUR SAVIOR'S LUTHERAN CHURCH — The Senior High Lutheran League will have breakfast at 7 a.m. Sunday at the church and attend the 8:30 a.m. service as a group. The 8:30 and 11 a.m. worship services will be dedication of time-talent-treasure. A children's sermonette will follow at the "100 percent attendance Sunday." A chili lunch will be served at noon by the athletic teams of the parish.

PRINCE OF PEACE LUTHERAN CHURCH — The Senior League will sponsor a family movie night 7 p.m. Sunday at the Church. Walt Disney's "The Barefoot Executive" will be shown. Cost is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children, with proceeds benefiting World Hunger.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH — Children of the church have started a three-week gathering of needed items for poor children around the world. The items will be received at the church through Nov. 23, at which time they will be added to the "Harvest Home" Thanksgiving collection and distributed to the needy.

SS. CONSTANTINE AND HELEN ORTHODOX CHURCH — There will be no divine liturgy Sunday. Members and friends may attend the patronal feast day celebration at St. Michael Church in Pueblo for 10 a.m. divine liturgy, followed by dinner at the American Legion Hall on Highway 50 east of Pueblo.

EVANGELIST TO SPEAK — Evangelist Carl J. Schultz will be guest evangelist this week at Rustic Hills Baptist Church, 1927 N. Murray Blvd. Singing and special music is planned for each evening this week.

THE REV. AND MRS. K.O. BACKSTRAND

Minister of 25 Years Honored

In honor of 25 years of service, the Rev. K.O. Backstrand, along with his wife, Marcia, were honored at a surprise program planned by members of his church, the Central Christian Church, 2002 W. Pikes Peak Ave. Honor guest at the occasion was Mayor Larry Ochs.

During the program, letters of commendation from President Gerald Ford, Gov. Dick Lamm and Rep. William L. Armstrong were read.

Following the program's theme of "This Is Your Life," several out-of-town relatives and friends of the Backstrands traveled here for the occasion.

Several gifts were presented to the Backstrands, including a four-week trip to Sweden where Backstrand has many relatives who he has never seen. In addition to the trip, the couple was presented with a check for over $1,300 for expenses.

In the 1960s, beef raised in Northern Australia was suitable only for ground beef and most of it went to the United States. Today cattle are fattened at the rate of 2½ to 3 pounds a day and frozen steaks are now exported as a speciality of the country.

The art of using insect predators to control insect pests has been practiced in China for centuries.

Agape Players To Hold Concert At Local Church

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Lulu is a loyal wife but totally wrong in thinking the "Worry Clinic" aids Satan.

Instead, it is stodgy preaching that invites the Devil into the sanctuary via the empty pews. God is offended by soporific sermonizing!

CASE F-618: Lulu K., aged 43, is an irate wife of a clergyman.

"Dr. Crane," she protested, "why don't you stop needling preachers and give the congregations a ride, for a change?"

"We have put 4 children through college, with their help, of course, and my husband has now accepted a church in a smaller town.

"We moved up here from a larger church in Chicago, thinking we'd take things easier for our last few years before retirement.

"But last Easter, just before my husband got into the pulpit for his 8 a.m. service, a choir member showed him your column about the District Superintendent who griped because he didn't have a 2-car garage, and a 4-bedroom parsonage!

"Well, that upset my husband!

"By your needling of clergymen, you aid the Devil!

"Why don't you needle the parishioners, who fail to pay preachers a proper salary?"

PULPIT SALESMEN

Alas, many clergymen, like the irate wives whose husbands are straying, blame me for offering them surefire advice on how to be successful.

Clergymen are merely salesmen of ethical ideas instead of tangible merchandise.

But insurance salesmen also sell intangibles.

However, in teaching our college courses on "Sales and Advertising" psychology, do we needle the prospects?

Certainly not!

It's the duty of all salesmen to build up their own successful sales clientele by purveying sound merchandise and then using the proper psychological strategy to get the prospect's name on the dotted line.

Yet thousands of stodgy preachers still keep blaming their "customers!"

Other clergymen, of no higher I.Q. or more handsome profiles, fill their churches to overflowing Why?

Both are "selling" unrivalled merchandise!

So when a low paid preacher sits down on Saturday to compose his sermon, he better look in the mirror where he will see the real cause of his soporific deportment in the pulpit.

If public platform skill and oratorical talent had to be inherited, I'd never criticize you preachers at all!

But anybody with an I.Q. of 100, can soon become a splendid public speaker if he'll merely use a little "horse sense" and thus outline the sermons of a few topnotchers like Dr. Peale, Dr. Bob Schuller, Bishop Sheen, Rabbi Samuel Silver et al.

It isn't the fault of an audience that pews keep growing emptier but of the pastor in the pulpit!

For example, how many of you stodgy preachers have ever joined Toastmasters Club or taken a Dale Carnegie course?

Even of you had invested only 25 cents in the booklet below, you'd learn in five minutes the formula for a topnotch sermon!

But why haven't you done so?

Is it because you are lazy? Or an intellectual four-flusher, who disdains newspapers as "lowbrow" because they favor 2-syllable words instead of your pompous polysyllables?

My column aids God, not the devil, for Satan laughs in glee as you stodgy preachers keep emptying God's churches!

So send for my booklet "Public Platform Strategy," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents, and banish Satan from your sanctuary!

(Always write to Dr. George W. Crane, The Hopkins Syndicate inc., Syndicate Building, Mellott, Indiana 47958, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25c to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Drivers should always dim their lights when approaching a car from behind, since bright lights can bounce off a rearview mirror into the other driver's eyes.

The Australian brush turkey breaks out of its shell clothed in all its feathers and can fly almost immediately.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Lulu is a loyal wife but totally wrong in thinking the "Worry Clinic" aids Satan.

Instead, it is stodgy preaching that invites the Devil into the sanctuary via the empty pews. God is offended by soporific sermonizing!

CASE F-618: Lulu K., aged 43, is an irate wife of a clergyman.

"Dr. Crane," she protested, "why don't you stop needling preachers and give the congregations a ride, for a change?"

"We have put 4 children through college, with their help, of course, and my husband has now accepted a church in a smaller town.

"We moved up here from a larger church in Chicago, thinking we'd take things easier for our last few years before retirement.

"But last Easter, just before my husband got into the pulpit for his 8 a.m. service, a choir member showed him your column about the District Superintendent who griped because he didn't have a 2-car garage, and a 4-bedroom parsonage!

"Well, that upset my husband!

"By your needling of clergymen, you aid the Devil!

"Why don't you needle the parishioners, who fail to pay preachers a proper salary?"

PULPIT SALESMEN

Alas, many clergymen, like the irate wives whose husbands are straying, blame me for offering them surefire advice on how to be successful.

Clergymen are merely salesmen of ethical ideas instead of tangible merchandise.

But insurance salesmen also sell intangibles.

However, in teaching our college courses on "Sales and Advertising" psychology, do we needle the prospects?

Certainly not!

It's the duty of all salesmen to build up their own successful sales clientele by purveying sound merchandise and then using the proper psychological strategy to get the prospect's name on the dotted line.

Yet thousands of stodgy preachers still keep blaming their "customers!"

Other clergymen, of no higher I.Q. or more handsome profiles, fill their churches to overflowing Why?

Both are "selling" unrivalled merchandise!

So when a low paid preacher sits down on Saturday to compose his sermon, he better look in the mirror where he will see the real cause of his soporific deportment in the pulpit.

If public platform skill and oratorical talent had to be inherited, I'd never criticize you preachers at all!

But anybody with an I.Q. of 100, can soon become a splendid public speaker if he'll merely use a little "horse sense" and thus outline the sermons of a few topnotchers like Dr. Peale, Dr. Bob Schuller, Bishop Sheen, Rabbi Samuel Silver et al.

It isn't the fault of an audience that pews keep growing emptier but of the pastor in the pulpit!

For example, how many of you stodgy preachers have ever joined Toastmasters Club or taken a Dale Carnegie course?

Even of you had invested only 25 cents in the booklet below, you'd learn in five minutes the formula for a topnotch sermon!

But why haven't you done so?

Is it because you are lazy? Or an intellectual four-flusher, who disdains newspapers as "Lowbrow" because they favor 2-syllable words instead of your pompous polysyllables?

My column aids God, not the devil, for Satan laughs in glee as you stodgy preachers keep emptying God's churches!

So send for my booklet "Public Platform Strategy," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents, and banish Satan from your sanctuary!

(Always write to Dr. George W. Crane, The Hopkins Syndicate inc., Syndicate Building, Mellott, Indiana 47958, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25c to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Drivers should always dim their lights when approaching a car from behind, since bright lights can bounce off a rearview mirror into the other driver's eyes.

The Australian brush turkey breaks out of its shell clothed in all its feathers and can fly almost immediately.

Solar Energy Still Has To Answer Many Important Questions

By GLEN URBAN
Gazette Telegraph
Staff Writer

Solar energy perhaps has a great future in this country, and while its time may have come there are myriad problems ahead before it is the answer to energy demands.

A one-day solar energy conference for the Associated General Contractors of Colorado was held Friday at the Broadmoor Hotel as part of the Construction Advancement Program, administered by the building chapter of the contractor group.

In three sessions — morning, noon and afternoon — the talk and mood went from solar energy is the thing so let's all do it now, to there have been mistakes and there will be more, to maybe it is no more than a supplement in the field of energy.

Joseph H. Zettel, chairman of the Solar Energy Commission of the National Academy of Science, led off with a rosy report.

A professional engineer, Zettel declared "the technology is here now for successful use of solar energy. We could freeze designs and go now. Oil shale will not fly because its technology is too far away."

John Bayless, the next speaker, is president of the Solaron Corporation, a Denver firm that makes the needed materials for solar energy installations.

Bayless said that this stage in it development, solar energy can compete with electricity for economical heating. Development of solar energy technology is the most important development of this time.

Prof. Dan S. Ward of Colorado State University, discussed another facet of solar energy use. He talked about using the energy from the sun to fuel air conditioning systems.

Little is known so far about efficient use of energy for such applications, but CSU is making progress in its research, he pointed out.

So far most collectors of the sun's energy are only about 20 to 25 percent effective. However a newer development using four-inch diameter glass tubes promises to be more fficient, with potential between 50 and 60 percent, said Ward.

Such tubes will be more expensive than any collectors on the market today, he added.

The noon speaker was Prof. George Lof, also of CSU and the man who built this country's first solar heated home, erected during World War II in Boulder while he was a member of the Colorado University faculty.

He pointed out that many mistakes have been made along the way to solar energy development and that more are to come before the nation can hitch its household heating plans directly to the sun.

An afternoon panel discussion by four practical appliers of solar energy techniques indicated that solar energy is not likely to be the most popular thing going in the immediate future.

John Anderson, a Denver architect, pointed to the future and said that planners, architects, engineers and developers as well as lawyers must pick up the solar energy torch with enthusiasm and move forward with its use.

Jerry Pope of the Hensel Phelps Construction Company, Denver, a general contractor, pointed out all the problems that are likely to arise for a contractor bidding on a solar energy project and then putting up the building with its heating system.

James McFall of the mechanical engineering consulting firm of Konkel, McFall and Konkel, Denver, explained that so far there is not sufficient information for consulting engineers to work with.

Wayne Irick of the mechanical engineering contracting firm of Natkin and Company, Denver, put his own stamp on the day of talk by suggesting that at this time solar energy can at best be a supplemental form of energy and that it is "good to supply a limited amount of lukewarm water."

He was the bidder on the mechanical construction for the new Denver Sports Arena.

Further, said Irick, the costs are too high for popular usage of solar heating.

On a 2,000 square foot house the additional cost for installing a solar heating unit would be about $12,000, he estimated.

Should such a house, heated with more conventional methods cost about $35,000, then it would cost about $47,000 with solar heat.

Financed at eight percent on a 30-year mortgage, the difference in total finance costs for a conventional heated home and a solar home would be about the base price for an additional house — between $30,000 and $40,000.

Irick predicted that coal and nuclear energy will provide the energy for immediate future development.

At this time, said Irick, there are just too many problems with solar energy collection, storage and use.

Pope said his firm had costed two solar heat jobs but in each case the project was impractical.

He noted that coal is likely to be the energy source for much heating in the immediate future.

There are innumerable obstacles at this time to practical applications of solar heat, such as how to write specifications for equipment, how to qualify bidders, and labor jurisdiction.

When a system is built who is qualified to accept it, the owner, an architect, a lawyer? He didn't know the answer.

Anderson pointed out that in the development of solar energy a new chapter in law will be written as a person wishing to use the sun for heating would have to have a southern exposure for his home.

As soon as the large companies in the United States see possible profits in solar energy they will jump into the field, he predicted.

Zettel said that as the trend now goes, solar energy soon will be much cheaper than any oil produced from Colorado's oil shale.

"Economics will take oil shale out," he asserted.

There are more thermal units per ton in coal than in shale, said Zettel, adding that another problem with shale is what to do with the expended shale, which is close to double in size than it was before the oil tars were removed from it.

While nuclear energy may be the fuel of the future, it is important now to go forward with solar energy, he averred, referring to the rising costs of petroleum products and the diminishing reserves.

"The sun is eternal and the technology is sound," he declared.

While many other facets of American life may continue to depend on fossil fuels, heating of buildings need not, he said.

Space heating is a low technology job, and oil and gas should be used only for high technology efforts, he added.

"We must get the solar energy ball moving," he declared.

Zettel noted that people in Colorado are solar energy conscious, and attributed part of that to the great amount of sunshine Coloradans have throughout the year.

While the state now has the lowest rate for natural gas of any state, the cost will go up. Within 10 years, the cost is predicted to go from the average of 82 cents a thousand cubic feet to $3.65, said Zettel.

Inasmuch as the technical breakthroughs have been made to satisfactorily harness the sun's energy, now is the time to start using the sun so that homeowners will not have to pay those quadrupled costs, he asserted.

ket place, with its voluntary exchange of goods and services, is that each individual retains power over what belongs to that individual and need not delegate power over himself, or what is his, to anyone. Let's learn to use that voluntary and mutually beneficial system to better effect. While it may not be perfect (because human beings are not), while it may not provide perfect protection (an impossibility), it is the best system that the mind of man has yet conceived. No other system even begins to compare with it.

Authorities Seeking Gunman

ULYSSES, Kan. (AP) — Authorities are conducting a widespread search for a man who allegedly hit a woman on the head, then shot her, placed her in a car and fled from this extreme southwest Kansas community late Thursday night.

The victim was identified as Barbara Taisler, in her early 40s. Grant County sheriff's officers said witnesses were unable to determine whether she had been fatally wounded before a man identified as Brad Colling drove off with her in her son-in-law's car.

Oklahoma, Colorado and Texas authorities have been alerted to aid in the manhunt. A Grant County spokesman said it was believed Colling was headed for Amarillo, Tex., or Denver.

Innocent Plea Entered In Welfare Fraud Case

A 21-year-old woman who allegedly defrauded the welfare department out of $4,039 pleaded innocent Friday to two theft counts and Dist. Court Judge Joe Cannon set Jan. 5 for trial.

She was Jeanette Bryant, of 4214 Loomis Ave., who is accused of receiving money and food stamps from the department between May 1974 and March 1975.

Welfare fraud defendant Anna Fox was granted a deferred sentencing by Dist. Court Judge John F Gallagher with the understanding she makes full restitution.

Mrs. Fox, 26, of 7035 Chippewa Road, was charged with defrauding the welfare department out of a total of $859.46 between February 1974 and this past March.

In Judge Hunter D. Hardeman's court, William Burman, 22, of Ft. Carson, was granted probation for theft.

The defendant was charged with stealing a motorcycle Aug. 10 from David King, of 203 E. Arvada St.

He was told to make restitution for any damage to the vehicle.

Another Ft. Carson man received probation, also for theft.

He was Jeff Olympius, 19, charged with stealing a number of signs May 7 from Dr. Warren Hamula at the Skyway and 8th Street Professional Building.

Albert Gonzales was sentenced by Dist. Court Judge Patrick M. Hinton to 10 to 12 years in the penitentiary for theft and the minor habitual criminal.

Gonzales, 25 of 2005 S. Corona St., was found guilty of stealing a car June 30 belonging to William Dryer of 1025 Garner St.

On Sept. 30 he was found guilty of two additional counts, a 1968 conviction for burglary and one in 1972 for theft. Both constituted the minor habitual criminal and the defendant could have received 10 to 30 years in the penitentiary.

Joseph Scott, 20, of 2059 Southgate Road, was granted a deferred sentence and will spend 30 days in jail.

He was first charged with theft receiving. On Aug. 20 he received a television set which had been stolen from Teresa Kim of 2033 S. Corona St., but on Oct. 27 this was amended to attempted theft and he pleaded guilty.

Morals defendant Terrell Revels, 19, of Ft. Carson, was given a deferred sentence.

He was charged with sexual assault on a child and pleaded guilty Oct. 27 when this was amended to third degree sexual assault.

The incident happened Aug. 10 and a 5-year-old girl was involved.

In Judge William M. Calvert's court, Robert Fletcher pleaded innocent to theft receiving and will be tried on on Feb. 17, 1976.

Fletcher, 26, of 509 N. Institute St., allegedly received a motor vehicle Oct. 18 which had been stolen from Russel Thurber, 3707 Red Canon Road.

Two defendants pleaded innocent and Judge Hinton set Dec. 1 for trial.

The first, Toni Lee Bradley, 26, no local address, is charged with an Oct. 11 burglary at the McCombs Supply Co., 102 W. Cucharras St.

The second, Ronald Durham, 20, of Monument, is accused of burglary and theft.

He allegedly burglarized the home Oct. 2 of Steve Poetzl of Greeley Road, Palmer Lake.

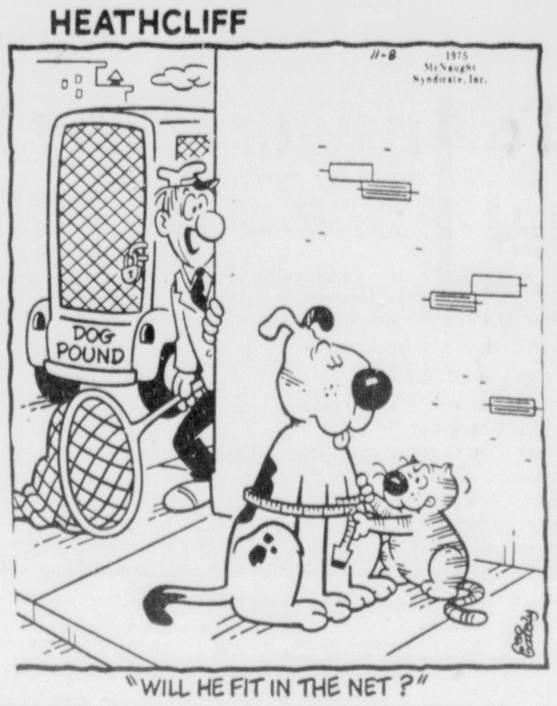

In Judge Robert W. Johnson's court, Carl Johnson, 24, of Burns, Ore., entered an innocent plea to theft and will be tried Dec. 15.

He is accused of stealing a car Sept. 2 belonging to Elizabeth Bednarek, 3627 Rebecca Lane.

A charge of theft of automobile parts was amended to a misdemeanor, and Dennis Murray, 20, of Ft. Carson, pleaded guilty.

Murray allegedly stole automobile parts July 26 belonging to Kathryn Kirkpatrick, of 2610 E. Fountain Blvd. He will be sentenced Nov. 14.

Grand Jury Indicts Two For Robberies

Two co-defendants were charged in district court Friday with a total of 17 counts, having been indicted by the grand jury Thursday.

They were Raymond A. Ellsworth Jr., 21, of 2515 E. Dale St., and Michael P. Moore, 18, address unknown.

Ellsworth is charged with four counts of stealing automobile parts, one automobile theft, one count of stealing a gun and four counts of conspiracy to commit automobile theft.

Moore has three counts of automobile theft against him, one conspiracy to commit automobile theft and one additional count of theft of a gun,

The estimated value of the stolen items is more than $15,000, Dep. Dist. Atty. Milt Blakey said, adding that a third person involved has already been granted immunity as he will be a witness for the People.

Blakey also said it is believed the two defendants were part of an automobile theft ring which was operating in the area between February and September. Five vehicles are listed in the indictment, but Blakey said there was a strong possibility more were stolen.

Det. Robert Ownby of the police department conducted the lengthy investigation.

A youth charged with a total of six thefts in local stores pleaded guilty to one count and Dist. Court Judge George M. Gibson set Dec. 12 for sentencing.

The defendant was Randy Tibbits, 18, of 918 Arawanna St., and the incident happened Jan. 28.

A charge of criminal mischief felony against Patrick Murie, 22, of Ft. Carson, was amended to a misdemeanor and the defendant pleaded guilty.

Murie was first charged with damaging two cars Oct. 12 belonging to Clarence Shanks and Malcolm Clements, both of 2404 Monterey Drive. He will be sentenced Dec. 14.

Two women pleaded innocent to theft and second degree assault.

They were Delores Washington, 25, of 1315 Rushmore Drive, and Lillian Brooks, 20, of Apollo Village Circle Apartments, Apt. A.

The charge says they stole three coats worth $300 from May D & F, Chase Stone Center, Sept. 25, and then attacked one of the employes with a screwdriver as he tried to stop them.

Judge Joe Cannon set Dec. 15 for trial.

Dec. 15 was the trial date set for Robert Steinmeyer, 18, of 627 Skyline Ave.

Steinmeyer pleaded innocent to robbing a Frances Mary Brown of her purse Oct. 17 in the 700 block of North Cascade Avenue.

Louis Joe Trujillo, 25, of 418 E. Missouri St., entered an innocent plea to burglary and sexual assault and trial was scheduled for Dec. 8.

The defendant is accused of breaking into a young woman's apartment Sept. 24 and then sexually assaulting her.

Warren Smith pleaded guilty to attempted robbery and will be sentenced Nov. 21.

Smith, 19, of Ft. Carson, tried to rob Billy Stauffer of 1514 Holmes Drive, Aug. 31.

Prime Minister Gandhi Calls for National Unity

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, absolved by the supreme court from a conviction of corrupt electoral practices, appealed for national unity Friday to meet "all kinds of internal and external dangers."

She gave no indication when she would lift the national emergency that she proclaimed June 26 two weeks after she was found guilty of having illegally won her 1971 parliamentary campaign.

The court's five-man bench that heard the case unanimously overturned the June 12 conviction, upholding parliament's retroactive rewriting of the country's 24-year-old elections laws in August to turn previous offenses into acceptable practices.

The verdict extricated Mrs. Gandhi from legal problems that threatened her continuation in power. The conviction carried a mandatory six-year ban on her holding elective office.

The verdict still left the prime minister with serious political problems at a time when her government was facing a major foreign crisis due to the continuing instability in neighboring Bangladesh.

The big domestic problem revolved around when she would relax the emergency, proclaimed originally to thwart a civil disobedience campaign planned by non-Communist opposition parties to force her resignation from office following the conviction.

"The need of the hour is unity, discipline and hard work," the 57-year-old prime minister told some 5,000 cheering supporters.

She smiled as she was hugged and showered with garlands by well-wishers who came to her residence at 1 Safdarjang Road, the small bungalow where the widowed leader lives with her two sons and their families.

But she became serious as she spoke of the various dangers she said India faced.

Mrs. Gandhi said there were external forces, which she did not identify, which were "trying to weaken the country in order to create instability."

"We have seen the consequences of external interference in other countries," she said without elaboration.

Warrants Issued For Singer

DENVER (AP) — The Colorado Department of Revenue has issued warrants to collect $1,800 in income taxes allegedly owed the state by blind singer Jose Feliciano and a corporation, Feliciano Enterprises, Director Joe Dolan said Friday.

Dolan said garnishment of money due Feliciano Enterprises was levied on a Denver restaurant, The Warehouse, where Feliciano currently is appearing.

He has appearfed at the restaurant periodically for the past two years, and the taxes alleged to be owed were for 1973, 1974 and 1975.

Dolan said the department is in contact with the singer's accountant, Richard Wilbur of Long Beach, Calif., "and we are hopeful that the matter can be resolved amicably."

He said there is "no indication at this time that there is any effort by Feliciano to avoid taxes, as he is probably entitled to a credit against his California taxes for any that may be paid to Colorado."

Wilbur's position is that no tax liability exists, and a lawsuit may eventually be necessary if no agreement can be reached, Dolan said.

Walter W. Sapp Named to New CIC Position

Walter W. Sapp, senior vice president, general counsel and corporate secretary of Colorado Interstate Corp. (CIC), has been named executive vice president, a new position.

The action came Friday at a meeting of the CIC board of directors. Thomas L. Pelican, CIC president, said Sapp will continue as general counsel and corporate secretary.

Sapp, 45, joined CIC in 1966 as general counsel. He moved up to vice president and general counsel in 1968 and became senior vice president in 1971.

Before moving to Colorado Springs, Sapp spent nine years with the New York law firm of Cahill, Gordon, Reindel & Ohl, including two years as an attorney in the Paris office. He was named a partner in the firm in 1966.

Sapp, a native of Broomfield, Ind., has a degree in history from Harvard College and a law degree from Indiana University. He and his wife, Eva, and their two children reside in Colorado Springs.

CIC is a unit of Coastal States Gas Corp.

Railroad Unions To Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four railroad shop craft unions announced today they will strike the nation's railroads at 6 a.m. on Nov. 18 in a lengthy contract dispute with the industry.

The union had announced the strike for next Tuesday but later agreed to delay it one week at the request of federal mediators who hope to arrange new negotiations.

Although the unions represent only about 15 per cent of the nation's half-million railway workers, a walkout could effectively shut down the major rail lines.

Sentence Reduction Denied

A 25-year-old Ft. Carson man who battered his 5-year-old stepson to death and subsequently received 20 to 25 years in the penitentiary, had his request for a reduction in sentence refused Friday by Dist. Court Judge William M. Calvert.

The defendant, Robert L. Dotson, of 1720 Kiswick Road, was charged with killing Joseph Edward Horton on Dec. 23, 1974. Although he was tried for first degree murder, the jury found him guilty of second degree on May 29, and Judge Calvert sentenced him July 3.

On Friday, Public Defender Gene Beville called Ronald Roberts, a "group living diagnostic technician" at the penitentiary, who said he had known the defendant for eight weeks and he "seemed to have a good attitude".

Dotson got on well with others, continued the witness, who thought "he had more opportunity making it outside than behind the walls." Roberts believed it "would be appropriate" for the defendant to have his time cut.

Judge Calvert obviously did not agree. He said he remembered the trial and had carefully considered the request. "Is the sentence fair?" he asked Testimony had shown the small boy weighed about 38 pounds, and the judge remembered the testimony of neighbors who said the boy had been at their house shortly before the fatal beating.

Calvert also remembered the testimony of Dr. Raoul Urich who told the jury about the large amount of blood the child lost because of the "massive beating." The defendant was now enrolled in college at the penitentiary and the judge thought this was "fine."

However, he went on, he did not think sufficient time had elapsed for rehabilitation to take place enabling the court to reduce the sentence.

"To change it," he said, "would lessen the gravity of the crime and lessen the value of the life of the victim. I am satisfied it was a fair, proper and just sentence," he said, and denied the motion.

Appeal Bond Denied For Park Estep

Park Journee Estep, who is presently serving a total of 48 to 67 years in the penitentiary for a variety of crimes including first degree murder had his request for an appeal bond denied Friday by Dist. Court Judge Hunter D. Hardeman.

Estep, 25, of 3280 S. Academy Blvd. and Ft. Carson, was found guilty March 16 of first degree murder, first degree assault, armed robbery, and first degree arson.

On June 6 Judge Hardeman sentenced him to 30 to 40 years for the murder and six to nine years on each of the other three counts, all four sentences to run consecutively.

Estep was charged with killing Sun Ok Cousin, 36, the operator of the Suezy Oriental Massage Parlor, 934 S. Nevada Ave., on Sept. 19, 1974. He was further charged with stabbing Yon Cha Yi Lee, 32, another masseuse in the massage parlor, who was wounded twice. He was also charged with robbing the women and setting the establishment on fire.

According to a report, Estep set Mrs. Cousin afire by pouring a flammable liquid over her after tying her hands behind her back. He was also charged with raping and sexually assaulting the dead woman, but the jury acquitted him of this.

A coroner's report and testimony at the trial revealed Mrs. Cousin was set afire before she was shot in the right temple. Further testimony showed Miss Lee, despite being slashed in the neck and back and tied up, managed to free herself and take refuge in another room.

She was still trapped inside, and two security guards told the jury they discovered smoke pouring out of the building, saw her trying to get out, and rescued her after smashing a glass in the door. Miss Lee testified at the trial and positively identified Estep as her assailant.

On Friday defense counsel Richard Tegtmeier told Judge Hardeman that Estep, prior to the offense, "had a very creditable and high standing in the Army." He had received an honorable discharge, had re-enlisted, and everyone associated with him in the service had told Tegtmeier they would take him back as a soldier if the appeal bond was granted.

The lawyer said they "were fully behind nim" and as the case was on appeal to the Colorado Supreme Court his client had not been discharged from the service. Before his arrest, Estep, he went on, had never been in any trouble and there had been no showing of harassment or intimidation of witnesses.

Psychological testing had shown his client was not dangerous to society. Tegtmeier further reminded the judge that when the jury returned the verdict leniency had been recommended.

Dep. Dist. Atty. Jerry Nelson said the court had no discretion to grant an appeal bond in a capital offense such as murder.

Judge Hardeman said he doubted if he had any right to set an appeal bond, adding, "It was a particularly vicious, heinous crime." He said he did not know what would happen if the defendant was released on bond. "I do not want to take that responsibility."

He ruled the court had no discretion to comply with the motion, and that it could be presented to the appellate court.

Ridgway Quoted Warning About War Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven years before the first U.S. troops were sent to Indochina, then-Army Chief of Staff Matthew B. Ridgway recommended that America stay out of Vietnam entirely or threaten war with China.

Involvement in a land war in Vietnam alone, Ridgway said in an April 22, 1954, memorandum, would divert U.S. military power to "non-decisive local objectives" to the benefit of China and the Soviet Union.

That same month, the Army told the National Security Council, according tothe Pentagon papers, "The use of atomic weapons in Indochina would not reduce the number of ground forces required to achieve a military victory in Indochina."

The historical footnotes were contained in Ridgway papers declassified and released today by the House future foreign policy subcommittee.

Chairman Lester L. Wolff D-N.Y., said the papers were related to the so-called Ridgway Report made to the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower in May 1954, warning against U.S. involvement in a land war in Indochina.

The documents include a May 17, 1954, memo in which Ridgway says Eisenhower should be told U.S. troops would face all of the problems of the Pacific war against Japan "with the additional grave complication of a large native population, in thousands of villages, most of which are about evenly divided between friendly and hostile."

The April 22 memorandum recommends to Ridgway's fellow members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff that America stay out or threaten China.

If the United States determines the loss of "Southeast Asia to the Communist orbit to be so threatening as to require the use of allied armed forces." Ridgway said, "the U.S. government, with the concurrence and support of as many of its allies as it can obtain, should inform Communist China and the world of its intentions to take such military measures as circumstances dictate to neuralize the sources of Viet Minh (North Vietnam) military power."

He said the immediate and major source of that power was Communist China.

"With that source destroyed or neutralized," his memorandum said, "the Viet Minh would cease to present a major military problem to the French in Indochina."

Ridgway recommended to the Joint Chiefs that those views be forwarded to the secretary of defense.

"Only under the most extreme circumstances, if at all," Ridgway said, should the U.S. become involved in a land war in Vietnam alone.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF PROPOSAL TO CREATE A LOCAL IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT, DESIGNATED CITY OF COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, DEERFIELD HILLS SPECIAL IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT, TO CONSTRUCT CERTAIN IMPROVEMENTS THEREIN AND TO LEVY SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS THEREFOR, AND OF A HEARING THEREUPON.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the owners of real estate within the proposed City of Colorado Springs, Colorado, Deerfield Hills Special Improvement District, and to all interested persons that:

The City Council of said City pursuant to its Charter, to Ordinance No. 2771, as amended, and to Ordinance No. 3631, has conditionally ordered improvements to be made in said District. If, after the Council has considered the ordering of proposed improvements and has heard all complaints and objections thereto, the Council shall decide to proceed with such improvements, the Council shall authorize said improvements by ordinance.

The Council has fixed Tuesday, the 25th day of November, 1975, at 9:30 A.M., or as soon thereafter as the matter may be heard, at the City Hall, Colorado Springs, as the time and place upon which a hearing in respect to such improvements shall be had. Not later than noon of the preceding day, Monday, November 24, 1975, at the office of the City Clerk, at City Hall, Colorado Springs, any property owner who wishes to object to such improvements may file his or her objections or protests to the proposed improvements upon a "blank" to be furnished by said Clerk. These blanks on which the property owners may designate their objections shall provide a place for the property owner to designate his objection and a space in which said property owner may state his reasons or other remarks concerning his objection and a place for stating his approval and a place for his signature.

That the extent of said District to be assessed for said improvements is all the lots, tracts of land and property adjoining or abutting upon the following streets, or portions thereof, and the improvements proposed to be made are as respectively indicated.

The estimated total cost of the improvements in said district, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the cost of construction or otherwise acquiring such improvements, engineering and clerical service and supplies, cost of inspection, cost of collecting assessments, advertising, printing, interest on bonds until interest on assessments is available to defray such fiscal services, legal services for preparing proceedings and advising in regard thereto, and other incidental costs as shown in said estimate to perform the duties prescribed by Ordinance No. 2771, as amended, is $34,840.94 of which $31,673.58 is the preliminary estimated construction cost and $3,167.36 is the cost of overhead, including engineering, legal, interest, collection, inspection and incidentals. None of said estimates shall constitute a limitation upon the cost of the project nor for any other purpose. The total cost of the District, i.e., the entire cost, upon the completion of the work therein shall be apportioned in an assessment roll against each tract of parcel of land to be assessed, within the boundaries and district herein above described, and after hearing upon the proposed assessments pursuant to mailed and published notice, assessments shall be levied by ordinance, which shall be a lien until paid in the several amounts assessed against each tract or parcel of land.

All assessments made in pursuance to said assessments ordinance shall be due and payable without demand within thirty (30) days after its publication and final passage, provided, that all such assessments may at the election of the owner be paid in installments with interest. In case of such election to pay any assessment in installments, it shall be payable in not to exceed ten (10) annual installments with interest in all cases on the unpaid principal at a rate not exceeding eight (8) percent per annum.

At the above-stated time fixed for said hearing, any and all property owners interested in such improvements may appear in person, or by written remonstrance, present their views in respect to the proposed improvements to the Council, and the Council may adjourn the hearing from time to time.

All proceedings in the premises including resolutions, preliminary plans and specifications, estimate of cost for the District and map of this District, are on file and can be seen and examined at said office of the City Clerk during business hours by any person so interested.

Dated at Colorado Springs, Colorado, this 28th day of October, 1975.

CRYSTAL HILLS
Outstanding Sites
Come and see for yourself. Truly one of the finest residential areas in the Pikes Peak Region. An established area with over 200 custom designed homes from $35,000 to $75,000. A few choice building sites still available. All underground utilities, paving-curb & gutter already installed. Crystal Hills is located high on a mesa just east of Manitou Springs and overlooking Colorado Springs and the Garden of the Gods areas. Go west Highway 24 (Midland Express Way), get off on Ridge Road exit and turn right to Manitou Ave., then west 3 blocks to the Crystal Hills Entrance and up the hill to information office. Sites range from $7500 to $14,000 with excellent financing available. For further info call Crystal Hills Development 685-5442 days or 574-1488, 473-0581 eves.

GARDEN OF THE GODS ESTATES
FIRST OFFERING OF THESE CHOICE 2/3 ACRE SITES that border the Garden of the Gods Park. Huge red rocks and large pine trees cover this area. Look to the north and a breathtaking view of the Garden of the Gods is yours. Turn to the west and the entire mountain range is upon you. Come evening, thousands of twinkling lights come alive in the valley below. If you like the Garden of the Gods Park, then you'll love living here, cause you can't tell the difference. In fact the city of Colorado Springs purchased 5 acres of this area to add to the park! Only 30 families will be fortunate enough to live here. Don't delay as 30 lots won't last long. Excellent financing is available. Priced from $10,300 to $20,000. Take Highway 24 west, right on Ridge Road, left on Colorado Ave., right on Beckers Lane, right on Maria Theresa, left on Linda Vista. 473-0840 or 685-9239 ask for Ron.

The new Fiat 131.

It not only goes faster than the others. It gets there $2000 cheaper.*

When we had an independent testing company test the new Fiat 131 against the Audi, the Volvo, and the BMW, we hoped the Fiat would manage to keep up. After all, for a $4,000 car to just keep up with $6,000 cars would be quite a feat. As it turned out, the three $6,000 cars didn't quite manage to keep up with us.

In four separate acceleration tests, the Fiat ran away from all of them. In fact, from 40-70 mph the Fiat beat the Volvo by the incredible margin of 157 feet. The results of these acceleration tests were no fluke. In separate tests of cornering, steering, road-holding ability, and overall responsiveness, the Fiat proved itself to be every bit the equal of the Audi, the Volvo, and the BMW.

Does all this surprise you? It should. It surprised us.

*Based on a comparison of Manufacturer's Suggested 1975 list prices. 1976 prices slightly higher.

Partisan Politics Bill May Face Veto by Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford intends to veto a pending bill that would permit federal civilian employes to engage in partisan political activities, the head of the Civil Service Commission said Wednesday.

Chairman Robert E. Hampton said Ford told him in a conversation Tuesday that he opposed the legislation on grounds it would "politicize the civil service."

The bill, which liberalizes the 36-year-old Hatch Act, won House approval by a 288 to 119 vote last month and now is being considered by the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Ford has expressed opposition to the House-passed version, but has not said previously that he would veto the measure if it reached his desk.

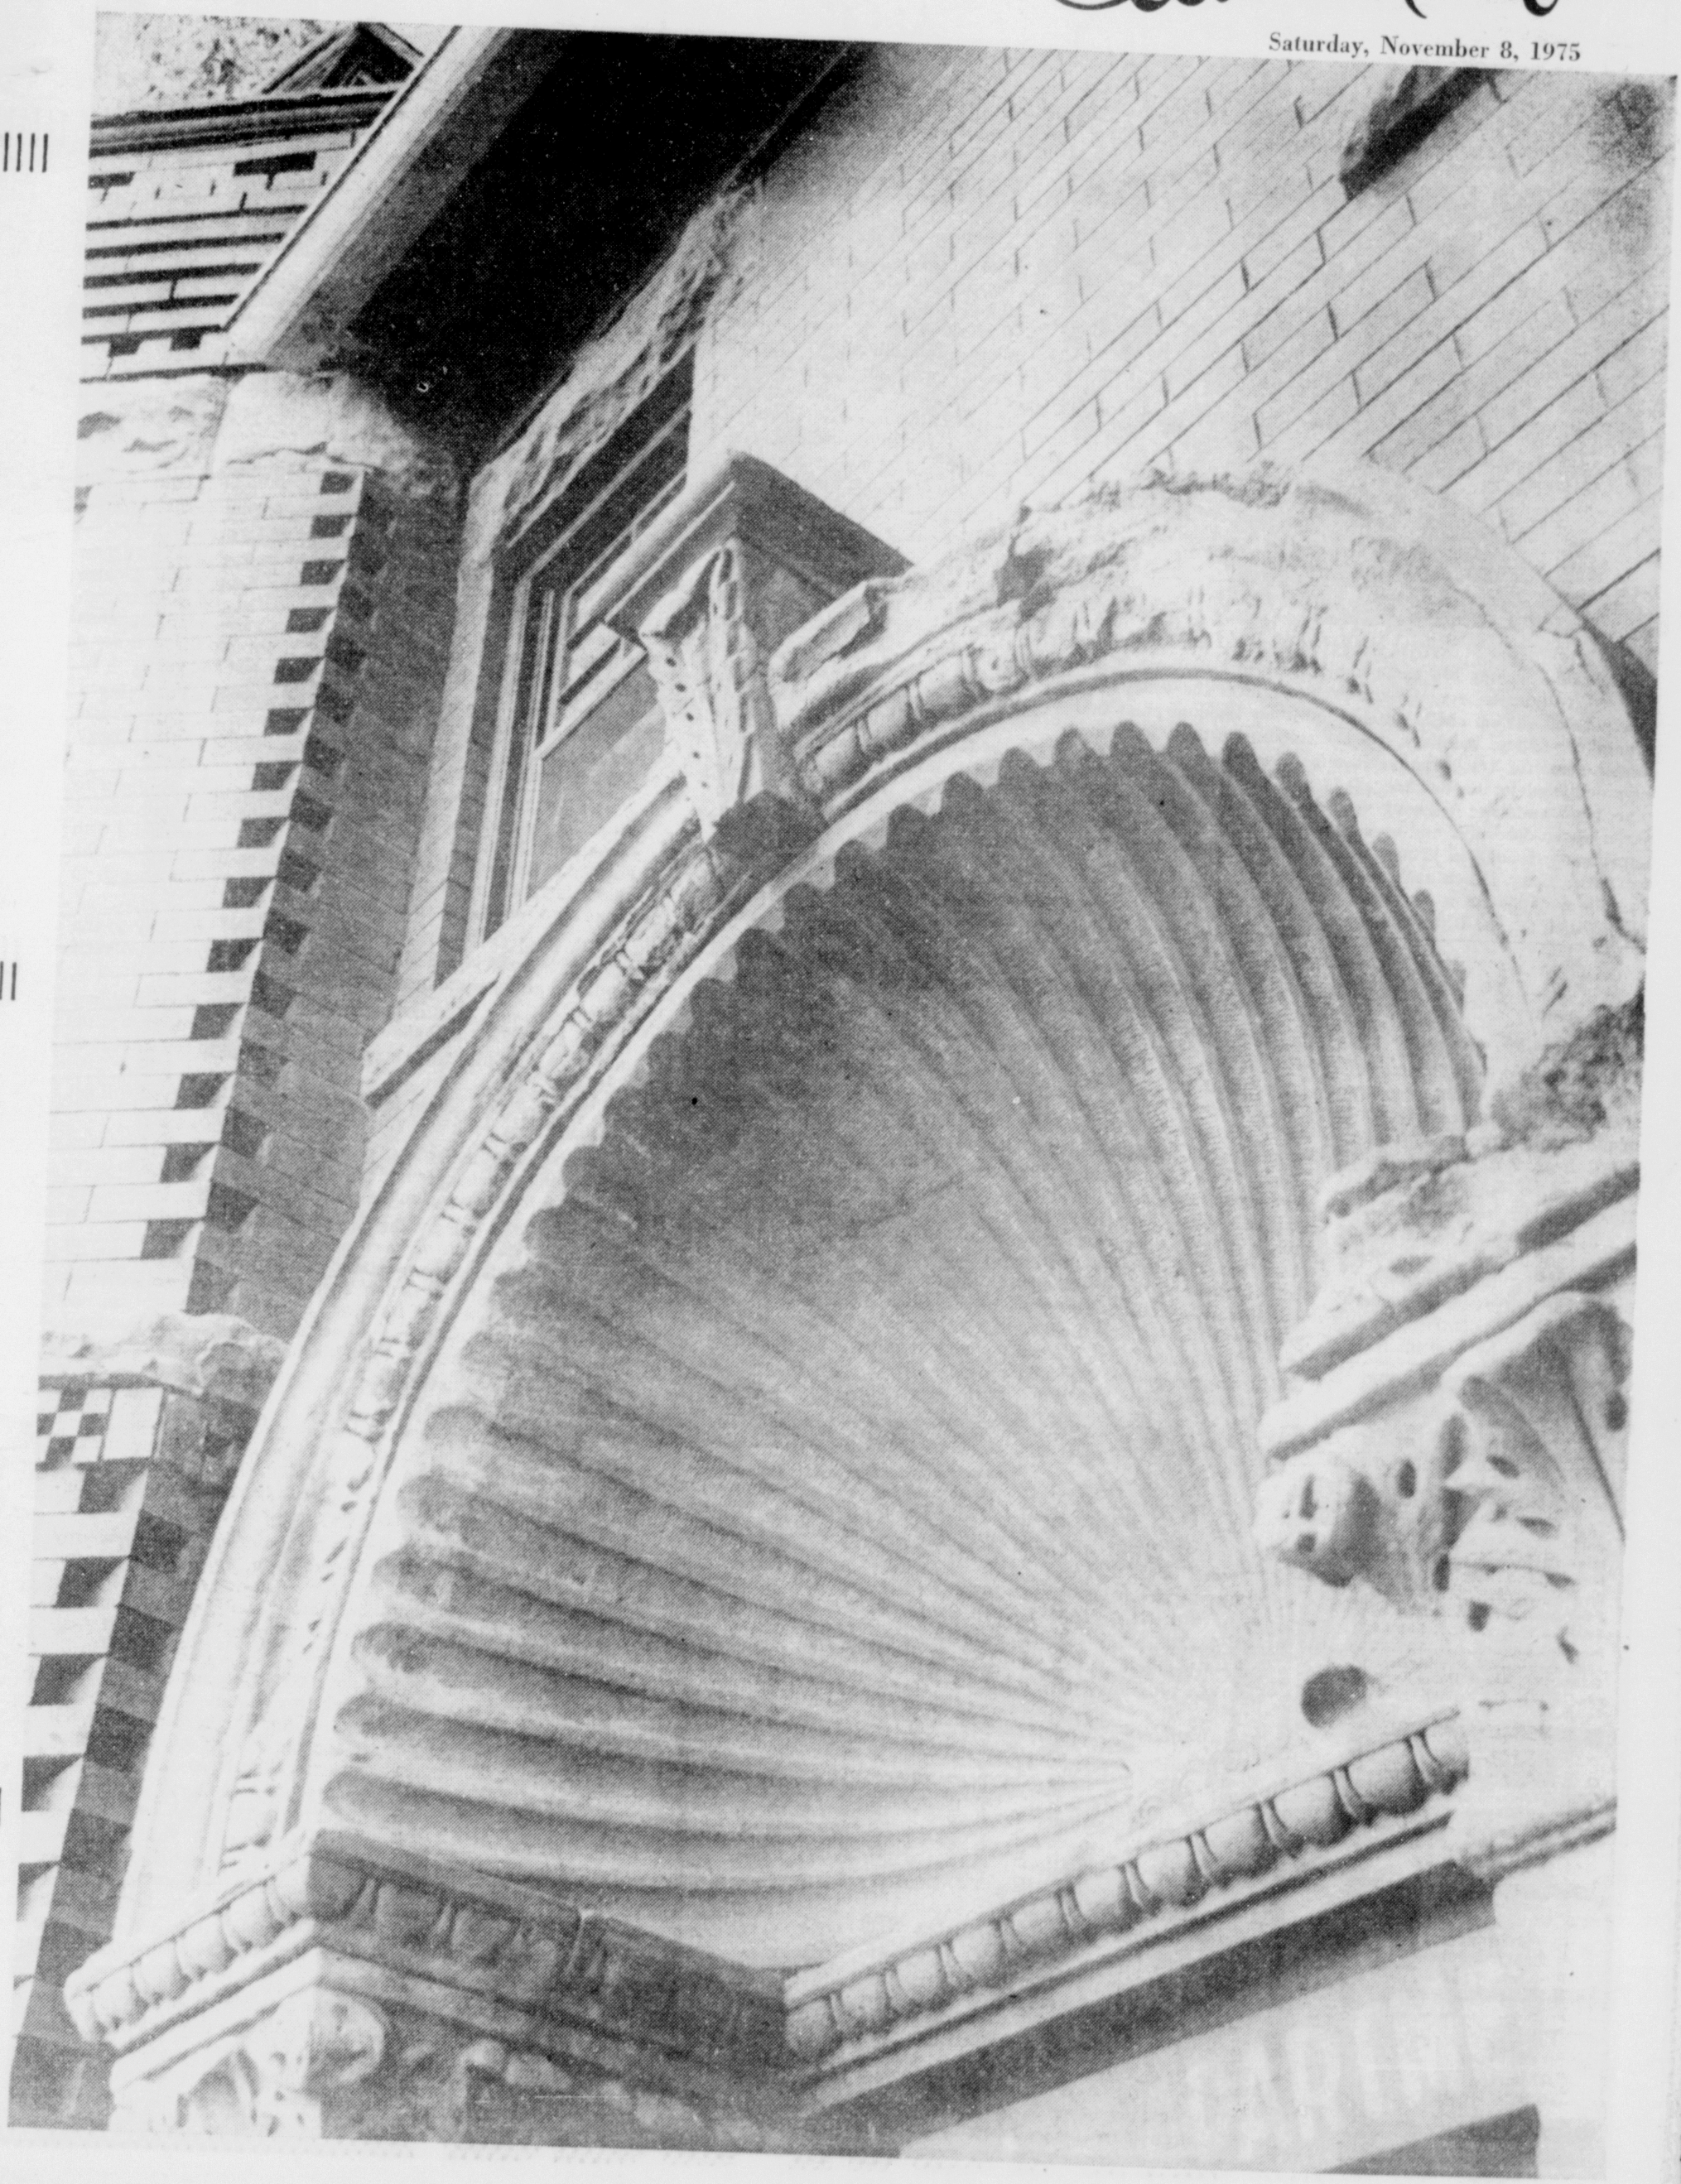

Under the measure, the 2.8 million federal civilian workers would be given the right to run for political office and to campaign actively on behalf of a party-backed candidate.

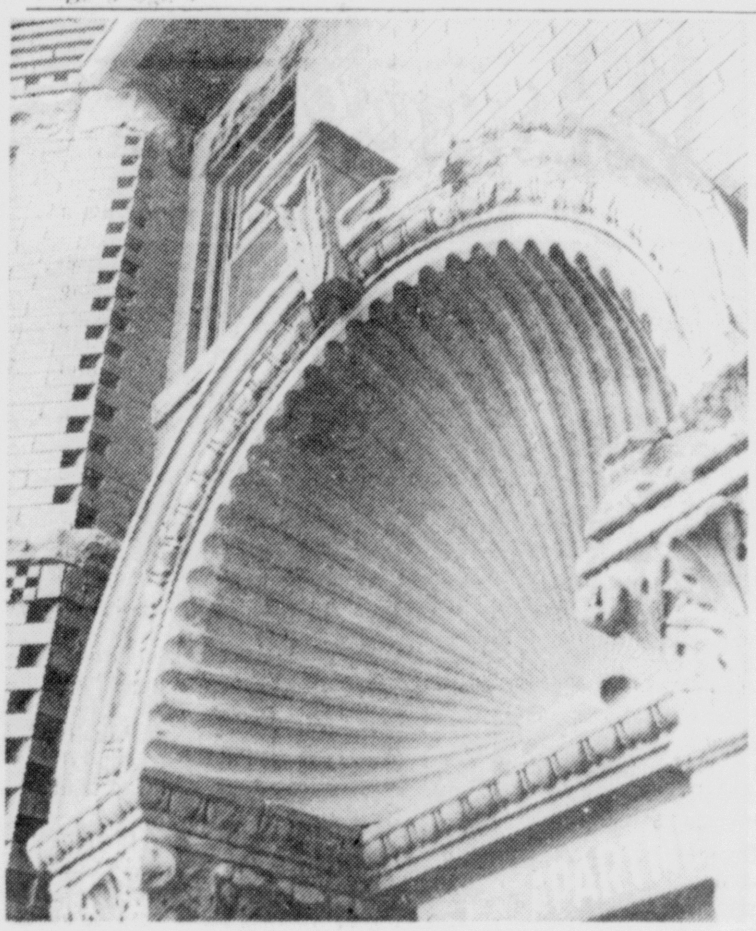

They would still be banned from politicking during working hours or on government property.

The last of the Kennedy-Nixon debates was held in New York on Oct. 21, 1960.

TODAY'S COVER

Colorado Springs has some hidden surprises that, when discovered, delight the eye. Artistic architects over the years have incorporated scallop shells designs into their building plans and a number of those buildings still are standing in the Pikes Peak Region. Gazette Telegraph food editor Marguerite Mitchell has long delighted in the delicate shells and has taken the time to search out buildings featuring shell designs such as alcoves and shells above doorways and over windows. She tells of the shell's importance throughout history in her story on pages 26-27. Photographer Gary Gillen took the photographs. The shell on the cover was found on a red brick and stone building located at 124 E. Bijou St., the Bijou Apartments.

Recital Sunday At CC

A recital featuring a clarinetist, a pianist, and a violist will take place at 4 p.m. Sunday in Colorado College's Armstrong Theater. It is open to the public.

Ramon Kiralis, clarinetist, who teaches at the university of Denver, is solo clarinetist with the Colorado Springs Symphony Orchestra. He is president of the International Clarinet Society and administrative director for the International Clarinet Clinic and Competition. He was recently appointed contributing editor for "Instrumentalist" Magazine.

Charalyn Campbell, violist, teaches at Colorado Women's College. She had previously been on call for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and played with the Chicago Civic Opera.

Theodor Lichtman, pianist, heads the piano department at the University of Denver. He had made a number of recital tours in Germany.

The program will include "Concertina in F," by Molique; selections from "Trio, K.V. 498," Mozart; and selections from "Sonata No. 1, Opus 120," Brahms.

KRCC-FM Features P. Boulez

Pierre Boulez, music director of the New York Philharmonic will conduct the sixth program of the Exxon-New York Philharmonic Radio Broadcasts to be heard from 9 to 11 p.m. over KRCC-FM, 91.5, on Tuesday. This program was recorded at a Philharmonic concert in Edinburgh during the Orchestra's 1975 summer European tour. The four-week, 18-concert tour of five countries, was made possible by a grant from the IBM World Trade Corporation.

Gyorgy Ligeti's "Lontano" ("Far Away") was given its world premiere in 1967 at the Donaueschingen Music Festival.

Bela Bartok composed "The Miraculous Mandarin" in 1918 and 1919. The Suite from the ballet, arranged by the composer in 1928, consists of the first two-thirds of the ballet plus a concert ending. The program will also include Beethoven's "Symphony No. 7" and the first movement of Mahler's "Symphony No. 10."

Host commentator and executive producer of broadcasts Martin Bookspan will interview Peter Diamond, director of the Edinburgh Festival, for this week's intermission feature.

NATIONAL SYMPHONY RECORDS BILLINGS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Symphony has released a Bicentennial recording, "Be Glad Then, America." All the music performed is based on hymns by William Billings, born Oct. 7, 1746, the first native-born American composer.

I tell you, when the Blouse & Skirt determines she is going to go all out to do something, she really does it up fine as frog fuzz. This past week she was on her Indian cooking kick —

I came home in the lull of the evening and as soon as my nostrils was within six feet of the door-jamb I could tell she had been at her stint in the kitch and had prepared one of my favorite foods for the trencher-board . . .

"Hey!" I say to her once I had planted my number 9's inside the living room of our little love-nest, "I can tell by my very own olfactory nerves that there is good news tonight!"

"Of course," the B & S smiles at me, "that is the only time you will admit that there is any good news in this world — whenever it has to do with your stomach!"

"What esle?"

Well, it seems the poodley-dog, Muffin, was in good spirits too as she come dancing to me on her hind legs, pawing the air like she was swatting flies. I, like a fool, started dancing up and down too, and we both bounced round and about the living room like a couple of idiots — one canine idiot and one human idiot.

After I stopped and began to take my jacket off, Muffin then rushed up the staircase and went into 'our' room where she also keeps her toys, and picked up the rubber ball and came bounding down with it in her mouth. She sat up on her hind haunches with the ball in her mouth, and I took it out and threw it down to the lower level where she would have to run and get it.

About this time out comes the Blouse & Skirt, carrying a little bowl of hot sauce which she has termed 'liquid fire' and she sets it upon the trencher board and announces that I have just got time to wash for supper.

So I go upstairs to do my terlets, and suit up in my favorite attire for dinner, which is tee-shirt and moccasins and when I come back down the B & S is just setting the wonderful dish knowed in family circles as 'Indian Taco' on the board and the steam is rising up and permeating the air so it is enough to make a growed man swoon with ecstasy . . .

"O, Boy! O, Boy!" I mumble as I make my way to the trencher-board and pull out the heavy oak chair and set myself down and get ready to mess my ears —

Now the dog, Muffin, is standing beside my chair and hopping up and down like she was on a Pogo Stick, as that is the only way she can get her eyes up high enough to see what is on the plate.

"Muffin," the Blouse & Skirt says to the dog, "you will get your supper in a minute. You just wait."

With that the gold-plated poodley-dog trots into the kitch and sets up on her haunches and paws the air for the B & S to hurry and put her plate down on the floor so she can get at it.

Well, the B & S got the dog squared away, and she put a nice Indian Taco on her own plate and came into the dining room and sat down. I was already half-way thru with my first one, and although the Indian Taco is big around as a dinner-plate and is a full meal for most, I can't get by with just one because they taste so good. Therefore, the B & S had not got thru half of her taco when I had finished and said,

"I just have to have one more, O, boy! I need one more of those wonderful things!"

"I know," the Blouse & Skirt moans, getting up and taking my empty plate and going back to the kitch. But she already has an extra fry-bread waiting and all the fixin's which she puts on top and is back in a jiffy. And with her comes the dog, Muffin, who has also finished her very own supper.

Well, the dog begins to hop up and down again beside my chair and as I cut into the Indian Taco, my fork slips and it flips a big piece of it out into the air and over the side of the trencher-board. The dog immediately opens up her chops and grabs the hot taco before I can and bites down on it and swallows it whole.

Now it must be said that the good old original Indian Taco is not only served hot with the cookstove heat, it is served hot with the 'liquid fire' sauce. The dog, Muffin, with her first belch, felt the intensity of the hot sauce and she took off and was running and flopping around like a chicken with its head cut off.

"Oh, catch her!" screamed the Blouse & Skirt, "oh, the poor little darling, she is going to get burned to death with that old Indian Taco in her stomach. Catch her, quick!"

Well, I knowed there was no way I could catch her unless she got wore out a little first, so I opened the back door and let her out and she made about a dozen circles around the back yard and was panting so hard she couldn't run anymore. I got her in my arms at last and the B & S poured some cool milk down her.

Do you know, that Muffin then got down, pranced over to the trencher-board and began to dance up and down again in front of the plate?

I tell you — there ain't nothing so fine for good eatin' as those Indian Tacos, for man or beast. And that dog knows it, too.

DREAMERS, LOSERS — Karen Black is the fantasy - ridden film extra who seduces and torments William Atherton in "The Day of the Locust," showing Sunday and Monday at the Flick. The movie is based on Nathaneal West's novel about the dreamers and losers of Hollywood in the 1930s. Also starring are Donald Sutherland, Burgess Meredith and Geraldine Page. John Schlesinger directed.

Hollywood's Past Recreated For 'The Day of the Locust'

Several times a week last year, Britain's Oscar - winning director John Schlesinger climbed the rickety timber steps of a landmark building location on the Paramount lot on the flatlands of old Hollywood. The building, a shack really, is as close to anything approximating hallowed ground in a town so notedly neglectful of its past.

The building was once a barn on J.C. Stern's farm when Hollywood was a citrus grove village. Some 60 years ago a group of excitable young men paid him $75 for its hire and began making movies with some strange looking equipment. The result was the first feature film ever made in Hollywood: Cecil B. DeMille's "The Squaw Man," filmed in 1913, produced by Adolph Zukor and the late Samuel Goldwyn. It was the beginning of what has since continued to be a crazy - quilt carnival — with the dream factories grinding out the fantasies on which all America has feasted.

That barn survives because DeMille and Goldwyn saw to it that it was shifted and preserved inside Paramount's protective walls, where the interior was gutted, then converted into offices and a gymnasium. There, veteran masseur Orlando Perry — who has pounded everyone from Zukor to DeMille, from Claudette Colbert to Hope, Crosby and Lamour — holds court.

Undoubtedly Schlesinger listened to Perry's tales about Hollywood's halcyon days. Perhaps he hit on a few ideas inspired by Perry's fables which he then persuaded scenarist Waldo Salt and producer Jerome Hellman to incorporate into their scenario.

For, on the soundstage and the back lots where DeMille once strutted in his riding boots, Schlesinger himself was engaged on a hard-edged, super spectacular spectacle of his own.

DeMille, who lies in his marble tomb only a long camera shot away in the Hollywood Cemetery on the north end of the studio wall, might have been aghast at what Schlesinger and his team were up to. For the dream world of glamour and romance that he and the other movie pioneers had created was being exposed by Schlesinger's unblinking, unsparing eye a vision he brought to bear on New York when he, Walto Salt and Hellman made "Midnight Cowboy."

The starting point is "The Day of the Locust," the celebrated short novel written in the late 1930s by a B-picture scriptwriter named Nathanael West shortly before he was killed in a car crash.

The book is regarded as a minor classic now, its cast of characters among the most unforgettable in American literature of the 1930s. For West was dealing with the Hollywood subterranean world, the sad, mad, grotesque cast of thousands who were film extras, studio hairdressers, call girls and never-was actors who nursed their fantasies in sleazy hotel rooms and boarding houses light years away from the mansions of Beverly Hills.

"These people are every bit as fascinating as the stars and the moguls with their big cigars," says Schlesinger. "To me those are the predictable types. The characters in 'Locust' — The losers — are the most interesting."

Although Schlesinger did not make his first visit to Hollywood until 1967, when he found the freeway traffic so alarming that he was afraid to take his car from the garage, one look around the empty, dusty streets of the movie capital and he was determined he had to make "The Day of the Locust." Schlesinger tried for four years. "Many times I came near to giving up. Only Jerome Hellman and Waldo Salt kept me pressing on. The studios said a story about Hollywood failures was too downbeat.

Yet, if they'd only read the novel carefully, they would have seen that not only is it savage and bitter, but funny too. The characters are rich and sad and to me quite wonderful."

"Locust" stars are Donald Sutherland as a sad and wide-eyed provincial from the mid-West, Karen Black as Faye Greener, a dazzling fantasy - prone dress extra and part-time call girl, newcomer William Atherton who plays Tod Hackett, a callow Yale graduate who becomes obsessed by Faye, and Burgess Meredith as Faye's drunken, dying ex-vaudevillian father.

One of Schlesinger's principal problems filming "Locust" around old Hollywood was that the surviving buildings West describes so beautifully in his novel are today surrounded by modern structures. "Move the cameras to either side and the illusion is destroyed."

For that reason, the real Grauman's Chinese Theatre — the film emporium where stars found their own form of immortality by implanting their hands and feet in wet cement — was not used in the film.

In the novel West calls Grauman's "Kahn's Persian Palace" and it is the setting for a horrific climax — a celebrity - studded premiere in which a crowd turns into a raging, howling mob. Producer Hellman oversaw the construction of two blocks of Hollywood Boulevard circa 1939 — replete with a full-scale re-creation of the face of Grauman's Chinese — on three adjoining soundstages on the Paramount lot.

"We reached for the past as it literally slipped through our fingers," Schlesinger remarked. "We found the only way to represent it truthfully was to re-create it all from scratch."

Jeff Bridges Rides The Stardom Trail

Stardom is something Jeff Bridges has lived with all his life. In his boyhood, he moved about in the aura of his famous father, Lloyd. Nowadays, he is a celebrity in his own right. And while the glare of public scrutiny, not to mention adulation, has been known to have a deteriorating effect on some, young Bridges, currently starring in MGM's "Hearts of the West," just grins and handles it.

"I'm used to people coming up asking for autographs," he said. "Dad coped with it as long as I can remember, and he was always good - humored about the duties that went along with his work. It's really nice knowing that people care about you, even if they only know you from your screen image."

Bridges with his easy smile and down-to-earth attitude is a fascinating study of a superstar - on - the - rise. He has made his reputation as one of the finest young actors around via a series of diverse characterizations in such films as Eugene O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh" and Peter Bogdanovich's "The Last Picture Show," for which he won an Academy Award nomination. But because some of the other pictures in which Bridges has appeared have not sizzled the boxoffice, he has built his career the hard way.

The film that could rocket the young actor into the rarified stratum of superstardom is "Hearts of the West" now at Cinema 70. He is the central figure in the comedy - drama about a Midwestern farm lad and his adventures in the Hollywood of the Thirties, and the role demanded some inspired acting.

"I play a guy who wants to write Western 'pulp' stories," Bridges elaborated. "He figures if he goes west he'll get more authenticity in his work. What happens is he accidentally gets caught up in the world of 'B' Western movies and suffers some disillusionments. He has very strong ideas about the way things should be and the way he believes they are, and when life doesn't jibe with his view it's a jolt."

The comedy - drama is a Bill-Zieff Production also starring Andy Griffith, Donald Pleasence, Blythe Danner and Alan Arkin. Tony Bill produced and Howard Zieff directed from an original screenplay by Rob Thompson.

"It's been a challenge and fun," Bridges commented about his role. "The character has endless facets, and the script has depth — comedic on the surface with an underlay of drama."

The fact that superstardom has not been an overnight happening for Bridges bothers him not in the least. His consistently excellent reviews verify his talent, and, besides, his head is in the right place.

"I never zeroed in on the ambition of becoming a star," he stated. "I kind of fell into acting in the first place because of my family. Dad had me in his TV shows when I was a kid, and later my brother Beau, the organizer, worked up some acts that he and I and our grandfather did at conventions. Then, when I was in my late teens and wanted to leave home, I decided to finance myself by doing something I knew — acting.

"For a while before that, I thought music would be my field. Maybe sort of subconsciously I was veering away from competing with my father and Beau in the acting world. Competition — in sports or anywhere — has never turned me on. But the more I got into acting, the more satisfying it became. And certainly my family never pressured me."

Diversification still appeals to Bridges, though, and immediately after completing his starring role in "Hearts of the West" he partnered with his long-time school friend, David Greenwalt, in a music endeavor. A gifted guitarist and composer himself, Jeff plans to produce songs composed by Greenwalt and another friend, Marvin Goodwin. Already the group has had some lucrative offers, which is sweet music any way it is played.

TAKE MY ADVICE — After a hard day acting in a hot Western movie, Andy Griffith offers Jeff Bridges some sage advice in "Hearts of the West," showing at the Cinema 70. Bridges is one of two actor-sons of Lloyd Bridges (the other is Beau).

Houseman In Movie

Academy Award-winner John Houseman joins Charles Bronson and Jacqueline Bisset in "St. Ives," it was announced by Guy McElwaine, Warner Bros.' senior executive vice - president, worldwide production.

The new suspense thriller, which presents Bronson as a newspaperman operating on the fringes of the underworld, is currently filming on locations in Southern California and at The Burbank Studios. Juilliard Academy, where John Houseman heads up the drama department, has granted him a leave of absence to come to Hollywood to play his part.

The new film is being produced by Pancho Kohner and Stan Canter and will be directed by J. Lee Thompson. Lucien Ballard is the cinematographer and Philip M. Jeffries is the production designer.

Houseman, Roumanian born writer - director - producer - teacher - actor who collaborated with Orson Welles in the making of "Citizen Kane," won his Oscar playing a Harvard professor in "The Paper Chase" in 1973. He plays a starring role as the head of the C.I.A. in Dino De Laurentiis' current box-office hit, "Three Days of the Condor." He also recently assumed the character of Winston Churchill in NBC's special, "Truman at Potsdam," scheduled for telecast next spring about the same time Warner's plans to release "St. Ives."

Jane Wyatt A Returnee

Jane Wyatt returns to motion pictures after a 10-year absence for "Treasure of Matecumbe," Walt Disney Productions' post-bellum adventure in which she plays a Kentucky dowager whose young nephew decamps to Florida in search of buried gold. Miss Wyatt, whose last screen appearance was in the 1965 comedy "Never Too Late," joins a cast led by Robert Foxworth, Joan Hackett, Peter Ustinov and Johnny Doran, 13. A five-year stretch in "Father Knows Best" and other TV assignments have kept her busy over the past decade.

Based on a novel by Pulitzer Prize winner Robert Lewis Taylor, "Treasure of Matecumbe" is directed by Vincent McEveety and produced by Bill Anderson, with Ron Miller as executive producer. Donald S. Tait wrote the screenplay. The picture is being photographed in color by Technicolor for Buena Vista release.

Ibsen Play Opens at CC

The Theatre Workshop of Colorado College will present Henrik Ibsen's drama "Hedda Gabler" on Friday and Nov. 15 at 8:15 p.m. in the atrium of the college's Tutt Library. Admission will be free and no tickets are needed. The performance is open to the public.

"Hedda Gabler" is one of Ibsen's later works; the eighth of his 12 realistic works. It is a psychological drama, full of multifaceted and neurotic characters. The play revolves around Hedda Tesman and her inability to adjust to and live in her environment.

The production is being directed by Steven Langer, a Colorado College senior. Langer's previous work in Theatre Workshop includes directing last season's production of "Waiting for Godot," and this summer's production of "Old Times." The set and properties were designed by Jim Taylor, with costumes by Dan Hallock and Melissa Weeks. The cast includes many veterans from previous Colorado College productions, as well as one newcomer to the CC stage.

IMPROVED COOLING

As a result of recent advances in materials, expanded use of coolant reserve systems and soluble oil, Chrysler - Plymouth cars have increased engine cooling protection for 1976. The change interval for the factory fill has been increased from one to two winters.

Guidebook To Cruises

"Cruise Ships of the World and Their Itineraries," a new cruise guide prepared especially for cruise buffs, is presently being made available to the public through most travel agents in the Western States.

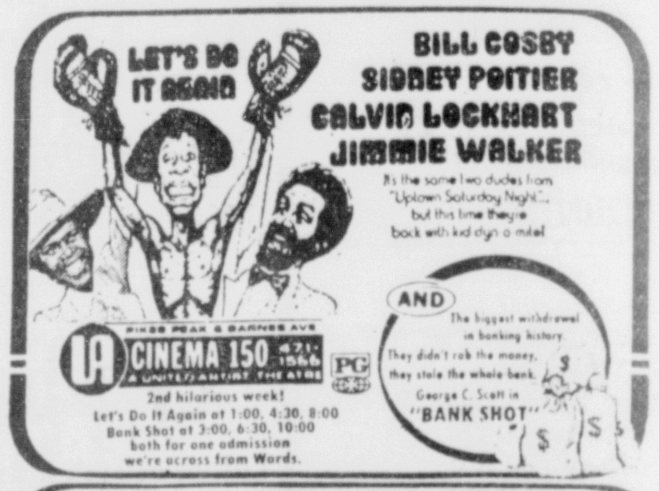

"Cruise Ships of the World" was published by Cruise Publishing, San Francisco, in co-operation with Royal Cruise Line.

Richard Revnes, president of Royal Cruise Line, said the book is the first of its kind and was designed to provide the consumer with a concise volume of information of all pertinent facts on the ships and cruises that are marketed from the West Coast of the United States.

In addition to listing complete descriptions on 46 cruise ships, their itineraries and route maps, the guide also answers hundreds of questions about what to expect from a cruise, life aboard ship, entertainment, service, dining, tours, tipping and information on how to book a cruise.

Copies of the book are available only through local travel agents.

CC Hockey To Be Heard Over KRCC

This year, KRCC's hockey broadcasts will enter a third season. There will be three announcers to bring the season of Colorado College hockey to listeners.

The play-by-play announcer will be George Hamamoto, who is in his third season. He is a senior and a business administration major.

Tim Boddington will enter his second year as color man for the hockey broadcasts. He is an alumni of the class of 1972.

Tom Keeling is the newcomer to the team who initially will help with the color and eventually do some play-by-play. He is a junior majoring in Political Economy.

KRCC is found at 91.5, FM.

The Friends of the Arts Plan Demonstration, Sale

The Friends of the Arts, a newly formed local group of artists, artisans and craftsmen, will celebrate their founding with a two-day crafts demonstration and sale today and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Rastall Center on the Colorado College campus, Cascade Avenue and Cache la Poudre Street.

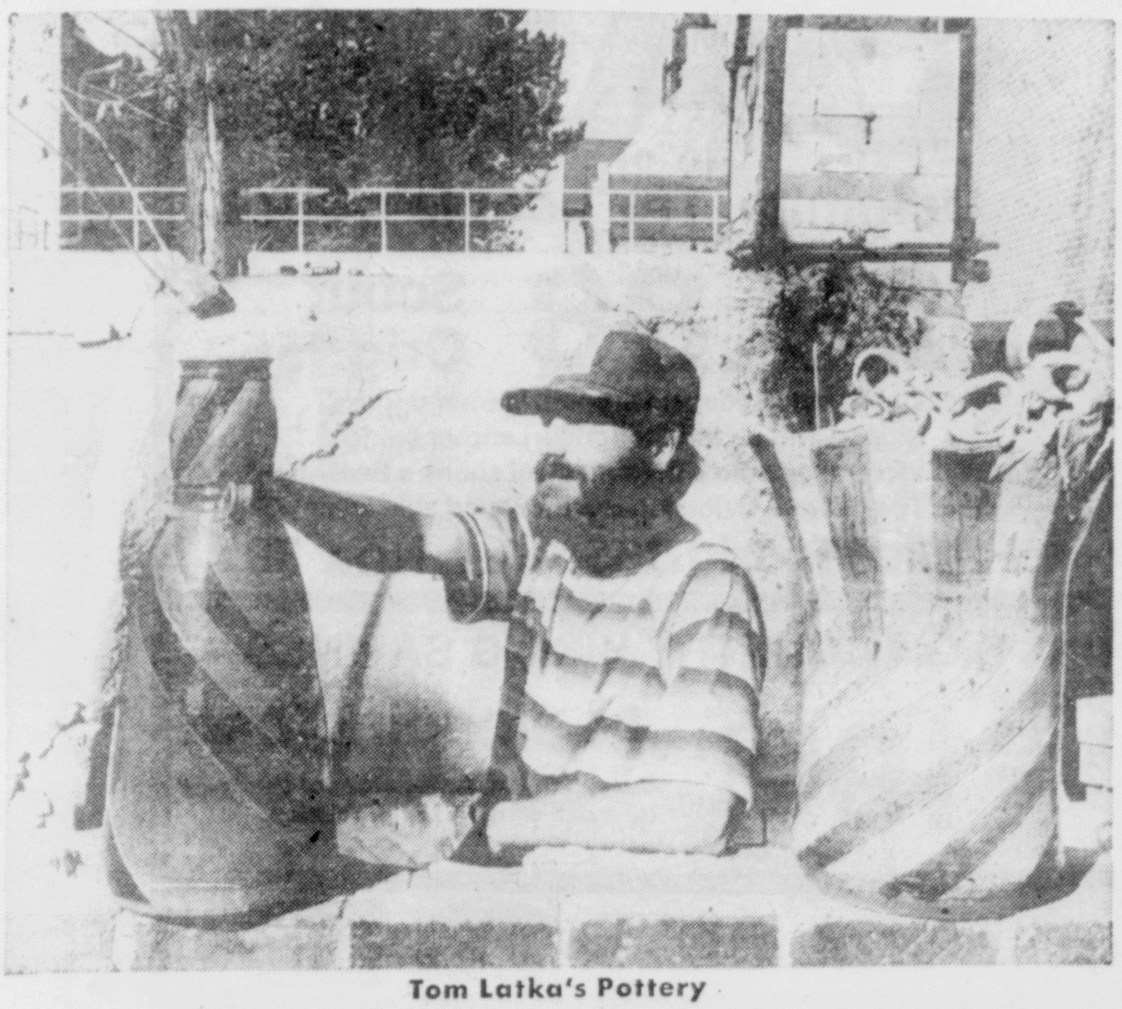

Artists participating in the demonstration include Thomas Latka and Ken Williams, potters; Claudine Burns and Judith Williams, weavers; Terry Blanchard, wood craftsmen; Paul Mannino, jeweler.

The Friends of the Arts came about through the efforts of Latka, artist - in - residence at Colorado College. Latka feels "artists can fill a void in the community by coming together to help inform the community of the innovations and local progress of many artists." Latka has been involved with local pottery at Colorado College, as advisor to the CC Ceramics Club and as art director of the Rocky Mountain Medical Art Gallery.

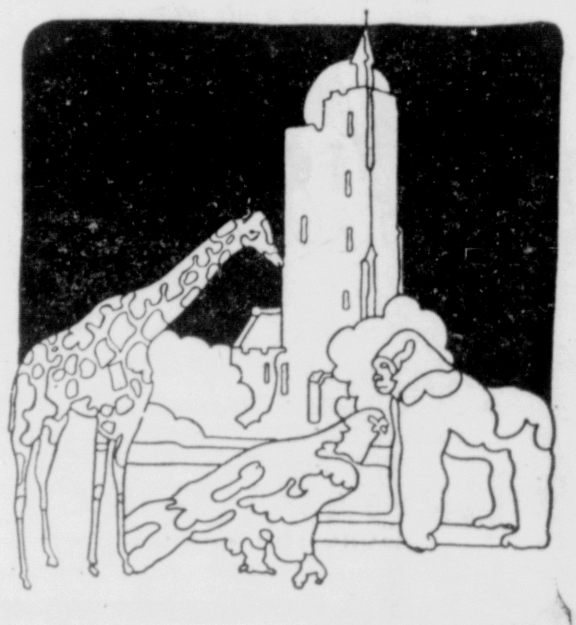

Ken Williams is based in Pueblo and is artist - in - residence at the Sangre De Cristo Arts and Conference Center. Mannio will demonstrate hand - wrought silver work, his specialty. He works in all aspects of jewelry including wedding bands and turquoise.

Judith Williams is a Pueblo weaver who concentrates on the four-harness loom and in tapestry. Claudine Burns specializes in basket weaving and Navajo weaving and design. She is currently instructing for the Park and Recreation Department.

Blanchard will demonstrate and display his collection of simple, high quality wood pieces, furniture and cabinets. Primarily concerned with design, he uses a wide variety of woods to execute his projects. He has his own wood shop locally.

Centennial Premiere Of Grusin Composition in Boulder

The premiere performance of "Centennial Almanac" by composer-pianist David Grusin, University of Colorado graduate, will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday in Macky Auditorium at Boulder.

Grusin composed "Almanac" especially for the Colorado Centennial and his concert with the CU Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Prof. Giora Bernstein will be presented in co-operation with the CU Centennial Commission.

Grusin will perform the piano part of the composition and will be joined by a trio of musicians from Hollywood.

The concert is the first in a series of educational and artistic events during the next year in observance of the university's 100th anniversary. Proceeds will benefit College of Music scholarship funds.

Tickets for the concert are on sale in the University Memorial Center ticket office at $3 for the first floor and first balcony seats and $2 for the first floor under the balcony. All seats are reserved. Tickets also will be on sale the night of the concert.

Grusin was born in Denver in 1934 and received a bachelor of music degree with a major in piano performance in 1956 from CU.

Fron. 1958 to the middle 1960s he worked as pianist and musical director for Andy Williams and wrote and arranged for Peggy Lee. Later he moved to Hollywood to become involved in television and motion picture projects on his own.

His motion picture credits include "Candy," "The Scorpio Letters," "Winning," "The Graduate," "Halls of Anger," "Pursuit of Happiness," "Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here," "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," "The Friends of Eddie Coyle," and "Fuzz."

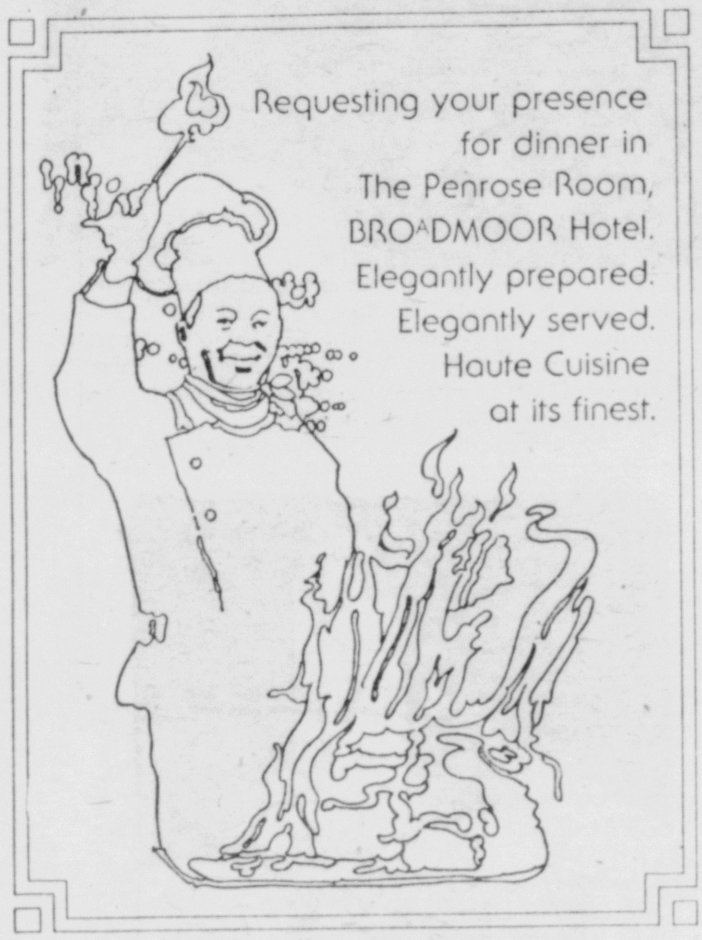

Among his television music credits are "Gidget," "The Farmer's Daughter," "Dan August," "The Name of the Game," "Funny Face," "The Bold Ones," "The Sandy Duncan Show," "Maude," "Assignment in Vienna," "It Takes a Thief," "The Girl with Something Extra," "Roll Out!" and "Good News."

Israeli Performers Here Sunday

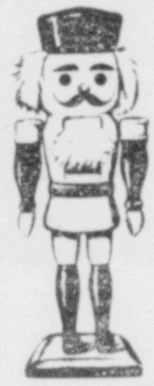

"Here Is Israel," a professional Israeli song, comedy and mime group now touring this country, will present a show at The Little Theatre, Ft. Carson, Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Ft. Carson Peace Chapel and Temple Shalom are sponsoring the show. All military and their families may attend free. The public is invited and will be asked to make a small donation.

Tickets are available at Temple Shalom from 9:30 a.m. to noon or call 634-5311 or 633-6406.

TAKE ME HOME — Puddles, a lovable cream-colored Siamese-mix kitten, needs a new home. Her owners are moving and she can't go along. She has seal point markings and a white face. Puddles is only eight weeks old but she has been raised with children and dogs and loves them both. She is also housebroken. She is available for adoption at the Humane Society of the Pikes Peak Region, 633 S. 8th St., Tuesday through Saturday.

FAC Rental Gallery Now Open

The Fine Arts Center Rental Gallery, juried by L. Anthony Wright Jr., registrar of the Denver Art Museum, is now open. More than 90 leading regional artists were invited to submit their original artworks.

The 75 juried works in the show, of all mediums, can be rented by FAC members for a three-month period. Rental price may range from $8 for art in the $50-$99 category to $40 for a $1,000 item. Each rental price may be applied to the purchase price or the selected piece of art may be returned to the gallery.

The gallery is staffed by volunteers under the direction of Harriet Abrahm and is open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A special feature of the gallery is 18 x 24 prints by the masters—Picasso, Chagall, Monet, Van Gogh and others—which sell for $6 and can easily be used in a child's room or for school collections.

Rollers Haven't Been Gubbed Yet

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Bay City Rollers, the fresh-faced rock quintet from Scotland, didn't get gubbed on its first trip to America.

Gubbed is the word they made up for the phenomenon of having a girl jump on stage, fling her arm around a Roller's neck, a guard pulling her, she pulling the Roller and the choking Roller only able to say, "gub, gub."

In recent months, when the Bay City Rollers arrived in a town or gave a concert in Britain, Scandinavia or Germany, Rollermania ensued — complete with fans screaming, dressing like the Rollers in clothes trimmed in plaid, and girls trying to gub a Roller.

It didn't happen on their recent first trip to America, a trip for publicity and one TV appearance. On their arrival at Kennedy Airport, Eric Faulkner says, "There were more fans there than I expected. We got pulled and scraped — the usual."

No, says Alan Longmuir, founder of the group some 10 years ago, "We could never have walked out if it was the usual. We just got pushed and pulled a bit." Only a half dozen fans were camped out most times in their New York hotel lobby and response from the audience at the TV show was enthusiastic but not hysterical.

They even walked a bit on the streets of New York, which they haven't been able to do in most cities they've visited. None of them seem to mind the loss of freedom, saying it has just become a way of life. Usually, they rent films and projectors and watch movies inside their hotels, play guitar, write songs and never go out.

Besides Faulkner, 21, and Alan Longmuir, 26, there is his brother, Derek Longmuir, 23, Leslie McKeown 19 and Stuart "Woody" Wood, 18.

On one day in New York, the group is in a hotel suite, holding a kind of drop-in open house for photographers and writers, two or three Rollers talking with one person a bit, then, with apparent cheerfulness, answering the same questions again for the next reporter.

Yes, they're named for an American city. When the group, known as the Saxons in 1973, wanted a new name they put down a pin into a U.S. map and hit Bay City, Mich. Rollers was added for obvious reasons.

Yes, they wear pants cut off at mid-calf and cuffed with plaid, plaid stripes sewn on the outside pant seam and plaid-trimmed shirts every day. Those are the only clothes they have.

They've started a mail order business back home to sell Roller-inspired socks, T shirts, etc. They saw such items being sold for high prices, they say, and thought their fans should be able to get them cheaper.

They don't like the idea that their success is based on a hype — massive hypodermic injections of publicity. Faulkner says, "A lot of people feel 100,000 pounds was spent to make us an overnight success. It's the exact opposite. We've been in debt; our equipment was taken away by finance companies. We've done more work on the road than most troups have done.

"A lot of people feel like we're like the Monkees — we've just been put together and somebody else is cutting the records in our name. Not at all. I'm annoyed when people say, 'You're a big hype.'"

Alan Longmuir says, "When we did our first big tour in Britain, the newspapers never covered it that well. We'd had a lot of fans in Scotland but in England they didn't expect it."

"When it was starting to happen in England," Faulkner says, "we were doing ballrooms and clubs. We used to arrive at a place. We had started to get fans. We'd say, 'You've got to get a safer barrier up.' They'd tell us they'd had this group and that group and never had any trouble. Then we'd see that same guy trying to keep the fans back. We'd say, 'We told you so.'"

The fans of the group are young and the Rollers say they don't mind that. When the Beatles and the Rolling Stones were first making it big, their fans were the teeny-boppers, too. Rollermania is squarely in the tradition of Beatlemania but none of the Rollers ever saw the Beatles live. They saw Paul McCartney's Wings a couple of years ago. Alan Longmuir tried to see the Beatles once in Edinburgh, city where all the Rollers were born, but the queues were too long.

The first recordings by the Rollers released in America, on Arista, are the LP "Bay City Rollers," No. 135 on the best-selling chart of Oct. 11 and the single, "Saturday Night," No. 75 on that date and both climbing.

There has been much talk about injuries in the pandemonium at their concerts, but the Rollers say there have been no serious injuries. However, during the filming of a special for showing on American TV in October, Faulkner says, "Woody got knocked out — by a couple of hundred fans. We get knocked over a great deal. It's an occupational hazard." McKeown says they never demolish hotel rooms; he thinks that's mostly done by publicity seekers. But, lest they sound too mild and dull, he says, "A lot of funny things happen to us," and he relates a few of them. "To get out of a theater in Aberdeen we had to go out over the roofs and take fire escapes.

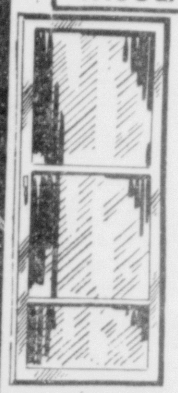

"Spider man. It was great. We could never have walked out the front door. We walked along up there and then we came to these fire escape ladders that swing down when you put your weight on them — a spring thing. That was fun."

There probably will be a tour in the spring and the Rollers are cautiously expecting the Rollermania bug to have bit America by that time. "They say it'll take a few months over here."

Also, "We'll be inundated with work," McKeown says. That turns out to be a joke on him, which the others won't let him forget. "One time a woman asked me if we'd be that on a TV show and I didn't know what the word meant. I said, 'Oh, yes, yes.'"

And what are the clans to which the Rollers belong? None of them know, only Longmuir, saying, "I know I've got McIntosh ancestors." Faulkner says, "A magazine back home did a family tree on each of us; took it back to the 15th century. It's amazing when you start to read it."

SQUARE 'EM UP!

by Lou Maddock

Eagle 8's will have a chili supper prior to their dance next Tuesday. All dancers are invited. Come for supper at 7 p.m. and stay for the dance. There will be an exhibition like you have never seen sometime during the evening.

New Year's Eve dances have been announced. Mountain Swingers will be at the Carriage Stop, and Waggin Wheelers and Eagle 8's will hold their regular annual dance in the gymnasium of the First United Methodist Church. More details on these dances will be available later.

From the November issue of Sets-In-Order: By now you in the classes are realizing why square dancing is known as "friendship set to music" and why they say that "friendship is square dancing's greatest reward." Here are some important points concerning your hobby which you may have discovered. How long should it take you to react to one of your caller's calls after you hear it? Hearing the call isn't a signal to try to rush thru a movement; normally you will hear one call while you are still in the process of completing another. There may still be two or three steps to complete giving you time to think what you are going to do before you actually start into the next movement. To be a good square dancer, you will find that you should move to the beat of the music, usually 4-4 time, completing each movement comfortably before moving effortlessly into the next one. Each movement requires a definite number of steps. To take fewer than the number required means that you'd be rushing things. Everyone should caution himself: "Slow down, slow down, what's the rush." If you strive to move comfortably, making the most of the music and taking a step on each beat, avoiding roughness, sharp erratic turns and uncomfortable movements in the process, you are developing a good sense of square dance styling. There is a correct way of doing every movement. Every movement has a definite starting point and a definite completion point. Don't get discouraged; thousands took lessons before you and they can tell you it's worth every goof, every mile you have to drive to the dance, every effort you can possibly make to learn the fun of your new hobby. Don't take things too seriously. Square dancing is fun — "fun is a three - letter word with U (you) in the center." When you are dancing, smile. It tends to light up the square for all the others. You don't have to be a good dancer to smile but by smiling you can certainly appear to be a happy square dancer. "If you make a mistake, smile and everyone else in the square will think that it's their fault." Follow your caller's instructions and be a smooth dancer.

What does it cost you to go to and from work every day?

In a very economical car you can drive to work and back five days a week and probably get by on less than $3.50 a week for gas at today's prices.

. . .plus a little more for motor oil which you've got to change more often when you drive in stop-and-go traffic,

. . .and a little more to have your engine tuned-up more often,

. . .some more for the extra wear on your tires, brakes and shock absorbers,

. . .plus parking, if necessary,

. . .and you might need extra insurance.

Some authorities place the total cost of driving the average car at 18¢ per mile!

That's $1.80 per day for the ten-mile round trip between Village-7 and downtown.

You should figure your costs some time.

You can ride a city bus to and from work anywhere within the city limits of Colorado Springs five days a week for $3.50 a week.

There are 20% more people riding your city buses this year than there were last year.

Because service is better.

If you want dependable, low-cost transportation, ask our information operator about city bus service.

If you can walk to work (or ride a bicycle) you might never have to pay anything for transportation.

You can save hundreds of dollars a year by walking to and from work every day.

Our weather is perfect for it most days. At other times, you can take the bus.

Some Sell Seashells by Seashore; Others Make Architectural Treats

Colorado Springs, as everyone knows, is full of surprises, its architecture frequently enhanced by what might well be one of the loveliest designs ever taken from nature.

If one takes the time one may discern a number of landlocked scallop shells, some of quite superior outline, lending a romantic effect to private dwellings and public buildings about the city.

The design is interpreted in wood, stone, marble, any number of materials, that accommodate themselves to simulating the delicately patterned scallop, a decorative motif whose use as such stretches back to before recorded history.

Since practically nothing in nature has escaped the attention and whim of an artisan, it is no surprise that the scallop shell was a trendsetter at the outset.

From classical antiquity to the present, the scallop has appeared, its distinctive form showing up in ornaments, sculpture, architecture. There are many exquisite representatives of Aphrodite, the Greek goddess of the sea, rising naked from the foamy waters, perched upon an open scallop shell.

When the Romans adopted her, she became Venus, her birth of which is particularly appealing as painted by the 15th century Italian, Sandro Botticelli, a must-see on anyone's list when touring the Uffizi Gallery in Florence.

It was around the 1st century, B.C., that the scallop shell came into use as an architectural motif, its uneven surface ideally suited for the play of light and shadow so enjoyed by the Romans whose virtuosity as designers has always been highly esteemed.

The shell was especially attractive for the curves of an alcove, something many builders have always recognized, and in 18th century America it was frequently used in this manner, most notably in corner cupboards, giving such furnishings an extremely graceful appearance.

Early Christian art often drew from the scallop's design, the artists obviously not looking upon it as a symbol of a new religion, but rather as a superior form to be repeated for the pleasure of the eye.

Styles changed and naturalism came and went, as regularly as the tides which carried the shell from its home in the seas to find a resting place on sandy beaches.

When many Europeans went off to the Far East to fight in the Holy Wars, they found the shells that dotted the beaches to be novelties. Many took them home as souvenirs, proof that they had been on a Crusade. As time went on many chose the scallop shell as a badge of honor and when admitted to knighthood used it as an emblem on their family crests. Among the families who included it were those of Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden. Thus did the scallop become a mark of Western Christendom, a silent reminder that "they were there."

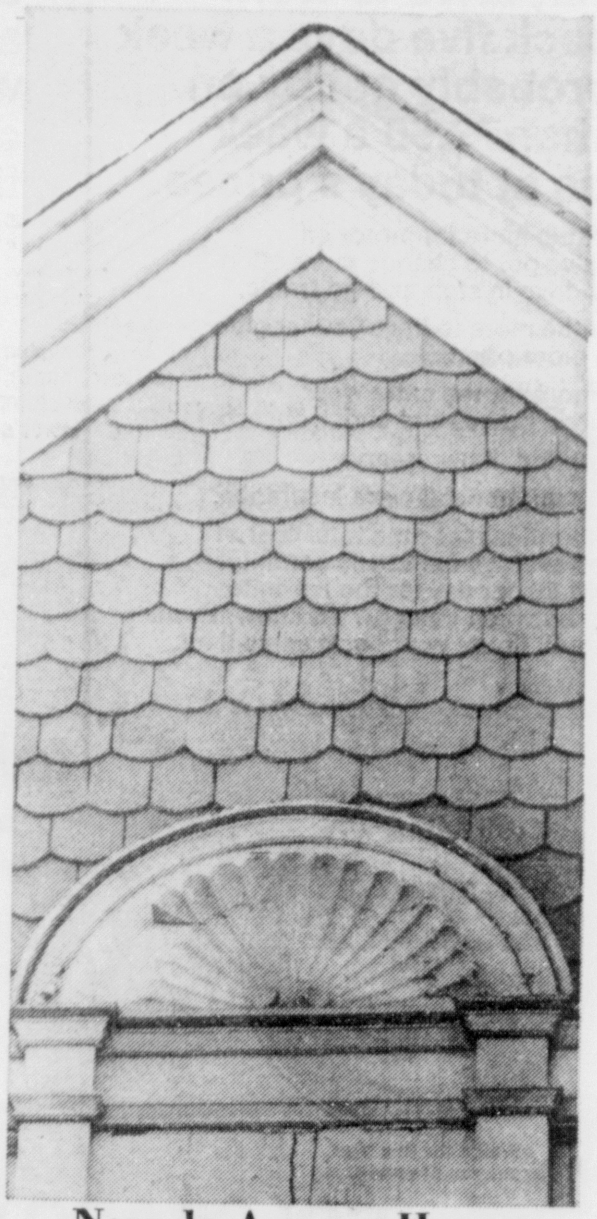

Later on, the scallop shell became associated with the Apostle James, the patron saint of pilgrims, whose remains, according to legend, were discovered during the 9th century in a cave in Spain.

A star is supposed to have led a bishop of the church to the cave and soon a town grew up near the spot. Called Compostella, a corruption of campus stellae or "Plain of the Stars," it would become an important pilgrimage site for the devout, who because of circumstance, could no longer make the journey to the Holy Land.

The pilgrims who went to Santiago de Compostella, situated in northwestern Spain, paid their respects at the tomb of St. James, then strolled along the beaches, picking up scallop shells, their token that they too had been on a holy trip.

In most artistic creations of St. James he is seen wearing a scallop shell, either on his wide-brimmed hat, or attached to his bag. To commemorate the visits of the pilgrims, an 18th century English writer penned these lines: "The scallop shows a coat of arms, That, of the bearer's line, Someone in former days hath been To Santiago's Shrine."

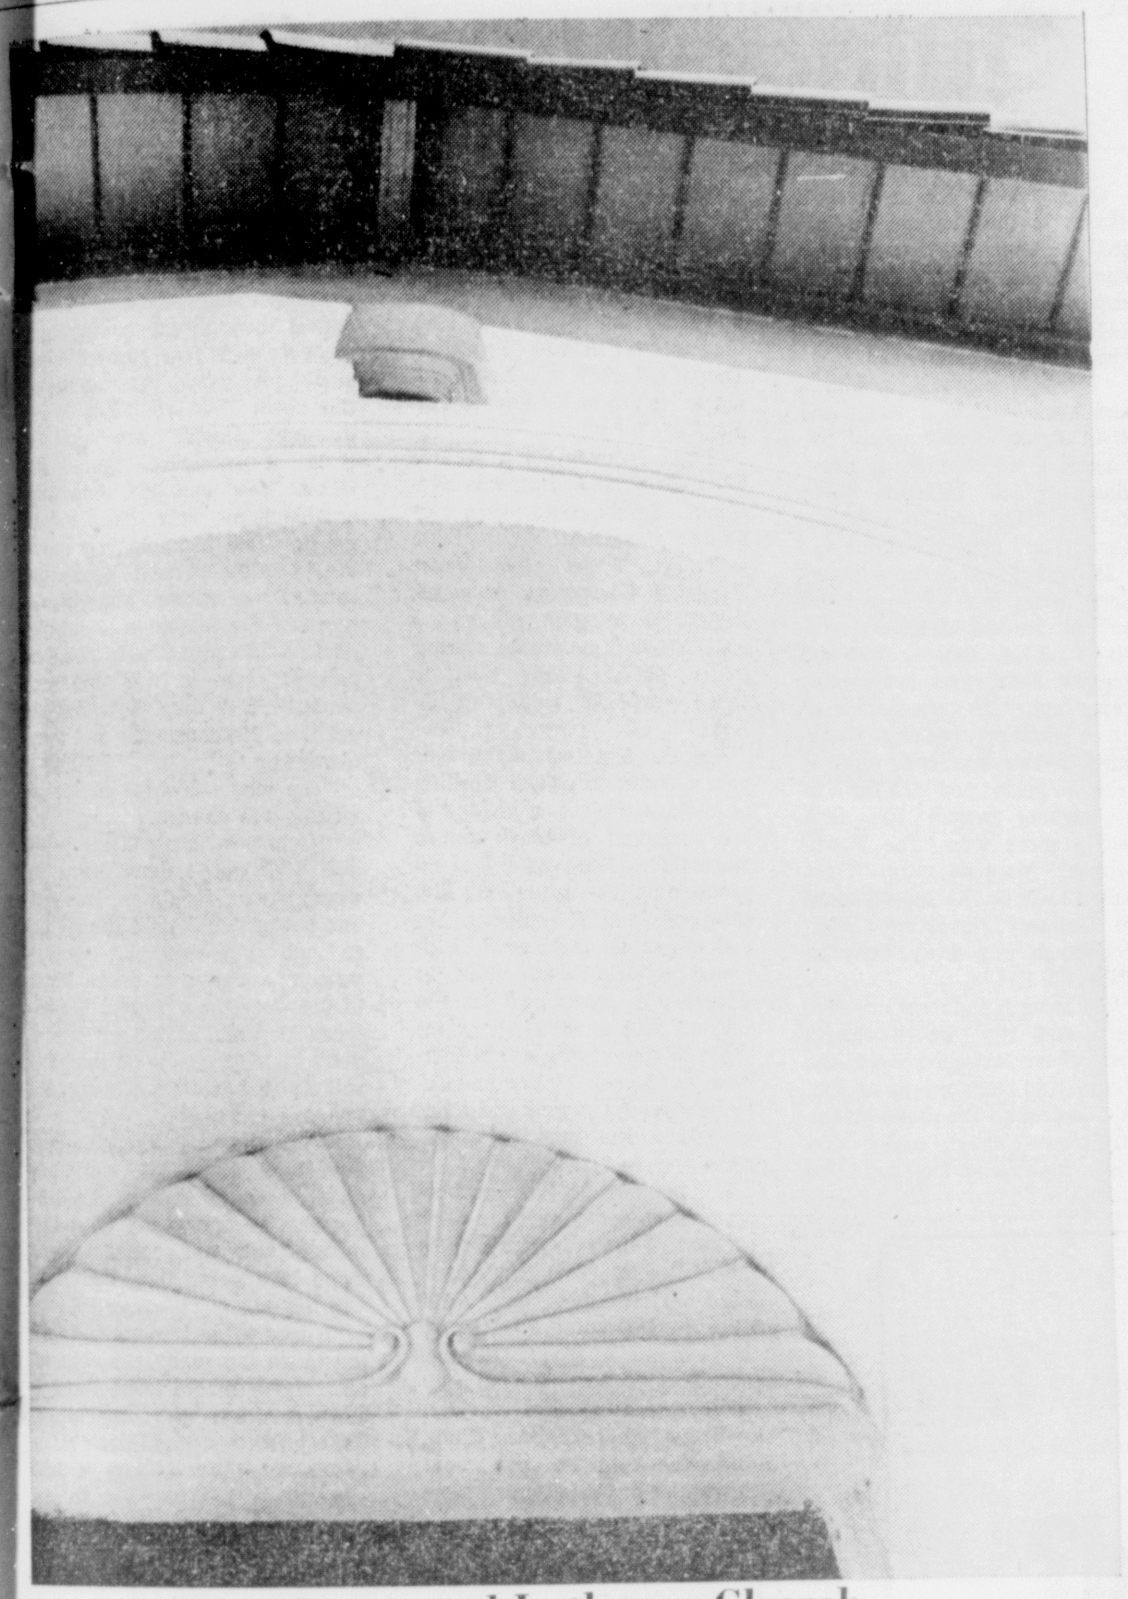

The shell's fan-shape has frequently turned up in silver, notably in sugar "shells," in bowls, basins, dishes, stoneware and fine china. The French word for the seashell, "Coquille St. Jacques," is also the name

Some Sell Seashells by Seashore; Others Make Architectural Treats

Colorado Springs, as everyone knows, is full of surprises, its architecture frequently enhanced by what might well be one of the loveliest designs ever taken from nature.

If one takes the time one may discern a number of landlocked scallop shells, some of quite superior outline, lending a romantic effect to private dwellings and public buildings about the city.

The design is interpreted in wood, stone, marble, any number of materials, that accommodate themselves to simulating the delicately patterned scallop, a decorative motif whose use as such stretches back to before recorded history.

Since practically nothing in nature has escaped the attention and whim of an artisan, it is no surprise that the scallop shell was a trendsetter at the outset.

From classical antiquity to the present, the scallop has appeared, its distinctive form showing up in ornaments, sculpture, architecture. There are many exquisite representatives of Aphrodite, the Greek goddess of the sea, rising naked from the foamy waters, perched upon an open scallop shell.

When the Romans adopted her, she became Venus, her birth of which is particularly appealing as painted by the 15th century Italian, Sandro Botticelli, a must-see on anyone's list when touring the Uffizi Gallery in Florence.

It was around the 1st century, B.C., that the scallop shell came into use as an architectural motif, its uneven surface ideally suited for the play of light and shadow so enjoyed by the Romans whose virtuosity as designers has always been highly esteemed.

The shell was especially attractive for the curves of an alcove, something many builders have always recognized, and in 18th century America it was frequently used in this manner, most notably in corner cupboards, giving such furnishings an extremely graceful appearance.

Early Christian art often drew from the scallop's design, the artists obviously not looking upon it as a symbol of a new religion, but rather as a superior form to be repeated for the pleasure of the eye.

Styles changed and naturalism came and went, as regularly as the tides which carried the shell from its home in the seas to find a resting place on sandy beaches.

When many Europeans went off to the Far East to fight in the Holy Wars, they found the shells that dotted the beaches to be novelties. Many took them home as souvenirs, proof that they had been on a Crusade. As time went on many chose the scallop shell as a badge of honor and when admitted to knighthood used it as an emblem on their family crests. Among the families who included it were those of Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden. Thus did the scallop become a mark of Western Christendom, a silent reminder that "they were there."

Quincy Won't Quit

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Quincy Jones had a cerebral stroke in the summer of 1974 and two operations, the second one last October. After some recuperation, he says his doctor told him not to baby himself, "so I got out and boogied.

"I did 47 concerts in March and April — 10 in America and 37 in Japan — and almost collapsed. I put together 15 musicians, which included three singers. That was a cut-down band; I had 25 before that."

It had been several years since Jones had taken a band on tour. He had been busy writing movie scores, but he stopped doing that nearly two years ago. "The mechanics of the situation become transparent. You can feel what it takes to put a good idea forth in a working way." His first movie score was "The Pawnbroker." More recently, "I got called in to do the second score on 'Getaway,' in 11 days. Sam Peckinpah was away, busy on 'Billy the Kid.'

"Dubbing is the most creative part and it's the director's baby. Steve McQueen owned the picture and he asked me to dub. You control all the sound levels. Sometimes they make the music too low or too loud. I've wanted to do it ever since I was in Los Angeles. I told McQueen I'd take care of it.

"I've got 17 soundtracks out of the 50 scores I've done. Sometimes you don't want them to come out. When I first moved to Los Angeles in 1966, they weren't making 'Superfly.' They'd tell me it was important not to let the music get too ethnic.

"Now, I never get a picture where they sit and discuss anything, where I could use a nice string section, some table music. I get eight-minute chases. If I never see an eight-minute chase again, it'll be too soon. There is no sitting around tables, philosophizing. Want to talk it over? Not until after the fight."

For the last two and a half years, Jones has been working on a huge project, a history of the evolution of black music since 1510. "The research is incredible on it — something like 600 books and 500 records. My contention is that what happened to the black man in America is contained in the music." Out of all of it, he intends to come forth with a textbook, a 13-week TV documentary, a movie, a record and a degree for a doctorate at the University of Massachusetts.

It'll be a project of his new production company. The first product of the new company is the LP "Mellow Madness," Jones' sixth LP for A&M Records. Upcoming are LPs by the Johnson Brothers, who are members of Jones' band; by Paulette McWilliams, vocalist in Rufus before Chaka Khan, and by Lesley Gore, with whom he worked 10 years ago at Mercury.

In the past he has made two LPs on Impulse and 28 on Mercury of which "Big Band Bossa Nova" sold best. "I also had some enormous bombs at Mercury. I was a vice president of the company and I kind of lost interest in recording there. There's so much stuff to do when your mind is thinking about 250 LPs a year. You can't focus your mind on the one that you're cutting."

The new production company, Jones says, also will get into TV and movie producing. He has produced one network TV show, "Duke Ellington, We Love You Madly," in 1973.

"I think the 1970s will be the years of launching sight and sound innovations. We're warming up to the laser beam which I think could replace TV. It comes through the ceiling and projects eight-foot, three-dimensional images in the middle of the room that you can walk through. People are getting tired of monaural sound in films. You can get into big quadraphonic sets. People forget how fast technology is moving. I almost used hologram images — where you throw faces at the audience — people duck — at my Greek Theater concert, but it was too expensive. But they're trying to get it to the consumer and they always do.

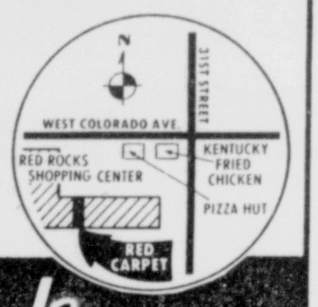

"The whole concept of script writing will change.

"Right now, most of the projects I've got I don't have to worry about deadlines. I've got two books I've bought the rights to and I've got top script writers working on them. Most of the work on a project is preproduction and script anyway. I don't have 92 people on the payroll waiting while we hurry developing the script.

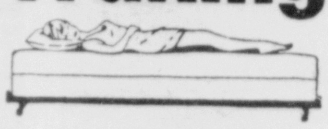

"We've putting things together out of love, not worrying about advances. Sure, it's important for everybody to make money. But you've got to get some love going first and that will follow.

"I used to be famous for trying to do too many projects at once. I guess that's one thing I learned from the operation. Take priorities. Conditions push you a lot. Now I say, if it's something that has got to go fast, somebody else better do it. If you've got a deadline close, you start to compromise, 'Well we can go with this; they've got to produce.' I don't want that."

His own LPs, Jones says even the last ones on A and M, don't have the same kind of sound. "Nothing is fun to do all the time the same way. It probably has worked against me. A formula kind of sound gets over with the public. I can't hear a formula sound; too many different colors are going on for me. And then, if you have an identity sound, usually it comes in and goes out quick, too."

DUBLIN DINNER PLAYHOUSE
"Butterflies Are Free"

As a play, "Butterflies Are Free" already has established itself as a popular piece, both on stage and screen.

Thus it was with a fair amount of anticipation we went to view the current production at the Dublin Dinner Playhouse, 6385 N. Academy Blvd.

It was with more than a fair amount of satisfaction that we came away.

Bonnie Fitzpatrick and Collette Divine, owners of the Dublin, are the justifiably proud producers of this, their fourth presentation, which was cast primarily in New York and is directed by Charles Christopher, currently the director of a dinner-theater in Evansville, Ind.

"Butterflies" is a warm-hearted comedy, the story of a young blind man and his attempts at leading a normal, independent life.

Don Baker, blind from birth, has struck an agreement with his over-protective mother, a smug and stuffy matron in Scarsdale, that he will live in an apartment by himself without interference from her for two solid months, further terms to be negotiated. The entire play takes place in Don's "Taj Mahal," a run-down one-room on Manhattan's Lower East Side.

He's halfway through the trial period when he gets a new neighbor—Jill Tanner, a 19-year-old hip chick from California, pre-occupied to the point of obsession with defending her independence from commitments and entanglements, who wants nothing more than going gaily and carefree through life, wearing farout clothes and doing grooovy things like acting in New York. She identifies strongly with butterflies. "The butterflies are free," she quotes from Dickens' "Bleak House," mistaking it for Mark Twain.

The contrast between Don—sensitive, shy, but determined—and Jill—robust, unpredictable and undependable—is rather like Alice and the Mad Hatter in reverse.

The two are getting terribly well acquainted when, a month early to the day, in walks Mother.

To Mother, the promiscuous Jill is evidence in surplus that "Donnie" still needs her protection, that he is as yet incapable of managing for himself. To give Mother credit, it isn't that she simply disapproves of Jill. That would be too narrow-minded, even for her. She's at least insightful enough to realize that Don could easily fall in love with her, a girl who shows no ability to maintain a permanent relationship, a girl who could hurt him deeply just by being herself, just by trying to be free.

What follows is a series of realistic, believable dialogues between and among the characters, an exposure of their strengths and weaknesses, the kind of dialogue in which most of us have probably been involved at least once in our lives.

And if all that sounds heavy for a comedy, it serves to remind us that life itself is not funny, that interpersonal relationships are not a joke, but that humor makes life more bearable, less formidable, even enjoyable. A comedy need not stop being funny just because it has a social message. It is perhaps an asset, to be able to identify with the lives and problems of characters on stage and to see that humor is a more positive approach than despair and self-pity.

John Hotveat gives a highly creditable performance as Don, laughing off his blindness as easily as a well-adjusted blind man might ("Just ask me if I've felt any good books lately.") It's a role which demands that an actor convince his audience that he is genuinely blind, and Hotveat has met that demand admirably. (He confided after the show that maintaining a vacant, unfixed stare—while still managing natural facial expressions and a smile that seems to come from within—makes his eyes "very tired.")

Whether laughing, crying, raging or cowering, he expresses Don's feelings as naturally as he might his own. It's a sterling performance.

Sharon Humphries is delightful as Jill—exuberant, properly awkward at meeting the first blind man of her life, a girl who is too obvious in her attempt to hide her feelings by laughing them off. She drops Jill's non-caring veneer and stops in Jill's headlong rush into nowhere at just the right time to show an unexpected maturity and insight in her assessments of Don and his mother. The role requires a delicate balance between more-blonde-than-brains and more-brains-than-you—bargained for, and Ms. Humphries measures up to it fully.

Mary Benson combines poise with candor, graciousness with sarcasm, warmth and understanding with supercilliousness, and delivers them all up as Mrs. Baker, the professional-mother-of-a-blind-son who accepts with queenly resolve the fact that she's out of business as a mother. For all her exaggerated anxiety about providing for her son's well-being, she recognizes the time to stay her hand, the time when Jill is packing to move in with Ralph Austin, her new director, and Don is feeling defeated enough to want to return home. There's a considerable strength in the mother-turned-mentor who challenges her once dependent son to forget self-pity and get on with his life. Mother's coming from a beautiful place, and Ms. Benson is bringing her there.

Steven Brunner is the cast's only "local" actor, and a versatile one, at that. Dublin audiences have seen him as the femmie Frangipane in "Irma La Douce" and the blusterly South'un Senator in "Finian's Rainbow." He's equally at home in the role of Ralph Austin, the nudity-and-obscenity-for-society's-sake director who probably doesn't realize and certainly doesn't care that Jill is using him as an excuse to avoid any possible emotional attachment to Don. In the context of the play, Ralph is a caricature, and Brunner presents him as such with an honesty that signals that it's Ralph, not Brunner, who is a put-on.

A dinner-theater would hardly be complete without dinner, and so would any comments without mention of it.

The earlier part of the evening is devoted to an elegant bouffet which requires two trips to appreciate adequately—the first to savor the salads ranging from tangy relishes and vegetables a la greque to vegetables or fruit in sweet dressings, the second for selecting among whatever breads, cooked vegetables, casseroles, blintzes and meat dishes have been prepared for the evening.

"Butterflies" will run Wednesdays through Saturdays with a final performance Nov. 23. Reservations are necessary.

Pianists Present Recital

Two Colorado College students, Bill Phelps and Margaret Liu, will present a piano recital at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Armstrong Theater. The concert is open to the public.

Phelps placed first and Liu, second, in auditions last spring for an appearance with the Colorado Springs Community Orchestra. Phelps, a senior from Greeley, will perform the first movement of Beethoven's "Concerto No. 3." He will also perform this as soloist with the Community Orchestra at 3 p.m. Nov. 16 in the auditorium of Mitchell High School.

Liu, a senior from Durango who holds a Boettcher Scholarship, will perform the first movement of Tschaikovsky's "Piano Concerto No. 1." Both pianists are students of Dr. Max Lanner, professor emeritus of music at the College. Lanner will play the orchestral parts of the works for the students.

The concert is sponsored by the Leisure Program Committee.

Theatre Workshop In Pueblo

Pueblo's Sangre de Cristo Arts and Conference Center will be the site for the University of Southern Colorado's eighth annual Theatre Workshop to be held Nov. 22.

The workshop, sponsored by the university's Theatre Department, is an informative day of theatre events for high school, college and community theatre students, directors and workers.

Activities begin at 9 a.m. with registration and coffee hour. The first session begins at 10 a.m. with a workshop on "Improvization for the Theatre" to be conducetd for Dr. Kenneth D. Plonkey, professor of theatre at USC. Dr. Budge Threlkeld, professor of Speech and Theatre at U.S.C. and Lawrence Bradley, technical director for the University Theatre will conduct a workshop on "Lighting the Scene" at 11 a.m.

As part of the annual event a free matinee of "Inherit the Wind" will be presented in the afternoon for the students attending the workshop.

The workshop is free to interested individuals. Additional information and pre-registration forms are available by contacting the department of Theatre on the Orman Campus of the University of Southern Colorado at Pueblo.

Seventeen major college coaches are new on the job this season. Nine are in their first campaign as a head coach.

'PEANUTS' HUCKO

'Peanuts' Hucko Opens Jazz Joynt

Clarinetist 'Peanuts" Hucko, well-known to local jazz aficionados because of his appearances at the annual jazz party at the Broadmoor Hotel, has opened Peanuts Hucko's Jazz Joynt in the Sheraton Hotel, 3535 Quebec St., Denver.

Hucko's jazz group, which features soloist Louise Tobin, who sang with the Benny Goodman and other big bands, plays nightly from 8 p.m., Tuesdays through Saturdays. Other members are Bobby Green, pianist; Gus Johnson, drummer, formerly with Count Basie, and base player Colin Gieg. Vibraphone player Red Norvo is currently an added attraction.

Hucko left high school at 17 with his parents' blessing to join the Jack Jenny band, the beginning of a career which took him to all the big bands. While with the Air Force Band, directed by Glenn Miller, Hucko, who also played tenor saxophone, switched exclusively to the clarinet.

Hucko's career includes such high spots as heading the "Jazz All-Stars" at Eddie Condon's famed jazz mecca in New York; opening his own club, the Navarre, in Denver; a two-year stint with the Lawrence Welk show and innumerable appearances with the "World's Greatest Jazz Band." Hucko has played in Canada, Europe and Japan in addition to major cities of the United States.

Artist's Handcrafted Jewelry Made of Bone

By ELLA WARREN
Gazette Telegraph
Staff Writer

The soft luster of white is offset beautifully against the black velvet in the showcase. Closer inspection reveals the fine detail of the carving on the owl earrings and other intricately designed pieces. The medium is — bone.

Mark Horvat has combined a natural talent for carving with an unusual material to create jewelry that is totally different. The charm is in the synthesis of the two ingredients.

Jewelry making, since the time the first caveman slipped a ring of rope around his mate's finger, has been an undying art. However, the "art" in jewelry making has largely been distilled from the product with the development of stamping machines and other mechanizing methods.

But the interest in handcrafted jewelry is undergoing a revival according to Horvat. "I think the public is leaning toward handcrafted things. The interest in handtooled Indian jewelry is an example."

Speaking of the material he has chosen, he says jokingly, "Prehistoric man was probably the last one who did this."

The deer and elk antlers that he uses are not hard to find. "The deer and elk shed their antlers once a year and you can pick them up if you bum around in the woods a lot." He adds, "What I am really doing is recycling one of nature's products."

When he finds the antlers they are bleached to an attractive whiteness which he says he prefers to the darker bone of freshly discarded antlers. Also, "The larger deer and elk have much harder bone that is almost the quality of ivory. It is extremely hard and you can get good detail in it."

Various sizes and styles of tikis are prominent in his collection. "The Polynesians used one tusk of a milk shark to make a tiki and I used an elk's antler because it was the same basic shape."

Carving from bone has been a sometimes hobby for about 15 years for Horvat. The inspiration for the first tiki necklace came from the television show "Adventures in Paradise." "There was a big muscle- bound dude on the show with a tiki around his neck and my sister wanted a tiki. That is when I carved my first deer horn."

"These tikis are really a conversation piece," he continues. "They are really unique, you don't see any like that."

Horvat uses a set of carving chisels for his work, making the initial cuts with a hack-saw and finishing with sandpaper. Every piece is different he says, though the styles may be similar, because he does them free hand.

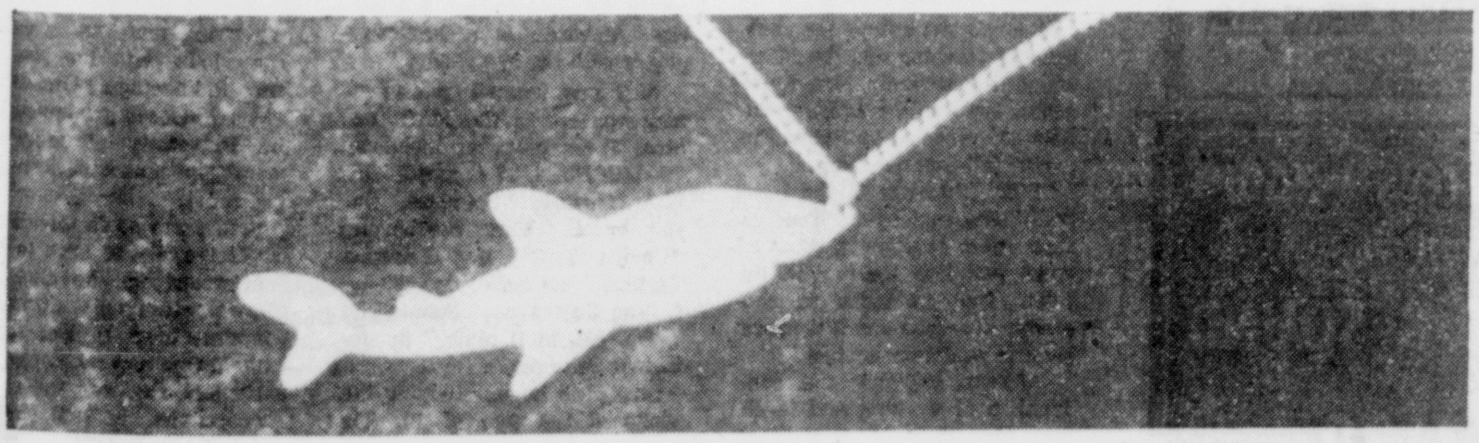

Horvat says he has always had a knack for drawing and has previously carved elk heads and similar objects in gunstocks and pistol grips. That is a thing of the past, he says, because the decoration on guns is now done by a stamping machine.

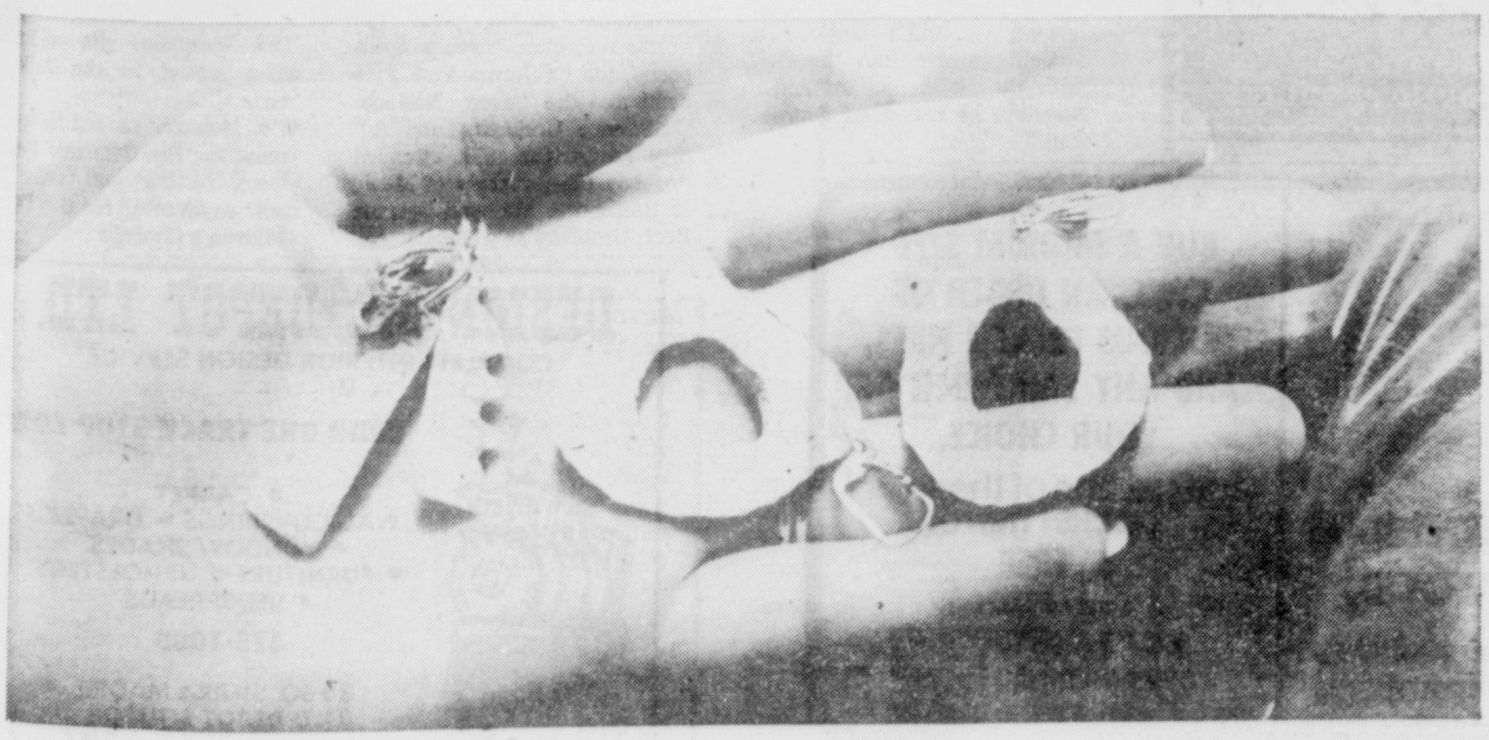

Horvat makes earrings with posts, wires and clips for all types of ears, from which might dangle a miniature owl, shark or tiki. Necklaces and charm bracelets are adorned with similar figures. Horvat also carves alligators, bears, squirrels and various birds for his jewelry.

Only recently has he attempted to market his jewelry and has been pleasantly surprised at the response. He attributes the interest in part to the unusual medium with which he works and in part to the revived interest in handcrafted products.

With the show of interest in his work, Horvat plans to accelerate his hobby. "I used to do it just to tinker around. But I am getting much more interested in my hobby now."

Denver's KOA Anchorwoman Brings Reality to Classroom

Introducing an element of reality into the classroom is among the teaching objectives of KOA-TV anchorwoman Reynelda Muse, visiting lecturer this semester at the CU School of Journalism.

For the second year Mrs. Muse is instructing Journalism 350, a course in broadcast reporting, in addition to working with the news and anchor crew at Channel Four News.

Seventeen students meet with Mrs. Muse from 9 a.m.-noon Mondays on the Boulder campus.

"This is not a lecture course," Muse said. "Theory has to be combined with practice for students to understand the work. But the emphasis is on writing.

"I'm trying to introduce students to the realism of the profession by imposing deadline pressure. The value of the course would be lost if students did not have a sense of immediacy."

Class members are given assignments and must write and complete them in class the same day. Other coursework includes translating newspaper stories to broadcast style.

According to the TV anchorwoman, maintaining contact with the students and their progress is among the most important and time-consuming responsibilities of teaching.

She attempts to grade and return assignments quickly so students can see the evaluation of their work. Frequently she meets with individuals to discuss their writing progress.

"If I'm not able to see students on a one-to-one basis a lot is lost," she explained. "The interaction there is an important part of the learning process. But there are a lot of papers to grade. It takes time."

Mrs. Muse admits the rigorous schedule of working and teaching becomes hectic at times. The responsibilities of being a wife, mother, career woman and now teacher demand an organized schedule.

"You have to have a good system to get all this done," she said. "But it is possible. I'm able to spend time with my family and also pursue my career."

Mrs. Muse and her husband, a Denver attorney, have a three-year-old daughter and are expecting a baby in February.

The Denver broadcaster received a bachelor's degree from Ohio State University in 1968. Her first broadcasting experience was with WOSU, a college broadcasting station, where she worked for two years.

Upon graduation she was told by taechers and professionals there were no opportunities for women in television broadcasting.

"Seven years ago I was told audiences would not be receptive to a woman announcer," she recalled. "But I didn't accept that."

Mrs. Muse noted that numbers of women in broadcasting have increased in the past few years. She correlates that increase to the growth of the woman's movement. "The field has opened a great deal," she remarked. "Women are being more vocal to station's hiring policies."

Prior to her appointment as a Visiting Professional to the journalism school, Mrs. Muse instructed a 12-week writing program for minority students at Columbia University in New York. She taught for two summers.

Although she enjoys the challenge of teaching and the interaction with students, Mrs. Muse doubts she would ever leave the field of broadcast journalism to pursue full-time teaching.

"I like this end of the business," she explained. "Your effectiveness is greatly dimmed when you lose touch with the field. The profession is constantly changing and it is necessary to maintain contact.

"I'm enjoying the combination of working and teaching. The students raise interesting questions. I find it challenging . . . And I want to help students evolve into the field with the skills and an understanding of broadcast journalism."

SUE MOHNSEN, PIANO, AND KR'STINA HALL

Violin and Piano Concert at the FAC

A special concert sponsored by the Fine Arts Center features Kristina Hall and Sue Ann Mohnsen today at 8 p.m.

The concert, free and open to the public, highlights two newly appointed artists of the Colorado Springs Symphony. Miss Hall serves as the concertmaster of the symphony and is a visiting artist at the University of Southern Colorado, Pueblo. Mrs. Mohnsen is a keyboard player with the symphony.

They have teamed for an evening concert in the FAC theater. Their program includes: "Sonata No. 8, in C major" by W.A. Mozart; "Somanze, Op. 40" by L. Van Beethoven; "Devil's Trill" by Giuseppe Tartini; "Romanze, Op. 50" by L. Van Beethoven; "Sonata No. 3, Op. 108, in D minor" by Johannes Brahms.

Miss Hall began studying the violin at the age of 10. She began her experience as concertmaster at 13, with the Northern California Junior Symphony, the California Fine Arts Festival, the Menc National Conference Orchestra and All-City Orchestras. She attended Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore, Md., and became Berl Senofsky's youngest college student. She later studied with Jascha Brodsky of the Curtis Quartet and with the concertmasters of the Pittsburgh, Boston and New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestras.

She has been both a professional teacher and performer having taught violin at the New School of Music in Philadelphia and at LaPorte High School in Houston. Professionally she has performed as first violinist of two string quartets as well as first violin with the New Orleans Philharmonic Orchestra.

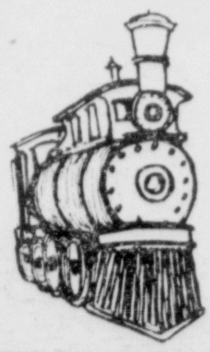

Mrs. Mohnsen graduated from the University of Iowa with honors in piano performance. She received her master's degree in piano performance from the University of Iowa in May. She served as the choir and chorus accompanist during her years at Iowa U. For the '74 and '75 Opera Workshops at the university she was the official accompanist. In 1968 she was selected the Iowa All-State Accompanist and for the Southeast Iowa Symphony she performed as a soloist in the following years.

Mrs. Mohnsen served as accompanist for the Colorado Springs Opera Festival and is the prep choir co-director for the Denver Children's Chorale.

ASPENS IN WINTER — Photographer Robert Godfrey's vision of endangered wilderness areas amid poetic splendors is shown in a photo display at the Fine Arts Center. Godfrey contends that the 1964 Wilderness Act "instead of protecting placid scenic settings, they are being further depleted by poor management and the ignorance of the area visitors." He has sought out the solitude and beauty of the wilderness in photographs, all taken with a 4X5 camera. "The Paradox of Wilderness," Godfrey's photographic document of the Snowmass-Maroon Bells Wilderness area, will be published as a book in 1976. His photography show will hang in the FAC's photography alcove through Nov. 29.

Top Cellist In Concert

One of America's outstanding cellists, Leonard Rose, will perform with the Denver Symphony Orchestra (DSO) Monday and Tuesday at Denver's Auditorium Theatre, and Wednesday at Phipps Auditorium. Concert times are 7:30 p.m. Monday, 8 p.m. Tuesday, and 1:30 p.m. Wednesday. Music Director and Conductor Brian Priestman will conduct all three performances.

Music slated for performance is St. Saens' "Cello Concerto in A minor," Bernstein's Symphonic Dances from "West Side Story" and Stravinsky's "Petroushka."

Tickets for the concert are priced at $9.90, $8.80, $6.60, $5.50 and $4.95 and are available at D&F and Miller Music.

FOUR O'CLOCK THANKSGIVING

We are done with the dishes,
Finishing now with a folding of damp tea towels
And a last putting away —
  Reach the glasses to the high shelf
  Fit the spoons in the felt-lined box
  Wipe the counter clean
There is one more task
And a boon:

Gathering it into high corners
I walk
Turning the teakettle on
And the lamp, in passing
Banging the screen door on my way out
To stand on the cold steps
And shake the tablecloth.

A fine ash of snow sifts through the shadowing air.
I shake it out
And the wind catches it
And the light from the kitchen
And billows it golden into the gray sky.

When I gather it in again
Chill and clean against me
The water will be hot for tea
And then
Company and cold turkey sandwiches
And on this same cloth a jigsaw puzzle of November fields,
Cold and gray shadow in a thousand pieces.

But for now
I signal
With this white flag
The center of things:
Dinner over and supper not begun
And between the two scarcely a minute
Of gray sky and flapping damask.
All too soon
It gets really dark
And the snow deepens
And four of the puzzle pieces are lost forever.

But for now
I stand
Poised between good and good
With the light behind me.

REQUIEM FOR RUFFIAN

In all our newscasts
of disaster and despair,
love and hope awoke
when a nation's heart could break with a gallant filly's death.

— Rosalee G. Porter

NOVEMBER 11, 1918

Once, we saw Peace come;
we felt her hands
like snow on snow;
we watched her printless shining footsteps go in sarabands.
She made no sign . . . she made no sound
  . . . no sight.
The clear November light,
November air,
betrayed her . . . she was there!

The town we'd left behind was wracked by pestilence and wild with bells;
the mind erased it briefly.
Somewhere on every street someone was dying . . .
dying to that intransigent brazen ringing . . .
dying to singing.
Somewhere on every street someone was crying.

In our walled valley snow was laid so deep we never thought to weep.
The treebound cliffs were tall enough to shut the frantic ringing out;
there was no sound at all, except the sound of silence while Peace came.

We never spoke her name.
The jays were silent also, and their flight made azure ribbons pulsing across snow.
In white finality
we heard Peace go.

— Dorothy Stott Shaw

WRITER'S CRAMP

My Pegasus is not a frost-white steed,
Silver winged, slim-legged,
With small, impatient hooves;
Eager to crop the grass in some Elysian field;
Or mounting higher onto Helicon
Look down on mere immortal gods.
My Pegasus is broad of back and thick of neck —
A stubborn, low-land mule who throws his shoulders forward
In the harness — if it pleases him.
I coax and plead and beat his hide
But there he stands — unless his spirit moves him —
His, not mine!
For mine can flag and drop
And he is off at some ungainly pace,
Tearing along at break-neck speed;
And I, short of breath, with blood red face,
Pant and gasp and try to catch him.

—Nancy E. Berk

ON A TRIP TO HAPPINESS

Let us sit out on a thought and we'll watch the world go by painting sunlight with our fingers directing traffic in the sky

Let us entertain our notions plucking flowers from a cloud finding ways of doing mischief singing happy songs aloud

Let us lose our inhibitions shed our shy and lonely ways then we'll do some skinny-dipping through the sky upon the rays

Let us meddle with the raindrops find a rainbow to caress reminisce the fun we shared on a trip to happiness

— James Taylor

AND OBLIGE

When I am far away from you horizon distances are blue;
the rain clouds weeping down the sky are nowhere lonelier than I.

If sometimes your hand looks bereft you may remember when I left and know the rare task we had done together there, to hang the sun.

— Myrtle Chance Allen

NIGHT RIDER

This foreceful planet,
Delicately bridled upon posed axis,
Moves with power into the universal night.
Here, upon the utmost pinnacle,
Pressed to a vast and ebon space,
I hear the slow, pulsed hooves of stars,
And listen to echoing shouts
Among the galaxies —
Tongueless commands
Through timeless corridors.
Etched upon rock, spread eagle,
Sterile of seed and dust,
I pierce the barrier at once,
And chart the smooth-hurled course.

— Miriam D. Wilson

THANKS FOR INTANGIBLES

I give thanks for abundant air
And for my capacity to breathe.
There is no tax on air,
No law prohibits it.
The color of my skin,
The unpronounceable combination of consonants in my name,
The altar at which I kneel,
The way I mark my ballot at the polls —
None of these things can limit
My inspiration or expiration of good clean air.
I am thankful for the sky whose color is as blue,
Whose sweep from horizon to horizon is as vast,
And whose dawns and sunsets flame as brilliantly
For me as for the President of the United States,
Or for Albert Schweitzer, or Leonard Bernstein,
Or the presiding Bishop or the Episcopal Church,
Or any dowager perched successfully
Upon the top rung of the social ladder.
No delinquent payments can deprive me
Of my share of sky-estate.
No ordinance makes illegal my possession
Of the sun, the moon, and countless galaxies of stars.
I give thanks for consciousness,
That keen, perceptive awareness which gives me
Air and sky
And love
And infinity.

THE PENITENT

When the world was young and the dawn was red he refused to look;
but sat with the illustrious dead,
nose in a book.

And the times that Paris called, and Rome, when the fares were low —
there was nothing to gain by staying at home.
But he did not go.

Nor when music lured and the halls were lit did he deign to dance.
Now he sighs for the sins he did not commit when he had a chance.

—Mildred Edgar

A wave of snow has swept over the lawn
The crest is still to come
Or slip over the mountains and pass us by Lace, foam, and curve
I am holding my breath and my will and my hope
Waiting the pause between waves for more snow

—JoAnne Bader

RADIO'S CHILDREN

I wasn't around yet when
  Marconi was fiddling with the wireless,
But I was there when they put it into the box.

And, suddenly, Radio happened.
It uncurled from its cocoon of copper wires.
Antennas sprouted from its galena-studded head.
We were invaded from the air.

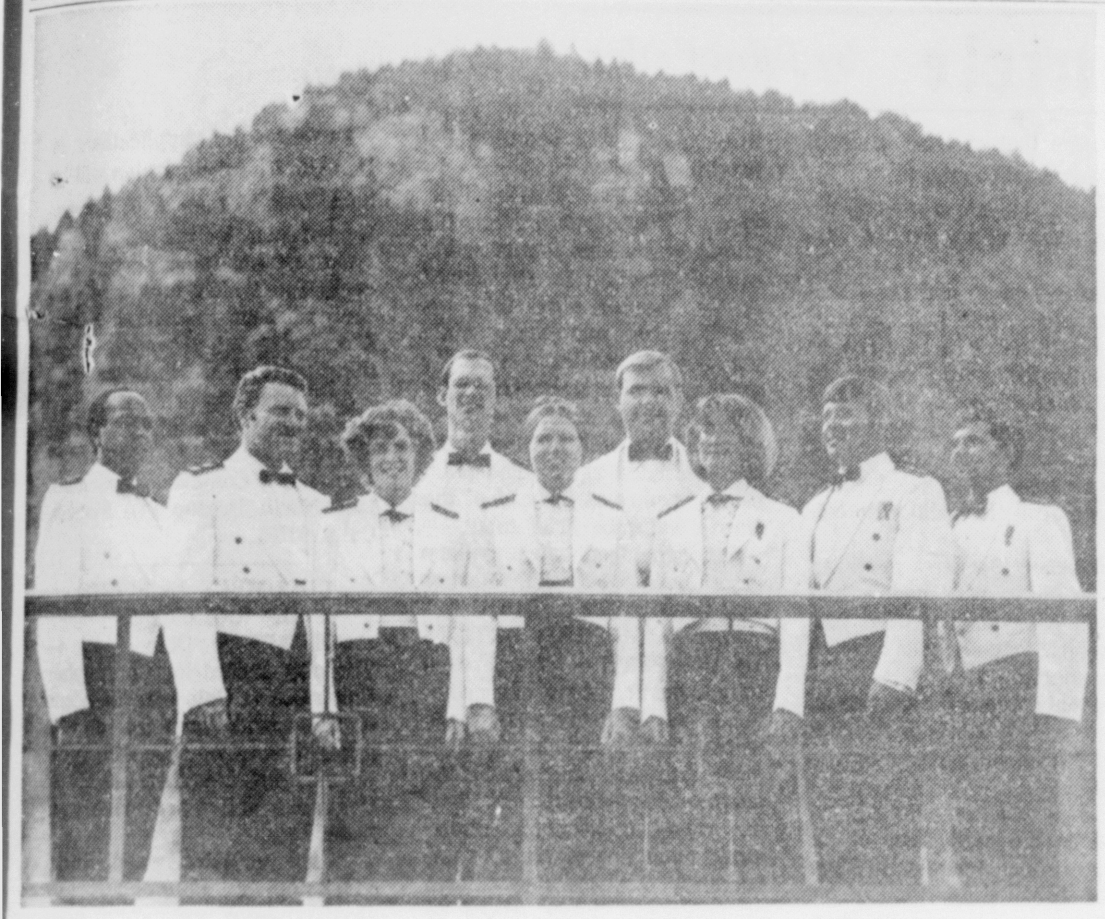

At first they came into our homes:
Orphan Annie, Jack Armstrong, Mary Marlin,
Fred Allen, Norman Corwin, Arch Oboler,
The Metropolitan and Carnegie Hall.
Later we went out to them —
To Memphis and Chicago and Juarez,
To the Twin Cities and to Calgary.

We learned to listen
The crackling, tiny voices grew refined and careful.

The music grew fuller.
Our ears changed too, became discriminating, fastidious.
Crumpled cellophane became an avalanche.

We weren't really ready for T.V.
It was loud and required watching,
And it discommoded
  The private inner eye.
The screens grew larger and brighter;
  We watched people dying and teeth being numbered
  Until we needed an escape.
And Radio was there, in its little box,
  Coiled and waiting.

TO MAKE THEIR DEBUT — The Air Force Academy Band's new vocal ensemble, Shades of Blue, will make its first public appearance at the band's public concert at 3 p.m. Sunday in the AFA's Arnold Hall Theater. Comprised of Symphonic Band members, the Shades of Blue will perform two different medleys of song in a salute to Veterans Day. The concert, the second in the band's Bicentennial Concert Season, is called "Autumn in the Rockies" and also signals the debut of the band's new country and western show band, Wild Blue Country. The concert is free and open to the public.

DANCE UMBRELLA TO OPEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Twelve dance companies, realizing the financial difficulties of producing a New York season, have announced a "dance umbrella."

During the first season, Nov. 12 through Dec. 7, five companies will appear at the Roundabout Stage One. They are Viola Farber Dance Company, Cliff Keuter Dance Company, James Cunningham with the Acme Dance Company, the Lar Lubovitch Dance Company and Merce Cunningham and Dance Company.

From Feb. 18 through March 14, there will be Margaret Beals and Impulses Company, 5 by 2 Dance Company, Kazuko Hirabayashi Dance Theater, Elizabeth Keen Dance Company, Jennifer Muller and the Works, Kathryn Posin Dance Company and Dan Wagoner and Dancers.

Maharishi To Visit Griffin

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, founder of the worldwide Transcendental Meditation program, visits the Merv Griffin Show for a second time on Friday at 3 p.m. on Channel 9 (KBTV). The Metromedia Corporation, which syndicates the Griffin Show, describes it as a "lively" and "uplifting show" and "an excellent opportunity to hear a clear, in-depth explanation of the TM (Transcendental Meditation) program." Griffin described his first show with Maharishi as "one of the most extraordinary" he has ever done.

Clint Eastwood, Mary Tyler Moore, U.S. Congressman Richard Nolan, and Dr. Bernard Glueck, all of whom practice TM, join Griffin to explore with Maharishi the personal benefits of the Transcendental Meditation program.

The Colorado Springs office of the International Meditation Society will be setting up television sets in public locations throughout the area to make the show more available to viewers. For information on TV locations, call the I.M.S. at 475-1844.

THE DEADLINE FOR CHRISTMAS IS NOVEMBER 21.

Even though November 21 comes before Thanksgiving, it's actually a kind of "deadline" for Christmas.

While you may be thinking Thanksgiving, it's not too early to turn your thoughts to Christmas...particularly if you're thinking about getting a Master Charge card.

Master Charge can be mighty handy to help you buy the gifts and things you'll want for the holidays. And it's good at more places in the Rocky Mountain area than any other card.

If you'd like Master Charge for Christmas, it's important that you apply by Friday, November 21, so your bank can get your card to you in time.

Apply at any Master Charge bank...or, if you like, call 635-1700.

Arts Chronicle by John Fetler

BERGQUIST AFGHANS — The other day we happened to be in the public library, and saw there the display of afghans made by Anna E. Bergquist, arranged in the glass case in the lobby.

These afghans were not only very impressive, but a delight for the eye, showing a thorough artistic sensitivity and the remarkable crafts skill of the artist. There is a resurgent interest in home crafts like this, and many museums have acquired collections in this category, as well as in other textiles.

The afghans by Anna E. Bergquist show that the art of making beautiful and colorful afghans is by no means confined to the past century, but is flourishing as strongly as ever.

A look at the afghans was enough to convince us that museums would undoubtedly be eager to have them, if, in the meantime they are not acquired by private collectors.

SUCCESSFUL ART GALLERY — With dinner, that is.

That's the newest gimmick to sell art. And, it seems a very successful one.

The word comes from James Hunt Barker, who runs galleries in Palm Beach and New York City. But the discovery came at his gallery in Nantucket, Mass.

It started out as a modest idea. Barker reflected on the fact that the people who come to an "opening," like to talk to the artists.

Why not, he thought, serve them something more than just coffee or punch and cookies? To make them more convivial?

It happens that Barker likes to cook. He planned a special "dinner art preview" for some 75 prominent guests.

However, by mistake his staff sent out 300 invitations. Or perhaps, as it is often the case, 300 invitations were sent out with the hope that at least some 75 of them would make it.

Imagine his surprise when 220 people showed up for the dinner.

Barker had to don his chef's apron again, and had his staff scurry out, after hours, to scour the town for a food supply, so that he could serve his guests cold borscht with sour cream, stuffed chicken and grapes with wild rice, zucchini, salad, sherbet and fruit, in addition to coffee.

Somehow Barker managed and to those who hadn't had enough he explained what had happened. The result was a happy party.

Not only dinners. Luncheons, too, at which a visiting artist gives a brief talk, charming the ladies.

It helps that his gallery is located on the main floor of an old, three-story mansion in Nantucket, because this kind of an activity requires space, what with card tables and chairs.

During and after the dinner there's entertainment, a guitarist, or other musicians, if it's a formal affair, or taped music if informal.

After his initial experience, he planned more carefully. His dinners now are usually for some 35 guests. That's how many steaks he can get into the baking pan, he explains.

Naturally, the tables are covered with tablecloths, aglow with light from antique candelabras.

For a recent show of paintings by Grandma Moses, he set little tables with beautiful old handmade quilts.

No precooked food, either. Barker, the host-chef greets his guests at the door, impeccably attired. The guests are served drinks, Barker slips into his chef's apron and cooks while the guests wander about the gallery. Dinner is served with the help of the staff, and Barker sits down with the diners as the host once again. The pitch usually comes at the end of the dinner, with the brief talks.

Although food and gallery costs have gone up, Barker says it works like a charm.

YOUNG MUSICAL ARTISTS TO COMPETE — The Fresno Philharmonic, which has established an enviable record for helping young artists along in their careers, has announced another competition, this time for young instrumental musicians, excluding piano, who are currently students in a college or university music school or conservatory, between the ages of 18 and 30.

The competition is for musicians in Colorado and twelve other states in the western area, including Alaska and Hawaii.

The winner will get a $1,000 cash award and appearance with the Fresno Philharmonic. Second prize is $500.

Deadline for applications is Dec. 15. The competition will be held Jan. 24 and 25 in Fresno. Registration fee is $10.

Contestants must play a concerto for which orchestral accompaniment is available, and a recital group of works, everything performed from memory.

Additional information may be obtained from: Mrs. Marvin Baxter, Young Artists Award Regional Contest Chairman, 1362 North Fresno St., Fresno, Calif. 93703.

COLUMBUS IS SCENE OF 'COLUMBUS'

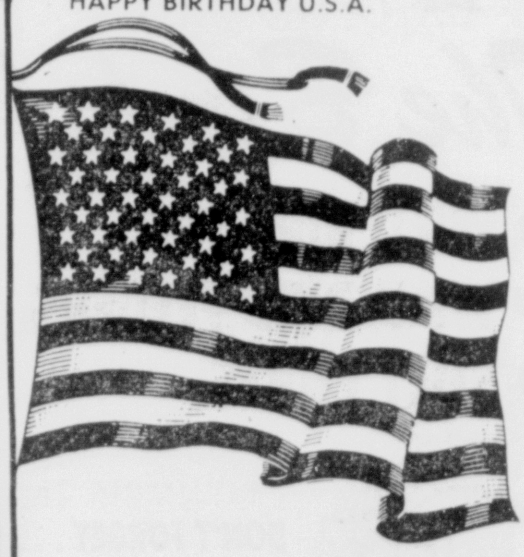

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The city named for Christopher Columbus in Ohio was the scene of the world premiere, on the eve of Columbus Day, of a symphonic work based on the life of Columbus and his discovery of America.

The musical work, titled "Christopher Columbus," by Brooklyn-born composer Ezra Laderman, was commissioned by the Columbus Symphony for Detroit-born basso Ara Berberian.

It is a monologue for solo bass voice and full orchestra of approximately 22 minutes duration. The text was adapted from a play by the late Nicos Kazantzakis, who also wrote "Zorba the Greek."

'$6 Million Man' Has His Own Cult

By RAY BROUSSARD
Gazette Telegraph
Staff Writer

DENVER (GT) — Actor Lee Majors had a flair with horses, but there's no way he could make the four-legged critters perform on "Big Valley," in order to keep pace with him now as television's "$6 Million Man." The new show has developed, for him, a cult following among youngsters.

"Big Valley," was popular enough to run for six seasons, and it was substantial enough to establish Majors' video reputation as the quiet stalwart ever ready to dispense the kind of help the waywards of the world need to get out of trouble.

But that western counterpart to "Bonanza" never established for Majors the kind of cult following he has now, especially among youngsters. He feels kids like the show because it "allows them a chance to root for a bonafide hero, the bionic man."

"It's a matter of hero worship among kids," he said in a recent interview, which he incorporated as part of a five-city promotion tour.

Majors admits he grew up "idolizing Gene Autry and Roy Rogers — even Captain Marvel. Steve Austin (the "$6 Million Man") is that kind of a hero, a man who never loses. I think the bionic man fulfills a lot of the fantasies that kids need. But the kids won't find it on television in the cops and robbers shows because so many of the characters are undercover types, and not really very heroic."

Much of Majors' cult worship comes from kids and while in Denver, he said, he tried to repay his constituency by visiting Children's Hospital. But a lot of women, who remember Majors' stoic charm on the "Big Valley," have shifted their sympathy to his new show.

With that kind of following, Majors' bionic man series has advanced into a third season, moved from Firday night to a much more choice Sunday night slot (where he has been beating out Cher, his top opposition), and catapulted the program into the top 10 in the Nielsen ratings. It is ABC's most popular series.

That kind of success has prompted the quiet, but out-spoken Majors to evoke the feeling that ABC Television and Universal Studios should be upping the budget for the "$6 Million Man."

"The filming schedule," he says, "is a tough grind. And it wasn't as if I wasn't doing enough. ABC, after I had finished 16 shows in 20 weeks found out that I was going to take a vacation before appearing on the Howard Cosell show. So ABC, in the ultimate display of corporate opportunism, asked me to also make a five-city promotion tour. So here I am."

He feels he is in a good bargaining position for next season, not only to make more money, but to force ABC and Universal to put out more money on the production shots featured on his show.

"I almost didn't come back this season because of a salary dispute with Universal," he said. "But now I've got a wedge. Hell, it's 12 years I've been in this business and it's time I started making some money. And I can't forget that the bionic man doll will be out around Christmas. The corporate being will make a wad of dough off that, but I won't see any of the revenue. But I know that because of the cult following the show has developed you can bet that I will get more money next season."

He's also peeved that his show doesn't even support the kind of budget "Kojak" has, yet the Telly Savalas' starrer runs behind in the ratings to "The $6 Million Man."

And with all the popularity of his show, Majors has another worry — fear, he says, that ABC will attempt a spinoff, featuring, of all things, a bionic woman, "to satisfy the women's libbers, no doubt."

"There's talk about it," he said, "and it would feature a bionic woman, the character Lindsay Wagner played earlier this season. That would dilute my character to the point Steve Austin would seem very ludicrous. Hell, we'd end up having bionic people all over the place. My attorneys are aware of this, and I am having them look into it."

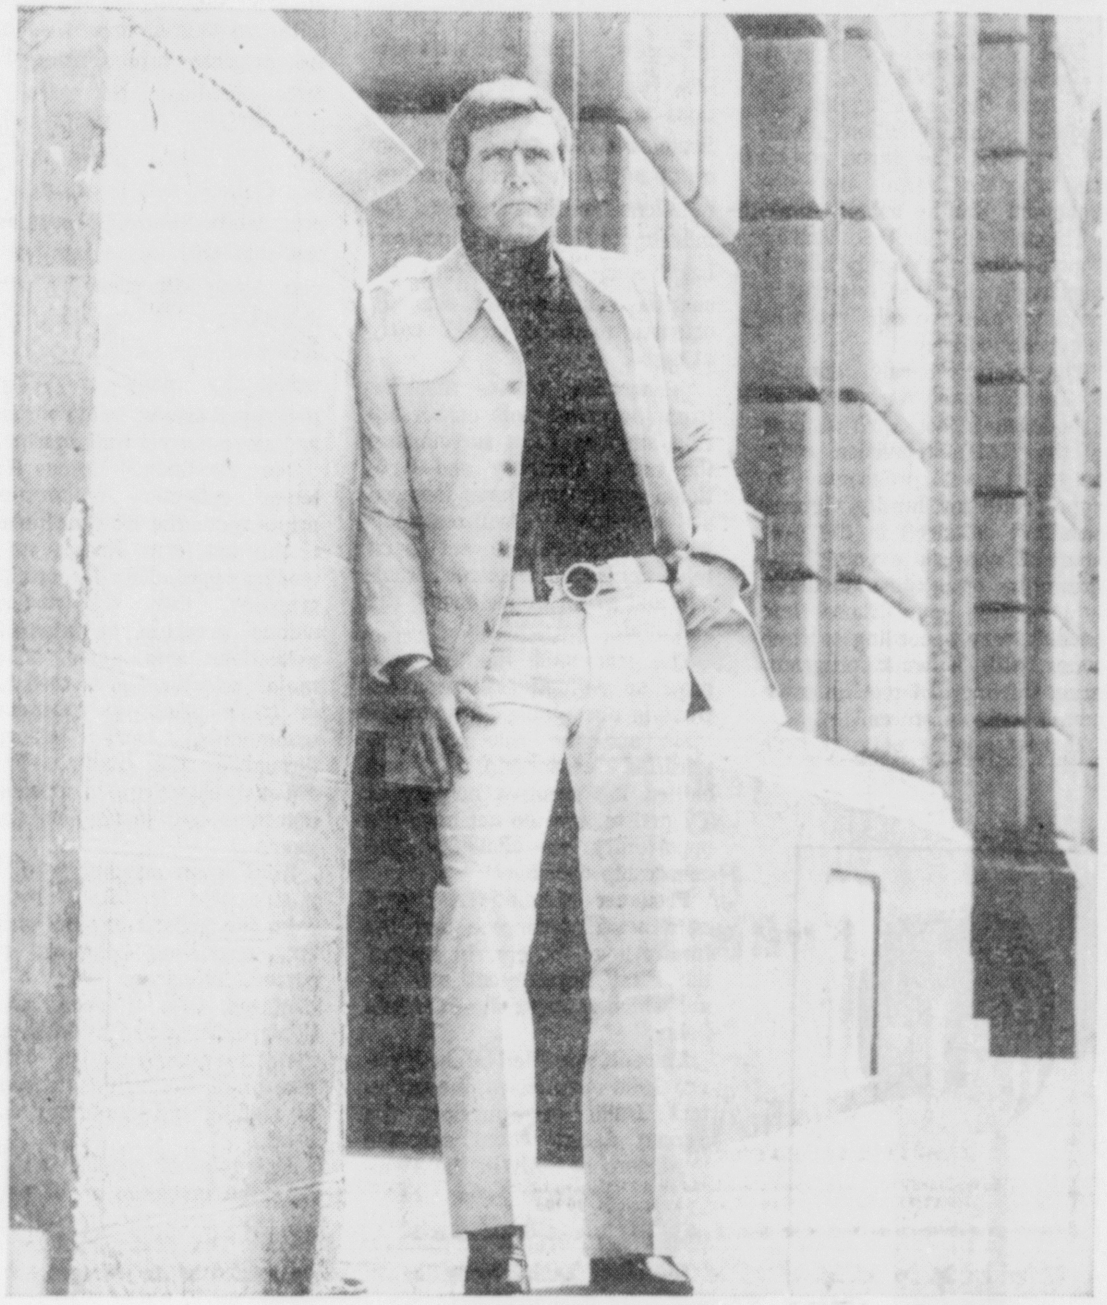

But not all that concerns Majors is talk of dire things like money and spinoffs. He said he was especially elated with a show on the series which he directed. It was his first time at the director's helm, and he described it as a bionic version of the Burt Reynolds' flick, "The Longest Yard."

"It dealt with football," he says, "and we had seven current and former pro football players featured."

Majors, even with all that masculinity, is no chauvinist, nor is he the only "bread winner in the family, not by a long shot. My actress - wife Farrah Fawcett - Majors is busy making the rounds as a series guest star and she does a number of commercials. Very pretty and talented girl."

He conceded, somewhat peevishly, that there have been rumors that the marriage is on the rocks. To dispel that, he took out ads in two Hollywood trade journals, featuring pictures of his wife reporting the fact that he is directing an upcoming version of his show and a "postscript noting that the rumors of our marital breakup are completely false."

All of which he relates in a calm, level tone suggestive of the stoicism that has gained him the biggest cult following on television.

A 'Family Hour' Battle Moves Into Courtroom

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A wide range of television creators have filed suit against the Federal Communications Commission and the three major networks to halt the controversial "family hour."

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court, called the family hour a censorship rule that has cast a "chilling pall over the creative television industry."

The "family" rule, adopted by the National Association of Broadcasters last April as part of the NAB's television code, says that programs inappropriate for family viewing shouldn't be aired in the first hour of network evening programming or in the immediately preceding hour. Those time periods vary according to time zones with network programming starting at 7 p.m. in some and 8 p.m. in others.

It now applies only to code subscribers—the three networks and 390 network-affiliated stations-and went into effect this September. It was drawn up after the Federal Communications Commission urged the industry to find ways of protecting young viewers from excessive violence and sexually oriented material on TV early at night.

"Censorship battles resulting from the prime-time censorship rule and the fears surrounding the rule's arbitrary and irrational application have fostered a dangerous 'self-restraint' which threatens to set back television's move toward realism and social importance," the suit said.

The suit said the networks have no defined standards for what is acceptable or unacceptable and the rule has "intensified censorship. . .and chilled the creative activity of TV artists, who do not have the opportunity to challenge the censorship decision."

Producer Norman Lear said at a news conference that the family hour "is clearly against the First Amendment and the act which brought the FCC into being."

The suit was filed by the Writers Guild of America, the Directors Guild of America, the Screen Actors Guild and the producers of "All in the Family," "Sanford and Son," "M-A-S-H," Barney Miller," "Phyllis," "Doc," "Rhoda," "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," and two canceled shows, "Fay" and "The Montesfuscos."

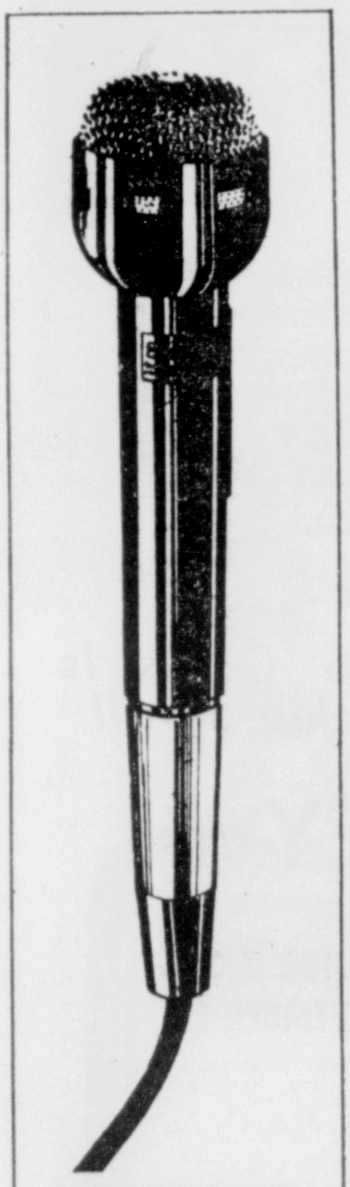

Named as defendants were the FCC, ABC, CBS, NBC and the broadcasters association. A total of 535 television stations belong to the NAB, which says all of them will have to subscribe to its television code and thus the family viewing rules in April. However, independent stations are exempted from the "family hour" rule until the start of the 1977 season.

The suit asks the court to enjoin the FCC from penalizing stations which fail to comply with the rule and to stop the networks from prohibiting the broadcast of controversial programs during the family hour.

The plaintiffs accused the defendants of violating First Amendment rights of freedom of speech, violating the Communications Act of 1934, violating the Administrative Procedures Act and Section One of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Lear, who produces such shows as "All in the Family," "Maude" and "Good Times," said, "There has been a constant battle going on between program practices on the one hand and our shows on the other hand as to what may or may not be suitable for public or family viewing. It's just a time-consuming, difficult situation in which a lot of very good ideas are probably unconsciously as well as consciously lost."

Original Print Sale at Nix

The George Nix Gallery, 318 N. Tejon St., will sponsor an exhibit and sale of approximately 600 original prints from the famed Ferdinand Roten Galleries collection on Friday and Nov. 15. Friday hours at the Nix Gallery will be noon to 8 p.m. while Saturday hours for the sale will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Along with prints by great masters of the 19th and 20th centuries can be seen works by many of today's American artists, some famous and some not yet well known.

The Ferdinand Roten Galleries' collection of original prints spans the 700-year history of this art form. Known as a leading specialist in original graphics, this art dealer's unique program of travelling exhibitions and sales brings major selections of a thousand or more prints to campuses, communities and galleries throughout the country. Over 400 such shows are mounted for museums and institutions each year.

What is an original print? It is one that is taken directly from the artist's original woodcut, engraving, etching, silk screen, lithograph (not to be confused with a photo offset lithograph), pulled by hand and done on quality paper. Often, control of the edition is made by signing and numbering each print.

Examples of graphic art predate the invention of oil painting and even the invention of paper. The first technique developed was the woodcut, which dates back about 2000 years. The Roten collection includes woodcuts that were made in the early 15th century.

By the late 15th century the art of engraving on metal had developed, followed, in the early 16th century, by the technique of etching. Lithography appeared in the 19th century. The most recent graphic art technique is that of the serigraph or silk screen.

Each of these basic art forms has been explored and developed through the centuries by some of the world's greatest artists—Durer, Van Dyke, Rembrandt, Goya, Daumier, Toulouse-Lautrec, Guaghin, Matisse, Picasso, Miro not only created masterpieces using graphic techniques, but played major roles in their development.

While important limited editions of outstanding graphic expressions by major artists in the Roten collection can cost many thousands of dollars, most of the works in the catalog cost under $100. Some of these original prints cost as little as $10. Even with today's inflation, a young collector, with very little money, can own an original work of art. The word "original" is of great importance to the Roten Galleries. What's more, there is really little reason to compromise, because originals can be had for nominal sums.

The nature of graphic media, which can produce different editions of original prints from the same work, accounts for this broad range of prices. An original by a modern master which is one of an unsigned large edition may sell for as little as $25, while a signed print from a limited edition by the same artist might cost $500 or more. Roten Galleries cites Joan Miro's work as such an example. He often allows a few hundred impressions from one of his lithography plates but signs, perhaps, only fifty. Artistically, they are of equal value, but those that are sold signed fetch a far higher price. Rarity, of course, is another part of the pricing.

Area residents have been invited to browse through this collection of original graphics.

CRAFT CORNER

A NEW WAY TO DO IT YOURSELF

By STEVE ELLINGSON

The spirit of giving which marks Christmas probably originated with those first gifts of love brought by the three Kings of the East. Use of the creche as a Christmas symbol dates back to St. Francis of Assisi. In 1224, he set up a manger scene in the hills above the village of Greccio, Italy, to dramatize the humble origins of Jesus. He built a real stable, filled with live animals, straw and hay. People dressed as the three kings, Mary, Joseph and shepherds stood among the cattle near a straw-filled manger, containing a lifelike wax image of the Christ Child.

Fame of the creche (as part of the Christmas celebration) spread and today in North America, its popularity increases each year. We start receiving requests for our Nativity Scene as early as April. This will be the 18th year we have been asked by the interdenominational Christ in Christmas committee to help them keep "Christ In Christmas."

The scene pictured is something any amateur can make in a few hours. It is two-thirds life-size (camels are over five feet tall). The figures come to you printed in rich, vibrant colors. All you need do is glue the pictures on plywood, then saw them out. The pictures are waterproof (like billboards) and may be used outdoors year after year in all kinds of weather.
